Piccadilly Pub Restaurant

Welcome to the Piccadilly Pub Restaurant

When the first Piccadilly Pub Restaurant opened in 1973, it was something special. We set out to serve hearty portions of the highest quality food and beverage in a warm, neighborhood atmosphere. We even squeezed our orange and grapefruit juices fresh, right at the bar. And we made sure our prices were very, very reasonable.

Not much has changed. Although we've added new Piccadilly Pub Restaurants in the years since, we still have the same commitment to quality and service. The Piccadilly Pub is a place where you can enjoy lunch, dinner, snacks or cocktails in friendly, comfortable surroundings. Our prices are still very reasonable and yes, we still squeeze our own juice.

Thanks for stopping by the Piccadilly Pub. We look forward to seeing you agains, and again.

In tribute to brother, woman bikes across nation

by Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It was not a quest made in self fulfillment. It was an adventure created from a dream, enriched by the memory of a brother she loved.

It was year ago July that Judy Arndt's twin brother, Thomas, died suddenly of a heart attck. With his death came a flood of tears and days of remorse. He was the brother who looked after his sister. He was an idol who returned her affection with care.

"He was the best brother, he always looked out for me," Arndt said this week in her South Main Street home. Fourteen months after his death, she finds it "terribly difficult" to speak of his importance in her life.

It was at Tom's funeral that Arndt decided to follow her brother's creed and accomplish a long-held goal. It would be her personal tribute to him, and it would complete a chapter in their lives that once entwined so closely.

"I decided right there that I was going to do something - something that would be special to me and to my brother," she said, speaking in a soft whisper. "My brother was always telling me to 'go ahead and do what you have to do.' He wanted me to accomplish things in my life, as he had."

Tom had twice sailed across the Atlantic. He had lived in lands most people dream of. Once, he invited his sister to stay with him in Sri Lanka. She accepted and admitted the daring expedition "was wonderful."

Now his memories served to guide her into this decision. She would bicycle across the country - by herself. But there was a second purpose to her goal.

Tom's wife, Celestine, had decided to establish a scholarship in his memory. The funds would be used to finance a student studying the culture and life of a third world nation. Tom, a graduate of Wesleyan University in Connecticut, served in the Agency for International Development at the state department. The fund would be created at his alma mater.

Through her efforts, Arndt would gather pledges to begin the scholarship. She talked with university officials who agreed to enlist pledges from Tom's fraternity brothers and classmates.

The rest was up to her.

She planned for a year. She scoured stores, searching for the best bicycle.

Cohasset man honored for his work at Rosie's Place

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

On Tuesday nights, many of Boston's homeless men make their way to the Men's Unit clinic at Pine Street Inn, where they know they can find a friend in Michael Howley.

During the past three years, this dynamic executive from Wood Way in Cohasset has spent one night per week as a volunteer at the clinic.

He commented, "I feel I have a responsibility to give something back for some of the good things I've been blessed with."

Bob Johansen, the clinic administrator called Howley "a godsend."

He explained, "Mike plays a pivotal role in the clinic. It's a busy place; about 120 people per night check in with him."

Johansen said Howley serves to screen patients, sometimes giving out aspirin or Maalox. He also helps to quell the tempers of impatient guests with his "wonderful sense of humor."

Howley said he has gotten to know some of Pine Street's more regular visitors.

"They're not all necessarily heavy drinkers," he said. "But for some reason or other, the circumstances of life are such that they can't take care of themselves.

"They're basically pretty fine people. Some of them are very nice."

Howley said, a number of years ago, most of Pine Street's patrons were alcoholics. Now, perhaps half are afflicted with mental illness.

"The basic philosophy at Pine Street Inn," he explained, "is to not judge. Out on the streets, people look down on them. We call them by their names and always refer to them as 'guests.'

"We give them the respect and basics that everyone has a right to," he said.

Howley added, "When I first went there, I was struck by how badly some treated themselves, the conditions they could get into; I was also struck by the wonderful care other people gave to them.

He explained, a lot of these people have circulatory problems, especially in their feet. "The nurses treat them so gently. It's amazing the care they get."

Most of the guests, he said, seem generally happy the facility is available. In good weather, the 350-bed refuge attracts enough guests to fill the inn. In cold weather, many more guests end up sleeping on the floor or in lounges.

Howley said, the clinic has gotten good cooperation from area hospitals. If the clinic gets a case that is is serious enough, the nurses send the patient to the hospital.

Furthermore, they try follow up such cases.

"They can call and talk about a specific person," he said. "Also, when medicines are prescribed, the patient can come to Pine Street for their medication. We have regular visitors, who come to pick up medication."

If patients neglect to show up for their medication, he said, nurses will go so far as to get out and

One year later

No major changes in Gloria's wake

It wasn't the disaster predicted within hours of its arrival, but Hurricane Gloria shook things up for a while.

The most profound problems occurred after the storm hit. Electrical wires laid askew across streets. Lumbering trees were felled into homes, cars and hundreds of yards. Boats were awash in the harbor. No one was injured.

What people will recall, long after the yards have been cleaned and the debris burned away, is the loss of electrical power. For several days, most residents were without the comfort of lighting, some had no heat or use of their electrical stoves.

For many, Hurricane Gloria does not evoke pleasant memories.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew recalled Friday, Sept. 26, 1985 as a day when town officials prepared for the worse. "Luckily," he said. "the greatest hassles were not the actual damage, but the inconveniences."

As town officials and Civil Defense personnel manned town hall and the fire station, Andrew recalled the Edison Co. trucks that responded within a day of the disaster.

"I guess you could say we were hard hit by the storm," he said this week. "But a lot of communities were hit harder. Other than our power problems, there was no emergency and no need for the emergency center to be opened on a continuing basis."

The town's emergency evacuation center was located at the high school gym. Supt. Stephen Hart recalled only a handful of residents who utilized the center prior to the passing of the storm.

Cafeteria workers, custodians and members of the Cohasset Explorer's Group manned the center and its kitchen facilities.

"We had buses prepared to go," Hart said, in anticipation of evacuating shoreline residents. "But we never had to utilize them."

Cots from the Deer Hill School were brought over to the high school for overnight accomodations.

"Everything, as I remember, went fairly smooth," he said. "No major changes were made to our evacuation center plans as a result of our experiences with Hurricane Gloria."

It was later learned that the sewer pump generator at the high school wasn't functioning correctly. That posed no problem because of the limited amount of people at the school that day. But the pumping station generator has since been replaced.

Other than the lack of electricity, the other immediate dilemma facing residents was the debris caused in the wake of Gloria. For week, crews from

Little Harbor study

John Crandell, a resident of Nichols Road, has suggested a citizens' committee be formed to oversee the proposed Little Harbor study.

In a letter to selectmen, Crandell inquired about the status of the state study which has been proposed to investigate the cause of odor and pollution problems in Little Harbor. He noted that algae, which is the presumed cause, may not be the "culprit" which resulted in the longtime problem.

He suggested a "committee of interested citizens (be formed) to keep them (neighbors) informed of the study's progress and to assist in the expenditure of the $40,000 authorized by town meeting." Town meeting voted in April to appropriate the funds to complete the environmental study.

Crandell added he would like to volunteer his services on a citizens committee.

No health problem

Acting on a complaint filed by Robert Wirth of Red Gate Lane, the health agent found no health-related problems caused by horses at Wheelwright Park.

In his report written Sept. 10, Dr. Joseph Godzik said he visited the park to investigate a complaint about excessive dust generated by the horses in the park. "In my opinion," he stated, "the dust does not present a health problem."

He instructed users of the park to hose down the dirt if the conditions make the surface unusually dry.

He also inspected the park regarding the amount of manure ground into the wood chips which Wirth suggested may pose a health risk.

Dr. Godzik talked with Sally Davenport of the Cohasset Riding Club and recommended "removing the manure which may be sitting on stop of the wood chips" to prevent any possible health problems.

Primary election totals

According to Town Clerk Frances Marks, 14 percent of the total number of registered voters cast ballots in last week's state primary.

From a total of 4,755 registered voters, 669 showed at the polls last Tuesday.

"We were thinking low, so this wasn't any surprise," Marks said, noting similar numbers in neighboring communities.

The new electronic ballot counters assisted in a quick tally, she noted, although the significant number of write-ins added to their effort. "Every time we get a write-in, we have to separate it and number it and then feed it into the machine. We were done in a couple of hours, but it would have been less time without all the write-ins," she explained.

Special registration hours

In anticipation of the November state election, the town clerk's office will hold special voter registration hours.

Residents may register Saturday, Oct. 4 from noon to 8 p.m. at the town clerk's office at town hall. The following Tuesday, Oct. 7, there will be registration throughout the day from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. at the town clerk's office.

Anyone may register any other day during regular town hall business hours.

The state election will be held Tuesday, November 4 with polling hours from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the town hall auditorium.

Railroad meeting Sept. 25

All Cohasset citizens are invited to attend the public involvement meeting to be conducted by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) September 25, in the Town Hall, at 8 p.m. to discuss the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project.

At the meeting, MBTA representatives will present an overview of the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project, provide current information on project activities, and discuss the environmental review of the Project as it relates to Cohasset and suggestions for station sites in Cohasset.

The MBTA is proposing the restoration of commuter service to Boston on the existing Greenbush Line right-of-way. The MBTA is currently examining possible environmental impacts of the Project and is evaluating a combination of rail and/or bus alternatives to identify and develop the most appropriate project to meet the transportation needs of the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts.

look for them, rather than just saying, 'Oh well...'

According to Howley, Pine Street has also received good cooperation from the police, who nowadays recognize alcoholism as less of a crime and more of a sickness.

"The police used to bring the alcoholics to jail to dry out," he observed, "but now, they bring them to the Pine Street Inn, where they can get counseling and help."

Despite Boston's economic boom, Howley said he believes while the rich are getting richer, the poor are getting poorer.

"It just seems the gap is widening," he said. "I've heard of guests recovering; but I haven't gotten involved in the follow-up.

"The big thing they try to do," he said, "is get a room or apartment."

Howley said condo conversion has drastically diminished the chances of guests finding accomodations.

But, the Pine Street Inn, he added, is purchasing housing in South Boston and will rent rooms to recovering guests who are getting jobs and getting back into society.

Running his own employment agency, Jobs Unlimited Inc. of Boston, Howley said he has contemplated helping the recovering homeless. However, he explained, "Most of my clients are lawyers and banks."

Howley's experience as a top executive has helped him as a volunteer at the clinic.

"He seems to be on top of situations," Johansen said. "The guests really respond to him.

"They look foward to seeing him on Tuesday nights; he knows them and they know him. They trust him, and that's an important part of working here."

Johansen added, "Mike works at an intense position; other people at the same level usually burn out after about one year, but he has been here for three years."

Howley said he has no plans to discontinue his service at the clinic.

He added, with an increasing number of homeless people in need of help, "there's a need to open the lines of communication to people who don't get involved, to let them know about this problem.

"I wish everyone in Cohasset could spend some time there, and know how fortunate they are," he said.

Howley said of his experience at the clinic, he has been awed at the ability the nurses and volunteers have for caring for their fellow man.

And he has been especially impressed with the spirit of a lot of the young people who have volunteered.

"It never ceases to amaze me," he said. "There are a lot of Mother Theresas over there."

Indeed, there are.

New logo needed for Art Center

The South Shore Art Center has launched a contest to find a new logo.

Artists are asked to submit design ideas to the Center, currently at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, by December 1, 1986. The new logo will be used on all promotional materials, letterheads and advertising. A $100 prize will be given for the winning design.

All artwork must be carea-ready using only one color and no half-tones. The artist may specify the color to be used.

The new logo will go along with the new building around the corner from its present site in Cohasset Center and the new image. The new 8,000 square foot facility which should open in 1987 will house four large studio/classrooms with better teaching facilities, a central two-story gallery space with professional exhibit lighting, a gallery/members room for community functions, an expanded gift shop and more storage and administrative space.

The new logo should reflect the changes that are currently taking place within the Center which has become recognized as a major cultural influence on the visual arts on the South Shore. The Center has greatly expanded its young artist department by taking its young artist classes and workshops out to other communities of the South Shore.

The design ideas should be submitted to Joni Jensen at the South Shore Art Center. The new logo will be chosen by the Center's Board of Directors. For further information, call the Center, 383-9548.

There are practical reasons for buying a Defiant woodstove. And there are emotional reasons. The former deal with heat. The latter with warmth.

Load it with wood, strike a match and let it roar. This 60,000 BTU/hr. powerplant will heat an entire home. And with a long steady burn, you couldn't ask for a more practical heating alternative.

the highway and tree and park departments worked to clear streets. They scoured every street in town, breaking off severed tree limbs and hauling debris from neighborhoods to the landfill.

Luckily, Andrew recalled, the state allowed all communities to burn the fallen debris. "You couldn't have believed the two piles of debris the town picked up from the streets. If we hadn't been able to burn it, it would have just about filled the entire landfill," he noted.

Now, a year later, the town is ready to receive reimbursement from the State and Federal government for costs of over-time for the fire, highway and tree and park departments. That check, anticipated momentarily by the town, will amount to about $55,000.

"The state reimbursed us for about 80 percent of the costs of clean-up," Andrew said. "We picked up about 20 percent, although a lot of the over-time had been prebudgeted."

Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr was assisted by son Philip and daughter-in-law JoAnne. Twelve members of the Explorers Group manned locations throughout the town, including the Evacuation Center, the Highway Dept. and the fire station. As a result of their involvement last year, JoAnne Lehr said the group has expanded to 20 members. The group is trained in emergency procedures.

The real scoop from Eastwick

By Claire McDonough
Mariner Correspondent

A few weeks ago we brought you an amusing story about a Scituate resident who had become so flustered when she realized the man next to her at the Cohasset ice cream parlor was actor Jack Nicholson that she put her change in her hand and thrust her ice cream cone in her purse.

This bit of trivia has received an inordinate amount of attention.

The Herald reprinted it.

The National Enquirer used it, but changed the actor to Paul Newman.

Syndicated commentator Paul Harvey recounted it on the radio, but said it happened to someone who met Robert Redford.

So did a major t.v. network.

The Globe and the Boston Business News called it "apocryphal."

Only I knew the identity of the protagonist, and I was sworn to secrecy, despite threats by certain individuals to stake me to an ant hill and pour honey on my body if I didn't reveal my source.

me at work to tell me that a Don Levy from Warner Brothers wanted me to call him collect.

After a few lighthearted remarks to the effect that "government be darned. I'm off to the brights lights, tinsel and shallow glamour," I forgot about it. You can't make a collect call—or contact an operator for any reason—from a State House phone. And furthermore, I was busy.

I worked till about 8:30 that night, and when I got home the Dragon (remember the time difference) said that Mr. Levy had just called again.

I called him at once, and he informed me that I should not be upset by reports that the story was untrue or had happened to several other people.

Levy, who is the publicist for The Witches of Eastwick, checked with Jack Nicholson who remembers the incident vividly. It happened to him, and the account in the Mariner was accurate in all respects.

So there.

And now you know the rest of the story.

School committee briefs . . .

Horace Mann grants ratified

The committee voted to ratify the guidelines set for the distribution of the Horace Mann grants. The teachers' association will vote to ratify the distribution guidelines at their meeting Oct. 8. After that, details of the distribution of the $12,000 allotment will be announced.

The Horace Mann grants are part of the state law, Chapter 188, passed last year. Under the provisions of the state education reform act, the local school committee and the teachers' union must agree on the distribution of these funds. The grants will be disbursed to teachers for specific educational goals such as curriculum development and course enrichment.

National merit recognition

The school committee took time Monday night to honor the eight seniors named to the National Merit Scholarship Commended Students list for this year. They include: Robert A. Durkin, Scott F. Fitzsimmons, Lisa M. Gallagher, Lee T. Lacks, Nancy E. Lincoln, Nicole Y. Prisble, Susan H. Riley, and David R. Thomas.

There were two students who, based on their PSAT scores from October, 1985, are now included in the National Merit Scholarship Semi-finals. They are: James Patrick Walsh and Eric Maki.

"It's very nice to have this many people receive this honor," Supt. Stephen Hart remarked. The next step will be for the national finalists to be named from the current list in April.

Budget transfer request

The school committee voted to request the advisory committee approve two budget transfers. The first is a transfer of $1,500 to cover the additional actual cost of purchasing two school buses. Town meeting in April approved the $60,000 appropriation, but the actual purchase price was $1,500 over that amount.

The second request will be a $4,244 tuition reimbursement to a vocational educational high school. According to Supt. Hart, there is one student from Cohasset who has chosen not to attend the South Shore Vocational Technical High School. He will attend a school outside Cohasset's district. According to state law, the student's home town school system must be responsible for providing the tuition payment.

Hart explained that at South Shore VoTech, there is no curriculum in the allied health fields, and if a local student wants to pursue those courses, he must attend another vocational school. In addition, he said, the school requires the reimbursement in one sum. There can be no monthly payments.

The transportation is handled by the student's parents, he added. The tuition reimbursement is required by state law, Hart noted.

The board voted to approve the two transfer requests to the advisory committee.

Board approves aids policy

The committee voted to adopt the state-recommended policy regarding school attendance by students with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

According to Supt. Hart, there are several school systems who have already adopted the policy developed by the state Department of Public Health (DPH). "It is a reasonable policy which protects the confidentiality of the student," Hart said. Under the policy, the student's primary care physician must notify the school principal, the individual teacher and the school nurse about the student's condition. That physician will also recommend how each individual student will be handled, with the guidelines established by this policy.

Committee members agreed the proposed policy represents "a reasoned approach" to the health problem. Essentially, the policy states that "most school-aged children and adolescents infected with (AIDS) should be allowed to attend school without restrictions and with the approval of the child's physician. Based on the present data, the benefits of unrestricted school attendance of these children outweigh the possibility that they will transmit the infection in the school environment."

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE YOUR HOUSE TO SELL?

Did you ever wonder why some houses sell so quickly and others stay on the market for months, even years, before someone buys them. Price is important, and so is the way a home is marketed. Just as important, however, is basic appeal.

Once the listing agreement is signed, your Realtor will give you some suggestions about simple ways you can help people fall in love with your house. If you follow his or her advice, you will help set the stage. It may mean sprucing up the yard, painting the exterior trim, neatening the closets, scrubbing down the kitchen and baths, or placing some pretty flowers in a vase on your dining room table. Your Realtor's job is to market your home and to make sure the buyers see it. The seller's job is to make sure that we show our buyers looks as good as it possibly can. If you maximize the appeal of your house, you will minimize the length of time it will take us to sell it.

If you're planning a move, contact the professionals at HOME CENTER REALTY. Call us at 749-8833 or stop by our offices at 57 Water St., Hingham.

New hours at Osgood

A change in school hours . . .hopefully, school hours at the Joseph Osgood are now firm as follows:
Grades 1,2,3 - 8:55 a.m. - 2:55 p.m.
Kindergarten A.M. - 8:55 a.m. - 11:35 a.m.
Kindergarten P.M. - 12:15 p.m. - 2:55 p.m.

1. Please adjust your anticipation of bus time in keeping with the 10 minute change as indicated above.

2. Please do not deliver your children to school in the morning prior to 8:45 a.m. Appropriate supervision is not available prior to that time. Should you drive your child to school, please leave the youngster at the main entrance.

These changes are necessary in order to have a better busing system. The children will benefit from the minor inconveniences this may cause parents. Please be patient.

Artist of the Month program

Formerly called "The Picture Lady" program, the new "Artist of the Month" program at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools is in need of volunteers.

The once-a-month, five times a year enrichment presentation involves a parent-volunteer bringing an art work to the school, showing it to the class, talking about the artist and doing a hands-on project with the children. All art, research and supplies are provided by the PSO (Parent School Organization).

At Deer Hill, this is an after school program (students will take the late bus home). At Osgood, the "Artist of the Month" will be presented during regular class time.

Boys, girls and parent-volunteers greatly enjoyed this artistic experience last year. More volunteers are needed in order to expand the program. An art or teaching background is not necessary.

To help, please call Yvonne Prisble (383-6081) or Sue Reardon (383-9203).

There will be a meeting for anyone interested in being an "Artist of the Month" presented at 7:30 p.m. October 8 at Yvonne Prisble's home, 60 Jerusalem Rd.

Spanish language aid needed

HELP! As you are cleaning out the debris from your children's rooms after summer, please consider "recycling" the following items for Mrs. Green in the CHS Spanish Department:

—Mad Libs, either used or unused. These seem to be impossible to find now.

—Barbi, Ken, etc. dolls with clothing or other accessories.

Spanish classes are using these items for vocabulary practice in the foreign language. If you can help, please bring items to CHS office.

Reading game winner

Cohasset's Erik Waal was a winner in The Reading Game's recent PRIDE contest held at their Braintree location. Erik, a seventh grader at the junior high school, received his award in the 7th-12th grade category for completing 25 1/2 hours of pleasure reading over a three-week period.

The contest helped to celebrate the end of a successful summer session and to encourage pleasure reading by the students. PRIDE stands for Personal Reading for Interest, Discovery and Enjoyment and is the goal of The Reading Game.

☐Amy Elizabeth Urmson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Urmson; and Julie May Hoogeveen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hoogeveen, were named to the dean's list at Wheaton College for the spring semester of 1986.

☐Congratulations to Kathleen R. Foulke, who was named the executive director of The Education Fund. The Fund is a private, non-profit loan guarantee agency in Boston. She was previously the administrative assistant to the headmaster at Thayer Academy in Braintree, so more than a few Cohassetites will know her. The Education Fund that she is working for is responsible for administering the Parent Loans for Elementary and Secondary Schools.

☐Hats off to the loyal Cohasset fans that made the road trip to Norwell last Saturday to cheer on the Skippers! They surely gave us reason to applaud, the game was an exciting one! If you missed it, catch the next one (Friday night in Millis) as the team sure is great.

☐The Cohasset League of Women voters is hosting a cocktail party for new members at 7:30 Thursday night (tonight) at the First Parish House on North Main Street. If any of you are interested in becoming a member of the League, call Cheryl Bugley at 383-9482.

☐Have you see Sean McCarthy "around town" sporting his new "I Humbled the Humble One" T-shirt? Good work, Sean!

☐Sandy and Bob Kingsland are a busy couple these days! Their daughter, Haley Smith Kingsland, was born at St. Margaret's Hospital on August 17, and they have been beaming with pride ever since! Haley's grandparents live quite a distance away, Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kingsland live in Laselva Beach, California and Mrs. Audrey Smith lives in Saginaw, Michigan. Bet there are already a few trips booked to Cohasset already!

☐A potential classmate of Haley's was born at South Shore Hospital on September 4. Brian and Therese James are the happy parents of a baby girl! With all of the births that we are seeing now, we had better make plans to build a new school!

☐Can you believe that its time for our own Mary Jeanette Murray to run for re-election again? This will be her 6th term, and her record speaks for itself, she's grand! Who knows where she gets all of her energy to devote the time and expertise that she always does...

☐Congratulations to John Larkin Thompson, who was awarded President Reagan's Private Sector Initiatives Award for exemplary summer jobs for youth activities in 1985. Mr. Thompson was one of 98 honorees nationally who were cited for their efforts to find jobs in the private sector for needy youth. He found jobs for 66 Boston-area teens, within Blue Cross and Blue Shield, the company that he is the President of. This program's mission is to increase private sector training and job opportunities for the nation's economically disadvantaged and long term unemployed by building public-private partnerships of business, government labor, education and community groups.

☐Do you have one day a month to spare? If so, why not consider driving cancer patients for treatments at medical facilities? If you can be of help, call the American Cancer Society at 583-8515.

☐The Cohasset Boosters Club has a major fund-raiser that should be fun for all...the members all have raffle tickets that will sell for $10 each. The total number available is 150 and there will be nine drawings of $25 each and one final drawing of $500. The drawing began last week at the Norwell game (the winner was Pat Laugelle) and the final drawing will take place at the Thanksgiving game. A nifty way to support a hard-working club!

☐Congratulations to Paul Barry Jr, who was among the guests honored by Notre Dame Academy at an appreciation dinner held on Sept. 23. It was a thank you to all parents who actively participated in the fund raising efforts for the school.

Grant for hazardous waste collection

Under "Operation Clean Sweep", the Mass. Dept. of Environmental Mangement has awarded the town of Hingham funding in the amount of $5,979.67 to help with the cost of this fall's household hazardous waste collection. The town budgeted $15,000 for the fall collection last spring.

Originally scheduled for last September, the collection will now likely be held in October or November. The state will be contracting a hauler for towns holding collections this fall, and will notify towns of the dates of their collections later this month.

This year, Hingham's collection will be held jointly with Cohasset, at a central location in Hingham. Residents of the two towns will have an opportunity to properly dispose of such household chemicals as unused drain, oven, radiator, and cesspool cleaners; photo and pool chemicals; furniture and metal polish; rust preventatives; wood strippers and most preservatives; oil-based paint; paint thinner; solvents; degreasers; gasoline; anti-freeze; brake and transmission fluid; pesticides; and some herbicides.

The following can not be accepted: aerosol cans; herbicides containing 2,4,5T/Silvex; wood preservatives containing pentachlorophenol; gas cylinders; ammunition; water reactive, explosive, or biologically active substances; and latex paint. Latex paint can be brought to the landfill. Used motor oil can be brought to any establishment which sells motor oil, for recycling.

More complete listings of substances which will be accepted, as well as the date and place of the collection, will be publicized through flyers, posters, local newspapers, and cable TV channel 3 once the date has been set. Residents can call 749-0642 for more information.

An appreciated group

It depends on what town or city in which you reside. It depends on the person you talk with. Everyone has an opinion on education, the public school system and the teachers who comprise that system.

Years ago, there was not a more dignified profession than teaching. It was an honored position in our society. Mothers urged daughters to attend college. It was a secure career, revered by the public, and without the hazards of other employment.

If questioned whether they would want their son to go into teaching or law enforcement, most parents would say teaching. There is little inherent physical risk in the job. The pay is okay, the hours are great, and chances are you won't get fired.

Times change and the public school system was no longer attracting the intellectual "stars." The pay was too low in comparison to new industry such as computers, manufacturing and sales. The lure of money veered many away from a career in education.

Public schools were in danger of losing whatever quality they had retained throughout the political unrest of the sixties and the economic upheaval of the seventies.

Many feel we have come full circle in the eighties. We have passed the challenge of education revolution in the 1960's, and we realize that to maintain quality teachers, you must not simply offer words of encouragement and respect. A substantial paycheck must follow.

Cohasset is known throughout this educationally-aware state as a public school standout. We pay our teachers a fair salary. And along with that monetary reward, is the recognition that we offer.

We believe our teachers are good and they are dedicated. And we want them to know that.

The parents of this community deserve equal accolades for their participation in this system. They send their children off to school with a great foundation. Our children are bright and self-assured. They want to learn, which any teacher will admit is half the battle.

Look at our statistics. The vast majority of our students go onto a secondary education. They have this goal in mind, and it's up to the teachers to further stimulate this process.

The parents of Cohasset's students deserve applause for their continued interest in the school system and the children who participate.

The teachers of our community should be recognized as talented, dedicated employees. Together, they are continuing the tradition set many years ago in this town. It is a history that will continue.

Cohasset must provide the best affordable education for every student - advanced or special needs. That is our demand, a challenge set forth each September.

Arndt pays tribute to her twin. . .

She planned for a year. She scoured stores, searching for the best bicycle. She decided on the course she would follow, what she would bring, how much money she needed.

And in April, from the Pacific shoreline of Astoria, Oregon, Arndt set off on her mission. In July, she was back home in Cohasset, settled among the antiques and paintings of her late parents' retirement home.

It had been, she said convincingly, the most positive experience of her life.

"I have so many stories to tell," she said, her face lighting up in a wide smile. "I can't tell you about all the wonderful people I met and the places I saw. All I can say is that our impression of Americans as selfish, uncaring people is wrong. I never met one person who wasn't kind to me. Americans are the most generous, caring people anywhere."

It didn't matter what state she settled in for the night, people reached out to her. Wearing a t-shirt that said 'Bike Across America for My Brother,' Arndt was offered money, food and shelter wherever she traveled.

"People would come up to me and stick $5 in my hand. Most of the time, I just asked for pledges and got their names and addresses. But some people wanted to give me money right away," she recalled, smiling again. "One couple in Indiana pledged ten cents a mile."

With the 4,550 miles she crossed, that meant a single check of $450.

Strangers would marvel at the courage of this single woman. "I guess it did take courage, especially when I'd be riding for 70 or 80 miles a stretch without seeing another human being or a house. But after completing so many miles without any incidents, your confidence builds up. After a while, I knew I could make it," she said.

An admitted physical fitness "nut", Arndt thought she was well prepared for the trek. She started out doing 35 miles a day, messaging aching calf muscles at night. But within several days Arndt noticed that, quite unintentionally, she was cycling 90 miles at a stretch.

She was never an egotistical type. Her brother often provided the impetus for her to succeed. Yet, even without his physical presence, she felt a need to strive forward, a sense she could not fail.

"I truly believe that Tom was with me every mile of this trip. It was if he was guiding me - that I couldn't fail," she said, resting her head in her hands as she sat at the dining room table.

"One of the most remarkable things was that my bike never had a single problem, not even a flat tire. More than four thousand miles and nothing went wrong! That's unheard of. Yet, I truly believe it was because I had Tom and God on my side," she added.

Not a traditional church goer, Arndt said when she arrived at her final destination in Maine, a spiritual awakening hit as hard as if she careened into a wall. She embraced her bike—her best friend along the trip-and she cried. As she wheeled slowly into the coastal northern town, she wept silently as she passed familar landmarks, flower gardens, dirt paths.

She was home.

"The first thing I did was enter the chapel there and sit down. You've got to understand, I'm not that type. But since I've been back, I've experienced this real spiritual dimension. I thank God for getting me home safely," she stated.

Now that her goal is complete, Arndt must once again face the struggles of life without her brother. But her travels this summer, the sites she saw, and the warmth she experienced, are a comfort to her.

"I am at peace with myself now," she said, her voice barely audible. "And I know that Tom has found that peace, too."

Music is best medicine for elders

To the Editor:

There is an old saying that "Laughter is the best medicine," which is certainly true in most situations. But over the past ten years, during which I have spent as much of my time as possible trying to help with the needs of our senior citizens, our most important citizens, I have discovered that music is the best medicine, especially when it comes to the ill, the frail, the lonely, confused, fearful, handicapped, sightless and hopeless persons who are confined to rooms, small apartments, nursing facilities, etc. Music leads to laughter, which means two "best medicines." The more, the merrier!!

This was proven to be true this past May when an anonymous couple donated an old, old fashioned "player piano" to all the wonderful residents of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home in Cohasset. This magnificent player piano, which can be operated manually, as well as electrically, has provided these very special residents with more enjoyment and laughter and companionship than I can adequately describe. As a matter of fact, in my opinion, this very generous gift means more to these wonderful ladies and gentlemen than if they had won Megabucks! I cannot describe the expression on their faces and in their eyes as they listen to the "oldie" music coming from his piano on a daily basis, with the help of Nancy and Cynthia, the activity directors.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation and graditude, through the Mariner, to the couple who donated this priceless gift, and to the Harmony House in Pembroke who completely renovated this wonderful instrument and also donated some thirty (30) old fashioned "music rolls" to be used with the piano.

I also wish to express my sincere appreciation to Marshfield's former Deputy Fire Chief, Louis Cipullo, who donated another 35 old, old "rolls." As a matter of fact, one of the rolls was dated 1912! I have known "Luigi" for many years, but I never realized he was that old!! But this wonderful person is always there, ready, willing and able to give or help whenever he is asked, and more often without even being asked.

And thank you very much to Benny, Mike and Walter for helping deliver and unload this 700 pound "beauty." Within 30 minutes of the delivery of these beautiful gifts, the day room was filled with residents, most of whom were in wheelchairs, and they were absolutely delighted with the music, to say the least. It was amazing to observe how familiar they were with each other and every song and tune.

There is no dobut in my mind that this beautiful gift will provide many, many years of enjoyment to the present and future residents of Cohasset Knoll, and I thank the Director, Mr. O'Grady, for accepting this gift on behalf of the residents. Wouldn't it be wonderful if every nursing facility could have one of these player piano's! Music IS the best medicine for these special people. They deserve it.

Nine percent rate cut seen for customers

The Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) has approved Eastern Edison Co. plans to reduce the typical residential customer's bill by nine percent.

Based on new fuel and oil conservation adjustments approved by the DPU, a residential customer using 500 kilowatt-hours (kwh) of electricity per month will see a drop of $4.53 per month from August's bills.

"These revisions are effective Sept. 1. Savings realized by Eastern Edison Co. through the continued availability of low cost oil and the return to service of several more efficient generating units, previously out of service on scheduled maintenance, are being passed along to our customers," said Arthur A. Hatch, Eastern Edison president.

Eastern Edison Co. provides electric service to more than 160,00 customers in the Brockton and Fall River areas. It is one of two retail electric utilities of Eastern Utilities Associates (EUA), an investor-owned electric utility holding company. Other EUA companies are Blackstone Valley Electric, Montaup Electric Co. and EUA Service Corp.

A 'marvelous' conversation with Marvin Hagler

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

"It's simply maarvelous."

Marvelous Marvin Hagler of Hanover would like to meet world reknown comedian Billy Crystal some day and shake the hand of "Fernando" who with these words, "You look marvelous" has forever coined a phrase in comic history.

"That man is making alot off of me. I'd like to meet him," laughs the man whose legal name is Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

Whether boxing fan or not, the average South Shore person knows the name Marvelous Marvin Hagler. He is the undisputed middleweight champion of the world and in name recognition marvels that of Muhammed Ali.

In fact, Marvin notes it was his legion of boxing fans who nicknamed him 'Marvelous" during the late 1960s when Muhammed Ali drew thousands of fans with his poetry-like predictions. Marvin was then an amateur fighter out of Brockton.

This interview will not dwell too much on boxing. Marvin declined to discuss his future fighting plans with one Sugar Ray Leonard. Some announcement of date and fighting location will be set within the next few weeks.

However whether his next fight is with Leonard or Thomas Hearns or both, one feels that 1987 will be the year Marvin draws the line between Marvin Hagler the father, businessman and philanthropist and Marvin Hagler, the boxer.

Suffice to say it is likely at this time next year Marvin will be found full-time in Hanover, managing his new store Marvelous Marvin Hagler Sportswear Novelty Shop on Rte 53 in Hanover, near the Hanover Mall.

Marvin Hagler is an easy man to talk to. He is funny, articulate and cares very much about the world around him. Throughout the interview, family life and education were words often discussed. Family is extremely large in Marvin's life. Why he settled in Hanover has very much to do with a family-type atmosphere.

Marvin came up in life the hard way, working very hard to be the very best. Nothing came easy to him as he has and continues to work very hard to achieve greatness.

Growing up in the Philadelphia area, Marvin came to Brockton when he was 16 years old. Growing up in a city, he asked himself how he could make it in the world. He played football, basketball and baseball but felt he was too small to go pro.

"Nothing is guaranteed when you enter a sport. God blessed me with my hands. I was very fortunate. I believe today that I was born to be a fighter, a champ. But that success took many, many years of dedication, determination and sacrifice."

"My mother once said to me, 'You gained a career but I lost a son.' That means an awful lot to me. I think it's time for me to put things back together," said Hagler.

Coming to Hanover four years ago, Hagler says, was a step in the right direction towards stability and peace of mind.

Suffice to say if Marvin were to stop working today, he would be able to support his family from his past boxing and endorsement earnings.

Marvin Hagler could settle in any community around the world and be able to afford it. But he chose Hanover as a family-type community which is reasonably accessible to the Brockton and Boston areas.

"We love Brockton and Brockton was my starting place. But I wanted to find a community which was low key, a great place to bring up a family and a community which cared very much about kids."

"We looked at 32 communities outside of Brockton and around New England. We wanted a town which had a good school system, a town which had a good sports program for the kids but yet a town where I could relax. Privacy means very much to me.

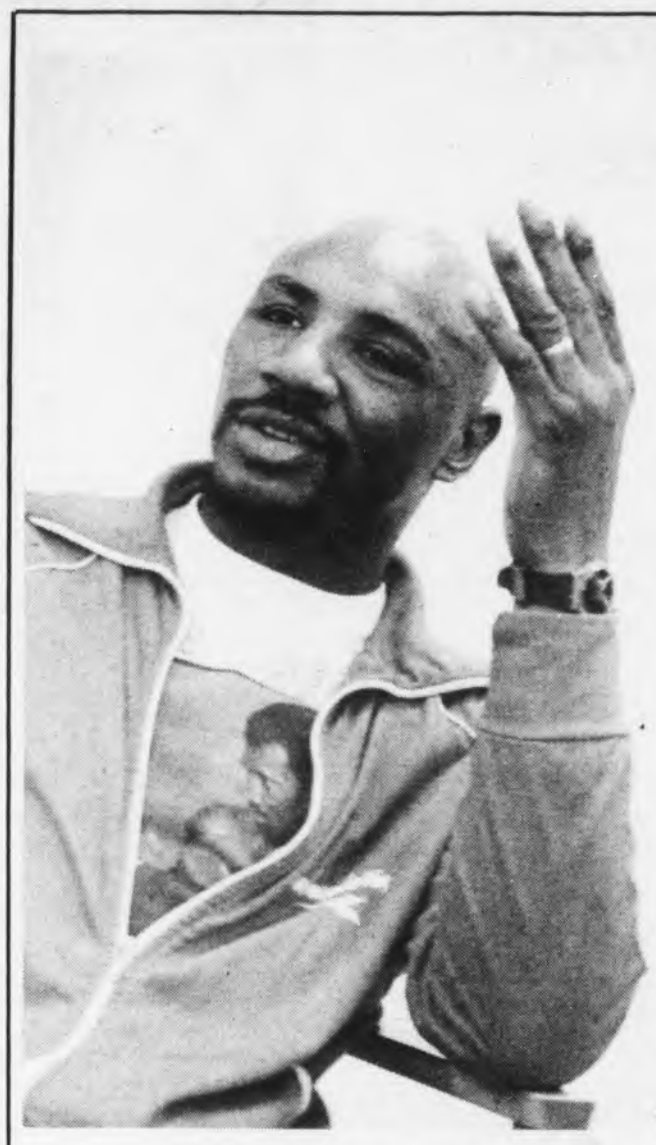
"We have found Hanover to be low-key but very positive. They have accepted us here and I am very happy here. The people do alot for kids. The police are very interested in helping the kids with a boys club or a drug awareness fair."

"There have been rumors about me looking for a house in other communities such as Cohasset. But I'd like to put those rumors to rest. I love Hanover and it is my home."

"There are those people who come up to my house for autographs and that can get to be a heartache. But I feel there are other places for people to meet me here (at the store) or at the gym.

"You know, growing up I thought I would never meet a star. Now, I'm working to bring the stars to the people. I would like to be more visible with the kids and I would also like little kids to see other stars," said Hagler.

That is why an all-out effort will be made to draw these name people - Bo Derek, Punky Brewster,



Marvelous Marvin Hagler

Tony Danza and Burt Young (of "Rocky" fame) to Marvin's new store grand opening next month.

Though he has attained boxing greatness, Marvin notes his life goals are not yet complete. He notes he has always wanted to be a successful businessman and he wants to finish his education. His interest in movie acting has also turned up a notch.

He is a trustee at Massasoit Community College and has started a scholarship fund there but notes he may soon start courses in business administration there.

Boxing has been very good to Marvin but in the same breath he notes life has been tough. "Sure it's been tough but it made me that much tougher in handling situations.

"It's opened up doors for me but I want to be more than just a boxer. Take somebody like Joe DeNucci (now a state legislator from Newton and the Democratic Party candidate for State Auditor. I envy him."

"I think the stereotype about fighters is they can't talk and they can't think. I want to be different. All fighters are not like that," said Hagler.

When asked if the decision to soon retire was the toughest decision in his life to date, Marvin said, "I got a tremendous amount of mail, some for, some against me retiring. But in the end I had to listen to myself. When I'm done boxing, there will be no regrets that I didn't face somebody.

"I'm still growing but I realize in time it is time to go on to something else," he said.

And the Hanover store, he said, is the first step toward that direction. Hagler noted he wants to have time to devote to drug awareness fairs or to aid the police. Previously, it was training for another fight or previously scheduled engagements which prevented him from attending these sessions.

"But now I want to do something very positive and give something back," said Hagler.

ADVICE FOR THE YOUNG

"Love your mother and father and obey them." Those are the first words of advice for any young athlete, according to Marvin Hagler.

He credits much of his success to those people who have surrounded them such as the Petronellis and his public relations person, Peter DeVeber of Stoughton.

Family life and sports, particularly,in the younger years are very important to growing up, said Hagler. Sports is a good outlet for letting go of anxiety and frustration but in the same breath he notes 'if you can't make it in sports, make it in education. And if you can make it both areas, you are a rich man."

Drug education, said Hagler, starts at home with the family. "I tell kids, 'Give your mind and body a chance. Don't clog it up now. At 17 years old. if you continue to take drugs, what will your brain be like?"

"Years ago a kid was in trouble maybe because of family problems or divorce. Now, it's different. Drugs are a problem and I do not envy the school system now."

Marvin is running the streets of Hanover and Pembroke as he awaits the date of his new fight. He trains three times a week, running the roads of Rte 53 and 139, Hanover to Pembroke or Hanover to Norwell. He isn't lifting weights but continues to swim and bicycle. Hagler also pops in and out of the gymnasiums in Brockton. "I'm keeping my weight down and my muscles in tone."

He is excited about his sporting goods clothes store in Hanover which he acknowledges will draw more foot traffic than his Brockton store. In addition to his own name items, he hopes to feature other professional name endorsements and add clothing for aerobics, bowling, tennis and golf.

Pictures and fighting memorabilia surround his new store. Video tapes of his greatest fights and other note-worthy professional boxing fights play over a VCR.

Marvin, right now is a happy man. Besides starting up his new store, he also tapes Public Service Announcements for Cerebral Palsy, the Jimmy Fund, Salvation Army and the American Lung Association. It isn't easy taping these announcements as one hour of camera work per tape caused Marvin to joke, "It's sometimes harder taping these than working in the ring."

But Marvin is excited because he has his immediate family around him, helping him in his new business adventures. He also enjoys being at home with his five children, Jimmy, Gentry, Celeste, Marvin Jr. and Charelle, ranging in age from four to 16 years old. All of his children are enrolled in Hanover public schools and some are participating in Hanover youth sports.

Marvin is beginning to see life after boxing. Now with a smile he says, "My competitors are starting to ask, 'What is Mr. H. up to now." And he just isn't talking about Sugar Ray or "Hit-man Hearns."

He is referring to his business competitors.

Coalition to meet Oct. 16

Representatives to the South Shore Coalition will meet Thursday, Oct. 16 to discuss its water grant, solid-waste issues and a proposal for a regional animal shelter.

A coalition meeting last Thursday, a few days after its day-long growth seminar at Norwell High School, was cancelled because representatives from only three of nine member towns attended.

The coalition has not adopted a charter for the conduct of business, but its meetings generally do not begin until representatives of four towns have arrived.

Those who attended last week included Weymouth Selectman Brian G. McDonald; Cohasset Selectman Diane Sullivan; and Selectman John Brady and Planning Board member Alan Devine, both of Hingham.

In a review of the growth seminar, representatives reviewed transporation issues and repeated praise for an inspirational tale entitled "One Man's South Shore" given by storyteller Jay O'Callahan.

Coalition Project Manager Jean Christensen said a location for the October representatives' meeting had not been set.

If you have antique or collectable items and would like to find their value, The Historical Society's Heritage Discovery Day" is the way to do it. Artworks, books, old china, furniture and many other types of collectables will be viewed by Robert W. Skinner's experienced appraisers at a cost of only $7 per item.

The cost, representing a donation to the Cohasset Historical Society, is for verbal appraisals. Written appraisals can be arranged for additional cost. Skinner's appraisers also will be available to view textiles, procelain, folk art, glass, dolls and toys.

Be sure to mark Saturday, October 11 on your calendar and plan to bring those antique objects and artworks about which you have always wondered, to the Cohasset Historical Society's "Heritage Discovery Day" antiques appraisal day at the Caleb Lothrop House.

Skippers stage fourth quarter rally to clip Norwell

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner correspondent

Football

Saturday, the boys pulled out and incredible down-to-the-wire victory over Norwell, 21-20, in one of the most exciting football games Cohasset has ever played.

Norwell quickly came out in the first half and capitalized on its talented passing game and on Cohasset's sluggish defense to pull ahead 12-0. The Skippers had several opportunities to score in the opening periods but a couple of unfortunate errors led to a scoreless half for Cohasset.

However, in a second half, a new Cohasset team emerged—a team that played with pride, and with a strong desire to win. In the third period Bobby Durkin ran the ball into the end zone off a 19 yard tackle play to put the Skippers on the scoreboard. Unfortunately, Norwell came back to score on a pass play which left Cohasset down two touchdowns as it entered the pivotal fourth period.

After a 65-yard March down the field, Cohasset closed the scoring gap to seven when Bobby Durkin's perfect pass hit Philip Mahoney in the end zone. Coach Phil Pisano attributes his team's excellent blocking as a key role in executing this touchdown play.

Now with 2:40 left in the game the Skippers kicked off, leaving Norwell on Cohasset's 30 yard line. On the first play after the kickoff, Norwell committed a game-losing fumble which was picked up by the quick hands of Cohasset's Derick Lacks. The skippers capitalized on this fortunate turn of events and Durkin at last scored off a one yard plunge with 1:09 left in the game, Cohasset decided they would only be satisfied with a win: and thus Pisano sent Bobby Durkin into the huge gap that Patrick O'Conner and Jeff Lloyd created and the skippers finally went ahead, 21-20. However, the game was by no means over, for Norwell made one last attempt to score; but on the last play of the game Norwell's field goal attempt went just wide of the goal post, and Cohasset came away victorious.

Durkin was truly the superstar for the day, scoring two touchdowns, and carrying the ball 25 times for a total of 145 years. Pisano also mentioned the great efforts of Adam Whitman, Jeff LLoyd, and Derick Lacks in making pivotal fumble recoveries. Pisano also praised the efforts of Jeff Lydon on defense.

Despite the great individual efforts of these players, Pisano attributes this tremendous victory to an entire team effort. "Everybody rose to the occasion," according to Pisano, "and we pulled together as a team."

Overall the skippers stand at 2-0, and Pisano attributes his team's success to co-captains Bobby Durkin, Patrick O'Conner, Jeff Soltesz, and Liam Stanford.

This Friday night the boys travel to Millis and take on a traditionally strong football squad. The student council is sponsoring two spectator buses to Millis and so the football team is hoping for a big turnout of Cohasset fans. Pisano promises an exciting game for all those who venture out to Millis.

Field Hockey

The girls started off the week by beating Abington, 4-1. Coach Clare Brady was pleased with her team's efforts overall and was especially impressed with Cohasset's defense.

After Abington scored in the first opening minutes of the game, Cohasset answered with four of its own goals, and the game was over by half-time. Maureen Farren led the Skippers offensively with 2 goals and 2 assists followed by Cindy Spooner who had a goal and an assist and by Mona Cahill who scored off a corner. Brady also cited Sarah Dickerman as having a good game on defense.

If a perfect game of field hockey has ever been played, it had to have been played last Wednesday when when Cohasset soundly thrashed East Bridgewater by an unbelieveable score of 10-0! Brady was astounded by her team and described its first half as being, "Flawless." The game was well over by a halftime as the girls led 7-0. In the second half, Cohasset subed in many players off the bench, but the Skippers did not miss a beat, scoring four more goals and dominating the field.

Maureen Farren led the Skippers with three goals. Other Cohasset scorers were: Cindy Spooner, Maria Cahill, Jan Peters, Sara Bishop, Julie Bowdoin Michele Casolaro, and Sarah Dickerman.

Brady was especially proud of the way Kerri Cullinane and Julie Bowdoin worked together in this game.

Tuesday, the girls face Hull in a must win situation. Thursday, Cohasset hosts championship rival Sandwich in what should be the matchup of the season. Brady expects a tough offensive battle between these two talented teams.

Boy's Soccer

Tuesday, the boys lost a disappointing game to Norwell, 3-0. Cohasset got off to a rough start and found itself down, 3-0. In the second half, the boys picked up the pace allowing only one shot on net and far outshining Norwell offensively. Unfortunately, the Skippers just could not put the ball in the net.

Jim Reidy, Jim Gallagher, and Steve Myers all turned in good efforts for Cohasset according to coach Dan Magner.

Thursday, the boys tied an extremely talented Sandwich team 1-1. Two minutes into the game Jason Marsac took a pass from Ian Smart and rammed the ball home to put Cohasset ahead 1-0. The Skippers continued to perform very well in the first half and played some of the best soccer Magner has ever seen his team play. In the second half, Cohasset's pace slowed down, and a defensive error led to Sandwich's only goal. However, despite this short lapse Magner was pleased with the way in which his team played.

Ian Smart, Jason Marsac, and Jim Reidy all had great games and impressed Magner with their hustle and their intensity. Todd Fitzpatrick and John Reidy turned in good efforts at the midfield. Goalie Joel Reidy played very well in net and was helped by Steve Meyers who was outstanding as fullback.

Magner also pointed out that he was impressed with the way in which Ned Chase played defensively.

Beechwood church activities

The Beechwood Church welcomes everyone to worship at 10:45 each Sunday. Pastor Stephen Hall's sermon topic will be "Born Once is Enough" Child care is provided.

Sunday, Sept. 28 will start the Sunday school year. Parents and children are invited to the rally day pancake breakfast at 9:30 a.m., followed by class registration. Classes are offered for kindergarten through junior high.

This will be Pastor Hall's last Sunday before his trip to Paris. Pastor Hall will be teaching at the International Hotel School outside Paris for 12 weeks. The congregation wishes he and his wife Marjorie bon voyage.

St Stephen's schedule

Teachers Prepare

The Church School enters its second year with 48 children on the rolls. This marks a great increase. The teachers are busy readying all the crafts and lessons.

Kerygma Bible Study

All adults interested in a year-long (September through May) challenging and in-depth Bible Study will meet after the fellowship time to learn more of what is involved and to determine an appropriate meeting time. This study group is designed to meet the concerns expressed by many to know the Bible better, not only in our minds but in our hearts as well!

Parish Picnic

St. Stephen's Parish Picnic will again take place at the Wakemans', 257 Atlantic Ave., Sunday after church, Sept. 28. Food will be provided for all. Bring lawn chairs, blankets, tennis rackets, guitars or other instruments, get ready for some volleyball (or just relax by the ocean). Be sure not to miss this great time to be together as a parish.

Cape Cod Bicycle Trip

A bicycle trip for the parish will take place on Saturday, October 4, along the Cape Cod Canal and around the area of Sandwich. We will depart from the church at 9:30 a.m. that day. It is about an 18 mile trip on fairly flat terrain. All parishioners are welcome to enjoy a beautiful fall day bicycling on a lovely, scenic area.

Confirmation Class October 5

Young people of junior and senior high age will have their first meeting for confirmation instruction Sunday, October 5, at 4 p.m. at the church. This class will be held weekly and taught by the Rector.

If you would like to register for this class, please call the office and leave your name. Bishop Porteus will be with us to confirm and receive all candidates Sunday, January 4, at the 10 a.m. service.

Help Needed!

Our skilled embroiderers are hard at work, trying to complete the Bishop's Chair by December 1. (The Bishop is coming in January.) We would like additional helpers! if any of you would like to take one of the pieces for a 2-week stint—it's the simple Jacquard stitch—please let Gertrude Hooper know at 383-1111.

Altar Guild Notes

The Altar Guild is in need of a small sturdy table or stand on which to place our new small refrigerator in the sacristy. Would you search your attics or storerooms to see if you might have just the one? It needs to be about 18"-20" wide and 30"-40" high. We would be most grateful.

We are hoping to complete our roster for flower donations for the whole church year. Some weeks are already taken, but there are still a number of openings. We simply use greens in the vases during Advent, and nothing during Lent, so those weeks will not be available. Perhaps you have loved ones you would like to have remembered at the Altar or would like to give flowers in thanksgiving for special happy events in your lives. We are asking a donation of $35.00 a Sunday to defray the cost of the flowers. If you are interested we will have a sign-up sheet on the bulletin board in Walton Rodgers Hall or you may contact the parish office.

The Altar Guild is looking for new members. If you think you will be interested in serving the Lord in this very privileged way, will you please give your name to the Rector or call Betty Madden, 383-0246.

Retired Abbot Edward C. Campbell, OSB, (right) congratulates the newly-elected Abbot Nicholas J. Morcone, OSB, the Second Abbot of Glastonbury Abbey of Hingham.

The public is invited to a reception honoring Father Nicholas J. Morcone, O.S.B. He was recently elected Abbot of the Glastonbury Abbey. The reception will be held Sunday, Oct. 5 at the Abbey.

The Sept. 14 election was presided over by Abbot Jerome Hanus, O.S.B., of Conception Abbey, MO, who is the president of the Swiss-American Benedictine Congregation of which Glastonbury is a member.

Abbot Nicholas served the Glastonbury community for the past year as administrator. He succeeds Abbot Edward C. Campbell, O.S.B., who retired in August, 1985, after twenty-eight years as the superior of Glastonbury, twelve of those years as Abbot. Abbot Edward was present with the rest of the community for the election.

The new Abbot, a native of Milford, MA, has been a member of the Glastonbury community for over twenty years. He came to the monastery after his graduation from Boston College. Abbot Nicholas pronounced his first monastic vows in 1965 and was ordained a priest in 1969.

Sunday, September 28, the Rite of Blessing of an Abbot will be presided over by Bernard Cardinal Law at the Abbey Chapel.

"This is a very significant time for the monks of Glastonbury and for our friends," Abbot Nicholas said. "We wish the chapel could accommodate all those we would like to have with us. In order to celebrate this election, the monks and I invite all friends of the monastery, far and wide, to join us for a reception at the Abbey Sunday, October 5, in the afternoon."

According to the manner recorded in the Rule of St. Benedict, Abbot Nicholas was elected by all the solemnly professed monks of the Abbey. After a year of self-study and prayer the community decided that it was ready to elect a new abbot and forge into a new era of monastic witness and service to the Church of Boston.

The Monks of Hingham are known throughout the area for the retreats that are held at the Abbey, for the housing for the elderly the monks build in Hingham, for spiritual direction and parish assistance on the South Shore, and for the spiritual memorials and cards of the Galstonbury Mass Guild. The community also renders special service to the homeless and hungry of the city,and to the sick and dying in hospice programs.

Abbot Nicholas has in years past served the community as its Prior for ten years, as a formation director of young monks, as a retreat director and as resident historian. As a monk, he studied theology at St. Michael's College in Toronto, Canada. He has been a delegate to the General Chapter of the Swiss-American Congregation and an official visitator.

Church School—Thanks to the following people who have volunteered to teach our children: Cheryl Taylor and Gay Dane, Pre-K and Kindergarten; Elizabeth Martin, Grades 1 and 2; Lee Jenkins and Isabelle Wilson, Grades 3 and 4; Rita and James Kirk, Grades 5 and 6; Sandra and Dane Hahn, Junior High Fellowship; Susi Coley, Senior High Fellowship.

High School—Sunday School began Sept. 21 from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. in the minister's study—10 to 12th grade welcome!

Choir—Welcome back, choir! And a special welcome for Vivien Babo, new alto; and to Anne Merritt, soprano, who we are delighted to have back with us again. We do miss Lydia Ericsson and Bob and Andy MacNeill, and hope and pray that others (you, perhaps?) will join us in making and giving beautiful music to God and our friends and Sunday morning worship.

Pancake Breakfast—The Junior High Youth Group will sponsor a Pancake Breakfast Sept. 28 at the church, from 8 to 10 a.m. Tickets are available this Sunday at $2.50 each or $3 at the door. Senior Citizens are invited free! Proceeds will fund Youth Group projects.

Clothing Drive, October 5—Worship Sunday, Oct. 5, will include an offering for Neighbors in Need (NIN). This is a monetary gift that our church annually makes to the mission work of our denomination. In addition there will be a clothing collection, also Oct. 5, to benefit the Quincy Crisis Center. Let's go the extra mile!

Elevator Fund Pledges—Recently someone questioned that with the elevator completely installed and paid for, is there a need to pay outstanding pledges? YES. There are ongoing fees for maintenance and licensing, so please pay your outstanding pledges.

Devotional Books—The devotional pamphlets "Alive Now" and "The Upper Room" are located on a small table outside the elevator room in Bates Hall. The Deacons will be monitoring people's interest in these. If they are not taken for use, they will be discontinued. Try reading one if you haven't. Maybe you know a friend, an elderly person who would like one?!

High School Retreat—The High School Youth Group will go on retreat in Ocean Park, Maine, Sept. 26-28. This is open to students in grades 10-12 (and not 9-12 as reported last week.) For more information, contact Susi Coley, 383-6160.

Senior center news . . .

Message from the Director

The Cohasset Senior Center, located in the Community Center, 3 North Main Street, provides a variety of opportunities to help enable residents over 60 in the Cohasset community area to remain independent.

Open from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, the center offers many opportunities for volunteering, participating in recreation, sharing skills, developing new interests, serving others, developing new friendships and using leadership skills; opportunities to give, share and help others in the community.

Our multi-purpose Senior Center is a community facility in which older people may come together to fulfill many of their social, physical and intellectual needs. It can help expand their interest, tap their potential and develop their talents.

The center is also a bridge—a broad, two-way bridge linking the loose-knit senior community to the community at large. The center is a bridge which offers people the opportunity to create a special community of their own.

The Senior Center is not only for older people. Volunteers of all ages interest and interrelate in many types of programs. The young, the old and the middleaged teach each other and learn from each other. In turn, they discover that they indeed share mutual interests and concerns.

In the process the individual may soon use the same bridge to become an integral part of the community and to be of service to the community as well. For more information regarding the Senior Center, please call Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

Studds investigates safety at Pilgrim nuclear plant

U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) solicited public comment on documents provided to him by the Boston Edison company relating to public safety at the Pilgrim Power Station in Plymouth.

Studds is currently reviewing the text of a letter from Stephen J. Sweeney, President of Boston Edison, who responded to a series of questions Studds had submitted to ths company this past summer. Boston Edison operates the Pilgrim nuclear power plant, where safety concerns have suspended operations since last April.

The House Subcommittee on Energy Conservation and Power held a hearing in July, at Studds' request, on safety problems at the Pilgrim facility. Shortly after this hearing, Studds formally requested from Boston Edison information about "the capacity of Pilgrim's containment structure to prevent a large-scale release of radiation in an emergency, the adequacy of measures for notifying local residents about emergency procedures to be followed in the event of a serious plant accident, and other issues which I believe must be fully addressed before considering the resumption of operations at Pilgrim."

The Boston Edison letter contains information about the company's efforts to improve the dissemination of emergency planning brochures; steps taken to correct problems with the plant's emergency siren notification system; plans to enhance the ability of the plant's containment structure to prevent the release of radioactive material in the event of an accident; and changes in the company's procedures, staffing and organizational structure designed to address the long-standing problems at the plant. The letter also discusses a petition pending with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to show cause why the company's license to operate the plant should not be suspended.

"I am now in the process of a very careful review of Mr. Sweeney's response and other pertinent materials, in anticipation of further discussions with Boston Edison," Studds said. "In this context, I would certainly welcome the comments of any resident of southeastern Massachusetts on the issues discussed in his letter."

In a related development, Studds said that the Subcommittee on Energy Conservation and Power will soon conduct a hearing on nuclear licensing issues affecting the Seabrook nuclear power plan in New Hampshire. This hearing, which will be chaired by Congressman Edward Markey, is scheduled for October 6 in Newburyport.

"I believe that emergency planning is as important as technical or management considerations at nuclear power plants, and that questions about emergency planning at Seabrook apply as well to the Pilgrim facility," Studds said. "Accordingly, it is my intention to submit additional testimony for the upcoming hearing. Once again, I would be happy to consider the thoughts of interested local individuals and groups as I draft my own remarks to the Subcommittee."

Studds said that anyone interested in obtaining a copy of Mr. Sweeney's letter, in sharing his or her views on these questions, or in any other information, may contact his nearest office in Hanover, Hyannis or New Bedford.

Auction raises $10,000 for Democrats

COOP 6, a coalition of six area Democratic Town Committees, held its second annual auction at the Marshfield Sons of Italy Hall Saturday, netting more than $10,000.

Celebrity auctioneer Michael S. Dukakis who, with his wife Kitty offered a print of a water color by artist Lynn Loscutoff titled The State House Aglow, sparked spirited bidding between Marshfield's Peg Maeder, a former Cohasset school teacher and Dick Levitan of Hull, former WEEI personality. Maeder finally purchased the picture for $610 and the governor and his wife obligingly autographed it for her.

After they had left, Levitan decided he couldn't be without the print, and wrote his check for $610 after Norma Fenochietti of Marshfield, the governor's director of scheduling, promised to get a similarly autographed copy for him.

Other celebrity auctioneers included Congressman Gerry Studds, lieutenant governor candidates Gerry D'Amico and Evelyn Murphy, attorney general hopefuls Jim Shannon and JoAnn Shotwell, candidate for auditor Charles Yancey, State Sen. Bill Golden, state Rep. Frank Hynes, former state Sen. Allan McKinnon, District Attorney Bill O'Malley, County Commissioner Kevin Donovan and his opponents, Tim Cahill and Clifford Marshall. Congressman Brian Donnelly, Secretary of State Michael Connolly, and candidate for the office of Auditor were unable to attend but sent items or services to be auctioned.

The six town committees, who use COOP-6 as a mechanism for maximizing communication and achievement, will use the funds for projects of their choice such as voter registration drives, scholarship funding, support of Democratic candidates, support of the Long Island Homeless Shelter and world-hunger relief.

In addition to items offered by celebrities, attendees had the opportunity to bid on items and services presented by Marshfield's Jim O'Gara and Scituate's Nancy Murray Young. Award for the most excited high bidder of the evening goes to Scituate's Maureen Goggin who purchased tickets to a Red Sox-Brewer game.

Award for the most confused high bidder goes to Claire McDonough of Scituate who purchased two magnificent holly trees only to find that a card attached to them states that "asexual reproduction of these trees is strictly prohibited."

Selectmen proclaim Emergency Medical Week

Teamwork by Cohasset firefighters is common when they arrive on the scene of a motor vehicle accident. Sept. 21-27 is designated as Emergency Medical Services Week.

In recognition of the daily services provided by the Cohasset Fire Department, selectmen recently voted to establish Sept. 21 - 27 Emergency Medical Services Week.

The official proclamation was voted by selectmen Sept. 8. According to selectmen, "the Board is pleased to officially recognize EMS Week and the fine service rendered by local ambulance services, hospitals and first responder services throughout the Commonwealth."

In its proclamation, selectmen stated that Cohasset's emergency medical services provide life-saving care to citizens in need and is a vital and essential service to the citizens of this community.

Selectmen issued the proclamation in response to a request made by the state Office of Emergency Medical Services. Selectmen noted, "thousands of our police and fire departments, physicians, nurses and emergency medical technicians have been trained in the life-saving care and treatment of medical and trauma emergencies."

Cohasset Fire Dept. Capt. James Gurry is coordinator of the Cohasset Fire Department Emergency Medical Technicians. According to Capt. Gurry, "the Fire Department provides the Ambulance Service to the residents of Cohasset. The public is invited to visit Fire Headquarters and inspect the ambulance purchased last year for use by the department."

Anyone who would like to visit the headquarters, may have a free blood pressure reading taken.

In a research report completed in 1983, it was found "in general the public is knowledgeable about how to get help in five emergency situations: choking, a burn victim, poisonings, chest pain and a car accident victim."

2. In terms of administering first-aid, 85 percent of those surveyed knew the Heimlich manuever; 70 percent knew the appropriate action for a burn victim; 21 percent had been trained in CPR in the last three years; 80 percent who had been trained in CPR would administer CPR to an unconscious accident victim who was not breathing; 32 percent would call the Poison Control Center after a child accidentally swallowed bleach.

3. Of note, general demographics (age, income, education) play no significant role in defining the person more knowledgeable or better able to handle any of the emergency situations presented.

4. Respondents with family heart attack experience are no more apt to respond with CPR to an unconscious victim who is not breathing than are those who have never been exposed to a family heart attack.

In a separate category of the market research, it was found:

1. Only 21 percent of the respondents in non 911 areas knew the correct ambulance number to call in an emergency.

3. Only 26 percent of all respondents knew the local organization which provides ambulance services.

3. Most people do not know whether they have Advanced Life Support services in their area. In non ALS areas over 75 percent of the respondents thought they had this service.

In the third section of the report, it was found:

1. Two-thirds of the public have not participated in any first aid or medical treatment program within the last three years.

2. 21 percent have taken CPR within the last three years.

3. Television programs, direct-mail and articles in existing newspapers and magazines are the media through which the largest segments of the population are interested in obtaining first-aid information. Few are interested in attending classes.

4. Although there is little interest in classroom instruction, respondents chose their local hospital as the preferred education sponsor over all the other presented groups combined (schools, community organizations, religious groups, etc.).

Capt. Gurry noted the emergency telephone numbers for Cohasset are: Fire/Ambulance - 383-0260. The Poison Control Center number is 232-2120.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A conversation with the Phillippines Finance Minister

Once in a while in the writing profession something special happens, and through the kind intercession of Marina Garcia of the Hanover Mariner, something special happened last Saturday when I had an exclusive interview with her brother-in-law Jaime Ongpin, Finance Minister of the Philippines.

Mr. Ongpin was in Boston with President Corazon Aquino during her triumphant return to the city where she lived during the last three years of the life of her husband, the late Sen. Benigno Aquino. His return to the Philippines followed by his murder, followed by her return, followed by the democratic revolution that made her president is a story that has already entered into legend and needs no elaboration here.

The Ongpin story — not as heart-rending as the Aquinos' but replete with the same fervent dedication to the democratic ideal — is worth repeating; for it is on the shoulders of men of conscience, moderation, and ability like Jaime Ongpin that the real hopes of the underdeveloped world for the 21st century will lie.

Ongpin is really a businessman, and a good one. He graduated from Harvard Business School in 1962 and went to work for Procter & Gamble in the Philippines. After a year at Procter & Gamble he went into the gold mining business where he continued to work until the events of 1986. Had the history of the world been written differently, it is not hard to picture this man living on the South Shore, driving his kids to youth soccer, and minding his own business in a useful way.

In the Philippines "mind his own business" is what he did as long as he could. The early years of the Marcos regime were a time of rapid economic growth in the country, and most business people were far too busy to spend time on dissident political thoughts. One presumes that if Marcos had moderated the stench in his government men like Ongpin would have eschewed politics, and Marcos would have survived.

As it was the stench became too great for the middle and business classes to ignore. For Ongpin two events "politicized" him. The first was Marcos' response to the collapse of the Philippine money markets around 1982. Marcos' response to this crisis was to bail out his cronies and to ignore the plight of the money markets generally and the devastating effect that their collapse was having on the country. It was in response to Marcos' crony-serving handling of the money market crisis that Ongpin spoke out against the government for the first time.

The second event that "politicized" Ongpin was the 1983 murder of Benigno Aquino as he stepped off a Boston-to-Manila flight. Ongpin first met Cory Aquino at a memorial mass for her husband, and from then on he was in the thick of the movement to get rid of Marcos and his government.

an emergency election, he had all the apparent tactical advantages of incumbency on his side: surprise, opponents who seemed in disarray, and control of the military, of the major media, of the dispensation of favors, and of the electoral process itself.

Meet the Ongpin family. They are L-R, Jian, Joanna, Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin, Miguel, Mrs. Isabel Ongpin and Lisa and Rafael.

Yet Marcos' impulsive call for an election seems to have taken him more by surprise than it did his opponents. It may or may not have been the result of a Harvard Business School "case" a quarter of a century earlier, but unbeknownst to Marcos, Ongpin and other leading opponents had a contingency plan to unite behind a single one of the eleven potential anti-Marcos candidates should an election be called. This was easier said than done, but when the election call came it was done. To his surprise Marcos had to face Aquino one-on-one.

According to Ongpin, the only favor he asked in working for Aquino's election was that come her ascendancy to the presidency he not be recruited into the government. He reports she "...gave that enigmatic smile of hers and said, 'We'll cross that bridge when we come to it.'" At around 2 a.m. on the historic day Aquino was proclaimed president, she informed Ongpin he would be the new finance minister, adding, "I didn't want my job either." The reporter must observe that from Cincinnatus to George Washington the same has often been true of the first order of patriots.

As finance minister Ongpin is charged with putting the Philippine economy on its feet in the face of a $26½ billion foreign debt, a Communist insurgency, and a generally stagnant economy that declined in gross national product in the last two years of the Marcos regime. The general strategy of the new government is to put private enterprise back in the driver's seat. Although Marcos was an avowed anti-socialist, Ongpin points out that the number of government corporations went from 100 to over 350 during his 20 years in power. Most of those came to function not as economic engines but as economic warrens for the ruling clique, and most of them are in the process of being "privatized."

Secondly, the new government hopes to follow the successful examples of Japan and Korea in marketing products for export. In the initial phase Ongpin sees export opportunities for agricultural products, garments, and semi-conductors. If the Philippines then follow the Japanese model, as the economy grows and as currency flows into the country from the sale of exports, it will become possible to shift the focus of exports to a wider variety of manufactured goods.

Thirdly, one way this government will apparently not follow the Japanese model is in the restriction of foreign business. Asked a leading question about problems caused by American corporations in the Philippines, Ongpin responded: "Multinationals are our best employers; they have been very useful; we will do all we can to encourage them."

Fourthly, the new government hopes to reschedule the country's $26½ billion foreign debt. Ongpin believes he is close to a plan that the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank will support, one which will provide immediate cash and credit for the economy. Asked if he would consider any form of default, Ongpin replied emphatically that he would not, that the consequences of default would be far worse for the Philippines than any conditions that lenders might insist on before agreeing to rescheduling.

Turning to politics, Ongpin said that relations with the United States are excellent. As to the Soviet Union, relations are correct, but the Soviets, who are not an important Philippine trading partner, understand that the special relationship with the United States will continue. On the question of the Communist insurgency within the Philippines, Ongpin said that Mrs. Aquino is determined to exhaust every opportunity to achieve a peaceful settlement before resorting to other options. Ongpin did not go so far as to spell out that the "other options" are military; but one suspects that the Communists will make a great error if they take Mrs. Aquino's friendly overtures as irresolution.

Neither Corazon Aquino nor Jaime Ongpin have the oratorical gift of a Churchill, the single-mindedness of a Lenin, or the amoral fanaticism of contemporary militants around the world. Their strength seems to be that they uphold both democratic and civilized values with equal portions of determination and patience. They have had every reason to resent the United States for our wooden-headed refusal to recognize that Communism was not the only alternative to Marcos, nor vice versa. Yet they have not rejected us; to the contrary they have practiced the values we have purported to teach them throughout this century, and in the end it is they who have taught us about those values. I envy them, really, for at the moment they are closer to freedom's front line than we are.

Asked of his future plans, Ongpin stated that he wishes to serve one term, no more. He would commit himself no further into the future than his 25th Harvard Business School reunion next spring. He said he hopes to be able to return to Boston then and see his classmates again.

Judging from recent history I would advise those classmates to count on being seen.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'What I know about Drugs'

Mike Barnicle's column in The Boston Globe a few weeks ago was titled "Contest time once again." Instead of writing about the quirks and mysteries of Boston, he announced a writing contest.

The topic is "What I know about Drugs." This replaces the previous topic, "I Am Not Illiterate," which was won by a Cambodian immigrant, a graduate of Brighton High School.

Barnicle writes that anybody at all can enter, though the contest is geared to high school and junior high kids.

Since I qualify by virtue of being anybody at all, I thought I would enter.

What I know about Drugs.

I shall begin by telling you how I know about drugs.

How I know about drugs is I spent four years in college, 1966 to 1970.

Most of my friends took drugs. Of course, a great many people who weren't my friends did, too. Drug users were called "Heads."

People who didn't take drugs (except alcohol, nicotine, caffeine, valium and any other chemicals a doctor told them to take or which were added to their food or inhaled through the atmosphere) were called "Straights."

Heads were sometimes thought to be hipper, more aware or more attractive than Straights.

This began to change around 1970, when so many people used drugs that a large number of very ordinary, unattractive and unaware people became Heads.

Now so many people use drugs that nobody is called a Head anymore. Using drugs confers about as much prestige as carrying a Mastercard.

When I was in college two of my friends jumped out of high-rise dormitories. One was on LSD. The other committed suicide because he didn't get into the right graduate school.

Some people I know who used lots of drugs are now doctors, lawyers, corporate vice presidents and ministers.

Others are factory workers, pipe fitters, teachers and housewives in the traditional sense.

My conclusion is that a person's future is determined more by their socio-economic circumstances and their personal motivation than by drug use. Of course, that one guy did jump out the window.

Now I'll finally tell you what I know about drugs.

Pot is a mild euphoric and analgesic which probably has some long-term health hazards if you really smoke a lot for a long time. It's not anywhere nearly has harmful to people as alcohol, bigotry or nuclear reactors.

I know lots of people who are harmed by tobacco addiction.

The hallucinogenic drugs like LSD, mescaline and peyote could actually help civilization if people would respect them. They should not be squandered by fourteen-year-olds at Twisted Sister concerts. There should be retreats where people can take them under spiritual discipline.

Cocaine and heroin are really bad. They make you feel good when you are not and are addictive and will kill you.

If you sell drugs you can make a lot of money. The addiction to money makes people sell drugs that hurt people. People who are addicted to money are very dangerous to society.

A lot of prescription drugs are bad, too. People think they can always get well by taking a pill. This is not true.

Doctors are not as smart about drugs as they should be. For years they hooked fat teenagers on amphetamines then were surprised when the kids grew into a generation of speed freaks.

That's about all I know about drugs. There is much more I do not know. That makes me like most people.

I know even less about the current drug fads like free-basing and crack. I know only what I read in magazines or watch on television. Heads used to laugh at the media's presentations of drug use in the 1960's because they were so wildly wrong. I wonder if they are still wrong today.

I know drugs are being used in the 1980's the way communism was used in the 1950's, as a scapegoat, an excuse for all society's problems.

Random drug testing today is what the loyalty oath was to the McCarthey era.

In the 1930's many college-aged youths flirted with communism. Later they discovered Stalin was a monster and Soviet communism was a lie. Then they found out they could lose their jobs if the wrong person discovered they had gone to this or that meeting twenty years ago.

In the 1960's many young adults smoked pot and popped pills. Now they discover that drugs are killing twelve-year-olds and they could lose their jobs if their urine turns the wrong color.

It's getting so a moderate voice suggesting the complexity of the drug issue can be accused of being "soft on drugs" the way people have long been baited as being "soft on communism."

People who wouldn't know marijuana from oleander are now demanding that we crack down on drugs the same way people who wouldn't know Karl Marx from Groucho used to set in judgment of other people's consciences.

I hope things don't get any crazier, either about drug abuse or its prevention. It's hard to prove you're drug-free, just as it's hard to prove you're not a communist.

We ought to be able to keep drugs from destroying our society without destroying the Bill of Rights.

Old hippies who are now respectible parents and pillars of the community might consider being more involved in preventing drug abuse today. Their experience would be helpful.

They might also save us from the day when some terminally straight crusader, as part of a government tribunal, goes around asking everybody, "Are you now or have you ever been a user of illegal drugs, or have you ever advocated their use or legalization?"

Darrell Berger is minister of the First Unitarian Church in Scituate.

Warren Waitkus's World of Weather

In the October 1981 (Vol. 35 No. 5) edition of Weatherwise (a magazine about weather), there was an article titled: Testing The Farmer's Almanac by John E. Walsh and David Allen.

Mr. Walsh and Mr. Allen are research meteorologists at the Laboratory for Atmospheric Research of the University of Illinois in Urbana.

The article was an attempt to evaluate the accuracy of the long range weather forecasts that appear in The Old Farmer's Almanac. The study covered a 60 month period, from November, 1975 to October, 1980.

In the article the authors wrote: "In the interest of completeness and in response to the high regard expressed by some local farmers for the Almanac forecasts, we present here a systematic evaluation of the accuracy of these forecasts over a five-year period."

The authors continued, saying: "While forecasting methodologies are not our main concern here, we note that the Almanac's forecasting methodology is not documented with the utmost professional rigor. The extent of the documentation is the statement that "Our weather forecasts are determined both by the use of a secret weather forecasting formula devised by the founder of this almanac in 1792 and by the most modern scientific calculations based on solar activity." (Thomas, 1979, p. 30).

Robert Bailey Thomas
(From the Farmer's Almanack for 1838)

I read the article several times and still cannot understand the exact point that they were trying to make, and I am sure the average person would have difficulty arriving at the authors' intended conclusion.

For example, one paragraph read: "Correlations between the forecast and observed quantities were computed on a monthly and seasonal basis for each region. Figure 2 shows the geographical distribution of the correlations obtained from the 60 sets each set of 16 correlations exceeds the 95 percent of monthly values. Each regional correlation is an algebraic mean of the correlations involving the stations within the region. While 10 of the 16 correlations are positive in each case, only one of significance level, r = 0.255. (One of 20 values should exceed the 95 percent level by chance.)" Did you follow that?

The article used maps indicating geographical regions, and correlations between forecast and observed departures from monthly and seasonal normals. Also three tables were presented to support the authors' contention that, perhaps, the Almanac forecasts did not exceed the "95 percent significance level."

In my opinion, the authors tried to impress their colleagues, while leaving the average reader scratching his head.

The Old Farmer's Almanac has been continuously published for 194 years, bringing useful and entertaining matter, as well as long range forecasts to millions of readers. As a collector of almanacs I think it is a great publication, and I look forward to its appearance at the newsstand.

But what about the founder of the Farmer's Almanac (the word "Old" was not used until 1848). The Centennial Number (1892) had a biography of Robert B. Thomas by Samuel A. Green. I think you will find it interesting.

Robert Bailey Thomas, the elder son of William and Azubah (Goodale) Thomas, was born in Grafton on April 24, 1766, at the house of his maternal grandfather.

His father, William, a native of Marlborough, owned a farm in the present town of West Boylston, pleasantly situated between the Quinnepoxet and Stillwater streams, near their confluence, where they form the south branch of the Nashua River.

At this house Robert and his younger brother, Aaron, were brought up, doing such chores as usually fall to the lot of farmers' boys in New England.

In the winter they attended the district school, and at other seasons were taught by their father, who was considered to be quite a scholar for those days.

The father was a great reader of books, and had a considerable library. Among these books Robert used to be turned loose, where he passed his leisure hours in browsing.

Of all the works there found, none absorbed his attention so much as James Ferguson's Astronomy. At an early age, he had made various calculations in regard to lunar and solar eclipses. In 1781 he lost his mother, who died of apoplexy, and in the next year his father was married again.

When Robert was 20 years old he taught school at Sterling — "boarding round," as was the custom of that period in New England towns.

During the next six years he kept no less than nine schools in the town of Princeton, Sterling and Boylston.

While teaching at Princeton in 1792, he became acquainted with a family, of which some years later, he married one of the daughters. Before this time, while working on the farm, he passed many of his spare hours in mending old and worn-out books for his father and others, and thus, self-taught, picked up a little knowledge of the bookbinder's trade. He used to buy school books in sheets, and sell them as bound volumes to the storekeepers in the neighborhood. The main object of his ambition, tried to fit himself for this work, by devoting his leisure hours to the study of astronomy.

In the summer of 1792, he placed himself for special instruction in the required studies under the charge of Osgood Carleton, a teacher in Boston and the author of an almanac.

Proving himself an apt scholar, in the course of two or three months he made all the calculations, and prepared the "copy" of an almanac for the year 1793.

He found publishers for the work, who made liberal terms with him in the way of a percentage on the sales. They were Belknap and Hall of Boston, and in connection with their names on the title page of the pamphlet, it is there stated that the almanac is sold "also by the Author and M. Smith, Sterling." This number was the first issue of the (Old) Farmer's Almanack, which has appeared each year since 1793. Its success from the beginning was marked, and until his death, Mr. Thomas kept up the publication.

In the early part of the present century he was married to Hannah, daughter of Phineas and Hannah Beaman, a native of Princeton; but he continued to live at the old homestead, where he carried on the farm, working at the almanac in the winter and looking after the crops other times. During his life he was a resident of four different towns, and yet always living on the same farm.

The last was West Boylston, incorporated January 30, 1808, where he held various offices and was always a prominent citizen. He was the first Town Clerk, serving as such for one year, and several times chairman of the Board of Selectmen. He represented the town in the Convention of 1820 for revising the State Constitution, and also in the General Court during the sessions of 1833 to 1837, inclusive.

After a long life of honor and usefulness, he died at his home, May 19, 1846, leaving a large estate to his widow and the two children of his deceased brother. His widow died September 28, 1855, and they lie buried in the "Leg" burying ground at Sterling, near the West Boylston line.

FROM THE KITCHEN by JOAN PINKHAM

Never ever shop when you're famished

Supermarkets should be off limits to kids and most definitely to husbands.

If you wonder why a gleam appears in the store manager's eyes at the sight of either of these family members, it's because they are his favorite species of customer—impulse buyers.

Karen Fabian, a home economist and food consultant offers these hints: shop for food once or twice a month, for studies show that you will spend less money than those who shop frequently.

Plan ahead by writing out your menus for the week and make out of a list of ingredients needed for each meal. Shop at the first of the week—as soon as the grocery ads come out—when there is not as much congestion as at the last of the week.

People who work should wait until Saturday when they can spend more time on shopping.

Never, ever shop when you are hungry, for everything looks much too tempting. Buy house brands. Highest-priced foods often are placed at eye level, so look on lower shelves for better buys. Try to bypass convenience foods, use coupons and check unit pricing. And next time you go, pick up the ingredients for another of Reanne Rosenhahn's recipes:

CLARK BARS

1 c. light corn syrup
1 c. sugar
Bring first two ingredients to a rolling boil. Remove from stove.
2 c. crunchy peanut butter
6 c. corn flakes, uncrushed
Stir in peanut butter. Mix well. Add corn flakes. Pour in greased 9 X 13" pan. Spread with favorite chocolate icing.

This little verse about grocery shopping says it all: "My memory, I must confess, is not very strong. Not to forget the things to buy, I make a shopping list that I forget to take along."

As you've probably already guessed, I've been reading and another tidbit I'd like to pass on is a recent study on the typical homemaker of today. It seems an emerging consumer segment is comprised of young contemporary homemakers who lead busy lives with hectic schedules and serve meals on the run.

In the interests of saving time and money, it would seem that a trip to the market to pick up a costly frozen dinner might be more time-consuming than reaching in your freezer for a casserole you have made over the weekend. Millie Carr is the gal we have to thank for this dish which serves eight easily and should be covered with foil and refrigerated overnight before baking at 350 for 45 min. in a greased 9 X 13" pan.

CHICKEN CASSEROLE

Saute 8 oz. mushrooms in 1/4 c. butter. Remove crust from 9 slices of bread and place bread in pan. Top with 4 c. cooked, diced chicken. Add mushrooms and 8 oz. sliced water chestnuts (optional). Top with 9 slices sharp cheddar cheese. Combine and spread over top:
4 eggs
2 c. milk,
1 tsp. salt
1 can ea. cream of mushroom & celery soup.
Slivered almonds may be added. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs at end of first 45 min. and bake 15 min. longer.

Now when bright red, bouncy cranberries are being harvested, you may wish to enter the contest "Make It Better with Cranberries." On Sept. 27, at Edaville R.R., South Carver, pies, cookies and other dishes containing cranberries will be judged. On the next day, breads, muffins, cakes and other favorite recipes will be judged. Contestants must bring the complete dish with a recipe attached by 9:30 a.m. either day. For more info., call Jean Gibbs, at 295-2539. Let us know if you win!

You've probably all visited the kitchen at Cranberry World Center in Plymouth where you can pick up some recipes such as this one for eight coffee rolls.

CRANBERRY ORANGE CRESCENTS

1 pkg. (8 oz.) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
1/4 c. Ocean Spray Cranorange, Cranberry Orange Sauce. Preheat oven to 375 and unroll dough, separate into triangles. Spread each with 1/2 T cranberry orange sauce. Roll as directed on package. Place on baking sheet, bake 15 min. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar.

Hopefully, this little section of the MARINER is to you what the sports and fishing sections are to our male readers. Someone remarked the other day that now the children are back in school, they're ready to return to the kitchen, but are bored with their own cooking. We'd all welcome your favorite recipes so our meals can become more varied.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

The stars never lie, except occasionally

I just know that the second we passed the autumual equinox, all you astrophobes out there got terribly excited.

Even as Mother Nature takes this time of year to dispose of some of her less desireable products, you're wondering how you can put to rest those few trifling character traits that seem to make those around you just a tad uncomfortable.

After a quick consultation with Madam Zolar, I am happy to bring you the following astrological advice:

ARIES (March 21 - April 20): Darling Aries. Your natural leadership qualities have attracted a host of devoted followers. Ignore the rumor (inspired, doubtless, by a small-minded Capricorn) that people get behind you only because they don't trust you behind them. You might, however, become just a shade more subtle in your desire to influence others. Whips and spurs are definitely declasse.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21): Sweet gentle Taurus. We all truly appreciate your loyalty. Except for those occasions when it petrifies into inalterable stubbornness. Then it drives us all crazy. Will you please stop writing in Wendell Wilkie every time you vote?

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21): Twins are such fun—and the Gemini twins communicate so readily. And creatively. And endlessly. For heaven's sake stop talking unless you're certain you can improve on silence. Remember: A closed mouth gathers no feet.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23): Most people sit down to eat. Moon Children sit down to continue eating. We all understand your appreciation for fine food, but just to be fair, you really should give other people a 20-minute head start at the buffet.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23): Regal Leo! Your friends recognize your need for homage, but they really wish you'd restrain it just a mote. Don't you think, for example that the crown and sceptre you wore to the latest PTO meeting was somewhat out of place? And really, only Mr. T looks good wearing 500 lbs. of gold jewelry.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23): Helpful Virgo. We are all so grateful for your constructive comments, but do us a favor. Be wrong once in a while. Remember, Virgo: no one ever put up a statue in honor of a critic. Please abandon your plan to wallpaper the ceiling of the Sistene Chapel.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23): Romantic, unpredictable Libra. Your friends love being with you, but they wish you would make just the teeniest effort to curtail your romantic, unpredictable nature. Could you stop proposing to every member of the opposite sex you meet? It's making your spouse terribly uncomfortable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22): Ah, Scorpio. Fascinating, ever-elusive Scorpio. We understand your desire to retain an aura of mystery but we cannot applaud all your means to this end. Giving the police a phony I.D. when you are stopped at roadblocks must definitely cease.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21): Sagittarius, the philosopher. Because your mind continually explores the secrets of the universe, you have little interest in the mundane. This is a fairly classy way of telling you your friends all wish you would clean out a closet or two. Your housecleaning is far short of acceptable and is fast approaching the definition of hazardous waste. For most Sagittarians cleanliness is next to impossible, but try.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20): Your friends are truly impressed by your thrift and by the way you make good use of everything. And everyone. Try to curtail your inclination to convert people to rungs in your ladder of success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19): Impetuous, madcap Aquarius. Your cavalier disregard for regulations has your friends a wee bit concerned. They are getting tired of inquiries by the local police asking your whereabouts. Stop asking your friends for alibis and get better acquainted with the court-appointed attorney of the opposite sex.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20): Gentle, sensitive Pisces. We won't tell you here what faults you may have. Phone all your friends and let them tell you in person. This gives you the opportunity to have your feelings hurt many times, and to cry more than you have in months. You'll love it.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Ignore any advice you may receive from a Sun Sign astrologer writing in a local newspaper. She's just an Aquarian trying to make enough money to pay her court-appointed attorney of the opposite sex.

Milliken Field improvements put on fiscal hold

The advisory committee again pulled the purse string tight on a request by the Milliken Field Improvement Committee for additional engineering money.

The improvement committee asked for a $17,500 reserve fund transfer for additional engineering and architectural work to complete plans for the renovation and construction of new town athletic facilities behind the high school. The request for additional money was denied by the advisors.

According to Ken Ekberg, chairman of the improvement committee, the individual members of the committee have solicited pledges from private citizens to help defray the first phase of construction costs. The pledges amount to "something in the six-figures," Ekberg told the advisors.

The architect, Francis Fox Spinks, was selected from several engineers and architects screened by the committee after town meeting appropriated $20,000 for the task. But during his completion of the plans, Spinks warned the full project would cost more than the $300-$400,000 originally estimated by the town group. He told the committee a more realistic figure would approach $550,000. Because of the additional costs to the project, Spinks said the plans would require about $16,700 more in engineering and architectural work.

"After soliciting so much money from private citizens, and following every proper procedure for bidding the contract, we figured the town may be able to assist us in obtaining more money for the additional preparational work," Ekberg said Wednesday morning. The $300,000-$400,000 figure was an estimate made by former building inspector Edward Poskus, who volunteered his services to the improvement committee.

"Spinks was the most reasonable of all the engineers and architects we interviewed. But as he got into the plans, he realized that the numbers were getting astronomical," Ekberg recalled. "So he revised the plans and put them into three phases."

Swell of spirit invades the halls of high school

There's a new attitude at Cohasset High School.

As the new school year began, a rise of school spirit swelled among students and teachers. Although they take no credit, members of the Student Council are enthusiastic about this upbeat beginning.

Student Council President Phillip Mahoney says the change has been drastic. "Before, no one cared about the Student Council. No one really got involved. This year it's all different," he says. Mahoney, who was elected to his office in April, remembers last year's show of spirit for Asst. Principal Gino DiGirolamo as a springboard toward more vocal demonstrations of school pride.

Now this year, the Student Council has instituted a School Wide Pride program. Corridors have been filled with festive school spirit posters, while lockers and walls have been kept clean of graffiti and debris.

Student Council representatives to the school committee, Mary Beth McNamara and Erin Powell, credit the change in administration with the new positive image of the student body and their officers.

"The administration during the past couple of years was not actively involved in what we were doing on the council," Mary Beth says, adding, "they were busy with other things, so we didn't accomplish much."

This year, they agree, the administration and teachers "are really getting involved."

Mahoney recalls, "the main reason I ran for Student Council president last year was to help rebuild it. Last year, it was like a dead body. Now we have ten things going at once. It's pretty complicated, but everyone's getting involved."

The class officer says he can't walk down the hallway without a classmate talking about an upcoming activity or a fundraising suggestion.

"I see my role as president not to be in a supreme position, but to help make decisions that are best for the widest amount of people. I see the president as a mediator at student council meetings - working to allow all ideas to flow," he says.

Tri-town group talks about sewers

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Officials from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull met Sept. 25 behind closed doors at Hingham Town Hall, to discuss the status of a proposed intermunicipal waste water disposal project.

The tri-town commission, comprised of the chairmen of the boards of selectmen of the three communities, called upon the towns' sewer commissioners to aid their deliberatioins.

Charles DeSantis, chairman of the Cohasset sewer commission commented about the closed meeting. "There was a positive exchange of information and all communities understand the benefits and whatever liabilities there are inherent in the project," he said.

Members of the press were prevented from entering the meeting. Reporters were given a written statement prepared by Hingham Town Counsel George Ford.

He wrote, "As I understand it, this tri-town group is not a creature of statute or Town Meeting legislature action. As such, it has no authority, power, responsibility or duties.

"The groupcannot make any decisions which bind the towns," he added. "It is merely an informal gathering and dissemination group."

Ford wrote, "Because the tri-town unit does not

Senior 'Strutters' walk, talk to better their health

It's a sport for everyone. Whether you're young or old, ailing of spirit or of health, walking is the exercise equalizer.

Ann Leonard and Jane Tilden, two leaders of the Senior Center's walking club, say that walking is not only an invigorating exercise. For the seniors of this town, it is a time for sociability.

"We walk and talk" Ann says, explaining that they wanted to name their 50-member club the "Walky-Talkies," but that name was already in use by another Massachusetts senior group.

"We walk as much for the exercise," she notes, "as for the friendship. There have been a lot of people joining the group who I met a long time ago and now I'm getting acquainted with them all over again."

The Cohasset Senior Center sponsors a walking group each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings, concluding with a "fun walk" every Friday morning. Tuesday's session is led by longtime walker and exercise advocate, Leonard. Wednesday's group is assisted by Jane Tilden, another Cohasset resident who has long enjoyed the physical and emotional benefits of walking.

"After my husband's death," she explains, "I would sit around and get so depressed — I just forced myself to walk. I'd walk and walk and walk. But I felt better. I wasn't sitting around the house thinking about everything. When you get outside and start moving, you tend to forget your troubles. I have always walked, my husband and I and our dog. But after my husband's death, I would go out and walk until my depression went away."

Ann admits that after following her exercise regime so closely for years, skipping a walking session would be unthinkable. "I really miss it if I don't walk," she says.

Senior Center director Kathy Bryanton explains that of the 50 seniors participating in the groups, several have ailments that might have stopped less heartier souls. "We have one person with a pace-

Cohasset's week . . .

Milliken Field overuse

Tree and Park Dept. superintendent Peter Laugelle complained last week that Milliken Field is being overused by the high school athletic teams.

In a letter to school superintendent Stephen Hart, Laugelle said he was concerned with the overuse of the field which is maintained by the town's Tree and Park Dept.

He said, "I passed the word along to all the athletic coaches to pick up the rubbish left on the field and I requested them to move the soccer nets to a different location" from their current position underneath the football goal posts. "This has not been done," he wrote last week.

"It is getting to the point now," he continued, "that the school should look into eliminating some soccer. I also think the coaches should be reprimanded for not assisting the Tree and park Dept. in its wishes to stop some of these infractions."

Laugelle suggested "if this continues," we will have to have a monitor or a representative from the Tree and Park Dept. to be at the field at all times "at the school's expense."

Investment opinion sought

In reply to an inquiry made from the treasurer, town counsel Richard Henderson said the bylaws will allow for the formation of a municipal investment advisory committee. This group could advise the town treasurer on investment alternatives for private funds donated to the town for municipal purposes.

After reviewing the town's bylaws, Atty. Henderson said the town may adopt a board or commission of trust funds which may include either formally elected or informally appointed committee members.

The board's power would be limited to those trusts which do not specifically provide for its management and investment by another body, such as the school committee.

Town counsel noted that the committee's role would be advisory rather than directive to the town treasurer.

Lily Pond appraisal

The water commissioners expressed concern that the appraiser conducting a report of the 37 acres surrounding Lily Pond, has made an incorrect assumption in his proposal to selectmen. Commissioner William Montouri stated in a letter to selectmen that a statement made in the May 15 proposal by appraiser R.W. Patridege and Associates incorrectly suggests "that this land has been found to be satisfactory for on-site systems."

Montouri noted that on-site septic systems near the town's water treatment plant are prohibited by the health board. The local board's ruling states "use of pumping chambers is not allowed for new septic systems construction within the watershed protection district." Montouri said the commissioners would take legal action to prevent the approval of a forced main system "in such proximity to the intake structure."

come within the definition of a municipal body and because it has no authority to act or can take no action to bind towns, it is my view that the requirements of the Open Meeting Law, such as posting and minute-taking, need not be complied with by this Town group."

John Brandt, chairman of the Hingham sewer commission did not dispute the legality of Ford's opinion, but stated, "I don't understand why they didn't want the press or anybody else there. I just don't understand that, because it seems to me, the more communication there is on this issue of sewage and septage, which is a growing concern, the better.

"It's like a time bomb that's going to go off in 10 to 15 years," he added, "for all of these areas that don't have adequate systems to handle it.

"People don't seem to understand it," Brandt said. "And the more chance there is for people to get this kind of information, the better off it would be. These are complicated issues."

Cohasset's Town Counsel Richard Henderson agreed Ford's opinion was "probably correct."

He added, "I wouldn't disagree with what he did."

Henderson pointed out, one of the reasons the meeting may have been closed to public and press participation, is that the town of Cohasset is under the threat of contempt action continuously from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, because of the deficiency of the town's present system.

Diane Sullivan, chairman of the Cohasset selectmen added, "Any meeting is always generally open, but in the case of this particular issue, it was such a sensitive issue we just wanted an opportunity to deliberate amongst ourselves."

The tri-town commission, according to Christopher McCabe, Hull's executive secretary, was the creation of state representative Mary Jeanette Murray.

"Initially," he said, "they bit off more than they could chew and they slowly dissolved. But it's been reactivated on the initiative of John Silva, chairman of the Hull board of selectmen."

He added, "The function of the commission is to open the lines of communication between the three towns relative to tri-town issues, such as the sewer connection proposals."

With regard to the state Open Meeting Law, John Corbett, a specialist in the district attorney's office said, "The real question is, is it a 'governmental body'? I would have to get a very broad definition of what their function is before I would venture to give an opinion about that."

According to the state Open Meeting Law, a government body is, "every board, commission, committee or subcommittee of any district, city, region or town, however elected, appointed or otherwise constituted, and the governing board of a local housing, redevelopment or similar authority."

Corbett said he would check up on the group to determine whether there may have been a violation with last Thursday's closed meeting.

For others, the issue was more clearly the business at hand.

"I'll go with it, open or closed," DeSantis said, "anything to expedite this program."

He added, "To help expedite the project, the tri-town commission, together with the sewer commissioners from the three involved towns, will approach state Senator William Golden to ask him to help expedite the funding of an inflow and infiltration (I&I) study in Hull."

DeSantis explained, because the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has been slow to disperse the funds available, "the I&I study seems to be a stumbling block for finalizing this agreement; if that's the case, we would certainly like to get those funds moving."

He added, "I feel optimistic."

John Brandt, chairman of the Hingham sewer commission offered a differing viewpoint of the closed session.

"This meeting was simply a restatement of the long-standing requests of both the Cohasset and Hingham to gain access to the Hull treatment system," he said.

"Hull, from the very beginning has never said, 'No,' but they always have seemed to have a great many things they had to resolve before they could consider saying 'Yes.'"

Brandt added, "It appears to me, the likelihood of all these problems getting resolved in time for us to do something within the near future, is very slim.

Abutters protest railroad revitalization

About 35 residents, mostly abutters to the Old Colony railroad tracks, last week registered their opposition to the revitilization of the commuter train.

But if "all goes according to order," a consultant for the Old Colony project predicted the railroad could return between 1990 and 1991.

The MBTA sponsored a public involvement meeting last week at the town hall, in which project consultants invited comments and concerns from residents. A series of these meetings, held throughout the proposed Greenbush line into Scituate, will be scheduled before an environmental report is presented to the Department of Environmental Management.

The only decision made by the conclusion of last week's meeting, was that a preliminary proposal to locate a transfer station near the Music Circus property, was abandoned. Project consultant Stephen Polechronis said a number of factors, including the intolerable increase of traffic on Sohier Street, and a potential problem in securing an agreement to use the land, defeated the advantages of such a station.

But several residents argued that none of the station proposals, including one in Village and a potential site on Rte. 3A adjacent to the skating rink, would be endorsed by Cohasset residents.

Polechronis emphasized that the three sites were simply preliminary proposals for stations in Cohasset, and that further studies would indicate whether they would be viable alternatives.

Speaking about the Rte. 3A station, some residents wondered if it would serve more out-of-towners than Cohasset residents. David Wadsworth of Summer Street noted, "that intersection at North Main Street and Forest Avenue is one of the more dangerous in town, and I think you'd be talking about additional traffic from Hull onto Rte. 3A."

But Polechronis said although he would like to see traffic off Forest Avenue, a station on Rte. 3A could accommodate more parking than anything currently proposed within Hingham.

When asked if things were looking dim to locate a station in Hingham, the consultant replied, "There are some very complex issues in Hingham. There's a great deal of controversy." He noted that a proposal to locate a station at the former ammunition depot is not viable because restrictions on the property's deed.

Burt Pratt enumerated the environmental problems with locating a station near Great Swamp by the Music Circus. He also noted that the parking lot within the Village is always filled with cars. "And they're still building in the Village which they can do without on-site parking. I don't see any of these three sites as useable. I hope they never put the railroad through Cohasset," he said to loud applause.

Polechronis said because of the restricted parking area in the Village, a station at that site could be used as a "walk-in" terminal only, where parking would be prohibited.

The consultant then stated, "it's my sense that right now, the station site that does not make a lot of sense is the Music Circus site."

"And downtown,too," someone yelled from the town hall audience.

Wayne Sawchuck of Beechwood Street supported Pratt's claims and added, "downtown is so congested now. You're going to have people coming and going and being dropped off. It doesn't seem to make sense."

"But," Polechronis said, "you will find that many business people approve of people coming off a train near the center of town near their stores.

"We are not endorsing a downtown station. All we are saying is that only one station site, on Sohier Street, does not merit further study. In our meetings with selectmen and the planning board, they expressed interest in the study of a downtown site. This is just to do the analysis."

Jean Gormley noted, "I would like to see a downtown station that I could walk to. But you couldn't get more parking in there physically."

One resident said he would "love to see the trains come back. For 16 years I have abutted the railroad on South Main Street and I have an office on Ripley Road."

But Sabrina Noering answered, "I would like this meeting to go on record as not endorsing the downtown site. You're the one saying downtown merits analysis, not us."

John O'Toole, a member of the planning board, asked Polechronis to ask for a show of hands, indicating what plan the residents favored.

Polechronis refused, adding, "the purpose of this meeting is to know what we should address (in the environmental study). We have a serious transportation problem and it's going to get worse (with more development planned for Boston). So you can't walk away from the problem."

Several residents urged the state to look into expanding the commuter boat service now operating from Hingham and Hull into Boston. But the consultant explained that once outside of Hull, the boat must be navigable in deep water. A boat of that capacity is expensive, he said, adding, "But we won't rule it out."

Several residents encouraged increased use of the Plymouth-Brockton buses, and said a Quincy destination would serve many South Shore residents.

Polechronis said he would take the information gathered from last week's meeting and begin to formulate an environmental analysis. There will be additional meetings on the topic in Cohasset in January, he said.

Figueiredo court case scheduled to Oct. 9

The court case between the town and Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo continues. Although a court hearing was scheduled for Sept. 24, a hearing on the contempt of court complaint filed by the town against the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has been rescheduled to Oct. 9.

In August, DEQE ruled that Figueiredo may place floats alongside his property on Parker Avenue. But the town subsequently filed a contempt of court complaint, charging DEQE ignored a previous court injunction prohibiting the floats.

The original court case began in 1979 when a preliminary injunction was issued by the probate court, preventing Figueiredo from placing any moorings or floats in Cohasset Harbor. Harbormaster Harry Ritter had determined private moorings along Bailey Creek at Parker Avenue would take up valuable town-owned mooring space and reduce navigation within the harbor.

The case was brought to trial in October, 1983 in a two-day hearing. The judge, after viewing the harbor, issued a permanent injunction against Figueiredo. The decision, issued February 24, prohibited the Parker Avenue resident from placing any floats below the mean low water level at Bailey's Creek.

According to Figueiredo's attorney, Chester Janiak, on June 16 the harbormaster requested that Figueiredo make a formal application to install the floats at Bailey's Creek. He rejected those plans June 26 with an order to remove them within 30 days.

That's when Janiak went to Superior Court to appeal that decision to the DEQE. On Sept. 4, DEQE rendered its decision, allowing the floats in Bailey's Creek, and issuing a precise configuration for those floats.

The town then proceeded to file a contempt of court complaint against DEQE in Norfolk County Probate Court. The hearing will be held Oct. 9 in Wrentham District Court.

"The town is saying that Mr. Figueiredo's floats are below mean water level. But the DEQE has said the floats are no problem. The Harbormaster says one thing, and the DEQE says Mr. Figueiredo can keep them," Janiak explained.

The DEQE is satisfied, he added, that Figueiredo can accommodate 37 boats at Bailey's Creek while the town actually gains more navigable space in that area of the harbor.

"No one, not the Coast Guard, the Army Corps of Engineers or the DEQE has ever complained about the floats. And they have that authority under Chapter 91, Section 10A," the attorney noted.

But the town's special counsel for this case, Mark DeGiacomo, has stated the town filed the contempt complaint because it did not abide by the previous permanent injunction, prohibiting the floats. "The executive branch of the government has, in effect, chosen to ignore the judicial branch of government," he stated.

The harbormaster's only concern, he noted, is the loss of valuable mooring spaces in the harbor if the floats are allowed to remain in the creek.

Atty. Janiak explained that depending on the probate court's findings, the case may not yet be closed. "It depends on what either side does, which depends on what the judge does. If it's an adverse decision for either side, there can be subsequent appeal," he said.

Cohasset equestrian entry

Abigail Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Adams of Cohasset, has qualified to compete in the most prestigious equestrian events in the country.

At the national level, Abby and her mare Waltzing Wave, will travel to the U.S. Equestrian Team headquarters in Gladstone, NJ to compete for the USET Medal.

Abby has also qualified for the American Horse Show Association Medal Finals to be held at the Pennsylvania National Horse Show. In addition, Abby is eligible for the ASPCA Maclay finals at Madison Square Garden in New York.

On the local level Abby will participate in the Mass Horsemen's Council Finals and the New England Horsemen's Council Medal Finals.

To be eligible for these final events the riders are required to win a series of blue ribbons in the particular event; a difficult task with over 30 riders in each class.

Abby and Wave have been exclusively trained by Carl Catani at his stable River Wind Farm in Pembroke. Carl and Abby will be traveling with several other of Carl's students to the Finals.

Figueiredo court case scheduled to Oct. 9

The court case between the town and Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo continues. Although a court hearing was scheduled for Sept. 24, a hearing on the contempt of court complaint filed by the town against the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has been rescheduled to Oct. 9.

In August, DEQE ruled that Figueiredo may place floats alongside his property on Parker Avenue. But the town subsequently filed a contempt of court complaint, charging DEQE ignored a previous court injunction prohibiting the floats.

The original court case began in 1979 when a preliminary injunction was issued by the probate court, preventing Figueiredo from placing any moorings or floats in Cohasset Harbor. Harbormaster Harry Ritter had determined private moorings along Bailey Creek at Parker Avenue would take up valuable town-owned mooring space and reduce navigation within the harbor.

The case was brought to trial in October, 1983 in a two-day hearing. The judge, after viewing the harbor, issued a permanent injunction against Figueiredo. The decision, issued February 24, prohibited the Parker Avenue resident from placing any floats below the mean low water level at Bailey's Creek.

According to Figueiredo's attorney, Chester Janiak, on June 16 the harbormaster requested that Figueiredo make a formal application to install the floats at Bailey's Creek. He rejected those plans June 26 with an order to remove them within 30 days.

That's when Janiak went to Superior Court to appeal that decision to the DEQE. On Sept. 4, DEQE rendered its decision, allowing the floats in Bailey's Creek, and issuing a precise configuration for those floats.

The town then proceeded to file a contempt of court complaint against DEQE in Norfolk County Probate Court. The hearing will be held Oct. 9 in Wrentham District Court.

"The town is saying that Mr. Figueiredo's floats are below mean water level. But the DEQE has said the floats are no problem. The Harbormaster says one thing, and the DEQE says Mr. Figueiredo can keep them," Janiak explained.

The DEQE is satisfied, he added, that Figueiredo can accommodate 37 boats at Bailey's Creek while the town actually gains more navigable space in that area of the harbor.

"No one, not the Coast Guard, the Army Corps of Engineers or the DEQE has ever complained about the floats. And they have that authority under Chapter 91, Section 10A," the attorney noted.

But the town's special counsel for this case, Mark DeGiacomo, has stated the town filed the contempt complaint because it did not abide by the previous permanent injunction, prohibiting the floats. "The executive branch of the government has, in effect, chosen to ignore the judicial branch of government," he stated.

The harbormaster's only concern, he noted, is the loss of valuable mooring spaces in the harbor if the floats are allowed to remain in the creek.

Atty. Janiak explained that depending on the probate court's findings, the case may not yet be closed. "It depends on what either side does, which depends on what the judge does. If it's an adverse decision for either side, there can be subsequent appeal," he said.

Cohasset equestrian entry

Abigail Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Adams of Cohasset, has qualified to compete in the most prestigious equestrian events in the country.

At the national level, Abby and her mare Waltzing Wave, will travel to the U.S. Equestrian Team headquarters in Gladstone, NJ to compete for the USET Medal.

Abby has also qualified for the American Horse Show Association Medal Finals to be held at the Pennsylvania National Horse Show. In addition, Abby is eligible for the ASPCA Maclay finals at Madison Square Garden in New York.

On the local level Abby will participate in the Mass Horsemen's Council Finals and the New England Horsemen's Council Medal Finals.

To be eligible for these final events the riders are required to win a series of blue ribbons in the particular event; a difficult task with over 30 riders in each class.

Abby and Wave have been exclusively trained by Carl Catani at his stable River Wind Farm in Pembroke. Carl and Abby will be traveling with several other of Carl's students to the Finals.

'Strutters' walk, talk to better health maker. But he loves his walking and doesn't want to stop. We have several people with high blood pressure. They feel that walking is very good for them."

Ann agrees. "Absolutely," she says. "It's been proven that walking gets the circulation going — it gets the blood pumping throughout the body. Lots of people with high blood pressure love to walk."

And, as Jane notes, walking is just about the cheapest sport anyone can undertake. All it takes is a good pair of sneakers. "That's something we tell everyone at the beginning," Kathy says. "Everyone must have a really good pair of sneakers — it's very important."

"I think a lot of the people who walk with me actually feel better because of it," Jane says. There are people with us who have arthritis. But they keep right at it. One person is overweight and has arthritis, but she won't stop."

Ann interjects, "We have one woman who loves walking with us. She's a smoker, but she keeps right with the rest of us. When we finish we get on her about the smoking. We'll stop her yet!

"I think," Jane adds, "that the sociability helps us as much as the exercise. It helps with our problems. It helps get them off our fannies and gives them the motivation to continue."

Cohasset's walking club, now tagged the Cohasset Strutters, began last April. Little by little, more seniors joined as they saw neighbors and friends walk in small groups around town. Now they number 50, with more anticipated during the current fall registration. But there's always room for more.

"We'd like to reach everyone," Kathy states. "This is probably our most popular offering at the center — it's something everyone can enjoy."

The walking groups are registered and sponsored by the state Department of Elder Affairs. The program is called Keep Moving. As Kathy explains, Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard Rowland has felt a great need to bring seniors together, particularly in activities and programs that combine socialization with exercise.

"For most people," Jane says, "it is the sociability more than the physical end that brings them out. I really move out there, and so does Ann, along with about three or four others. But when we're with a group, there will always be stragglers. So we tell them to stop and rest, and then they keep moving."

"We tell them at first to walk at their own pace," Ann adds. "You really have to motivate yourself to exercise — so it's best to start out at your own, easy pace."

Both walkers agree that most people who try walking, even those overweight ailing residents, continue.

Men and women, in their sixties and older, have joined their walking groups. "We'd love to have more men in the program," they add.

This will be their first winter, so they don't know how often the group will remain outside "walking over snow piles."

But until then, each Friday morning the walkers are 'rewarded' with a fun walk in a different location of their choice. The walkers assemble at the center at 9 a.m. and are carpooled to another location, such as Nantasket Beach or Wompatuck State Park or World's End in Hingham. It's a different locale, usually a different town, to add to the fun of exercise.

This Friday, a group will head out toward Quincy and the Beechwood Community Life Center. There, they will view photographs of the 14 Cohasset seniors who participated in last week's Governor's Cup walk in Boston.

Although no one from Cohasset won that race, it was a great opportunity to meet hundreds of other seniors from throughout the state. Each year, the walk is held around the Boston Common. Cohasset seniors participated in the three-mile course.

Everyone had a great time, according to Ann and Jane. Ann even held out her too-large official t-shirt for race sponsor Bobby Orr to sign. "They tried to push us away, but I got him to sign it," she laughs.

It was an opportunity, they agree, to meet other interesting seniors from many other communities. And maybe next year, they add, the Cohasset Strutters may capture a few record-breaking titles.

Among the seniors who participated in the Boston walk with Ann and Jane were: Pat Hanlon, Virginia Anderson, Eleanor Albert, Helen Brandt, Lillian Lincoln, Margaret Taylor, Shirley Laidlaw, Dorothy Roberts, Mary Migliaccio, Ruth White, Jackie Moores, Connie Merritt and Selectman Diane Sullivan.

Anyone who would like to sign up for the Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday morning walking groups, contact the senior center for registration information.

Selectmen's briefs

Police appointments Oct. 6

Selectmen were in a closed executive session Monday night until almost 10 p.m., discussing pending litigation and the reputation of a person. The posted meeting time was set at 7:30 p.m.

Although about 15 residents waited outside until the meeting was opened to the public, a few left when selectmen said more background information was needed before appointments to the police department could be made. Selectmen chairman Diane Sullivan said the appointments should be made at their next meeting, Oct. 6.

Towing bid awarded

The first item on the agenda was to award the annual contract for towing. Two local car repair stations bid on the contract, Schiavo Brothers and Cohasset Sunoco. The past year, the police department successfully used two garages on an alternate-week basis and it was successful, according to the executive Secretary Don Andrew.

But Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan objected to using Schiavo Brothers, saying, "We've sent the building inspector to your place many times. I think that place, which is in a residential area, is an eyesore."

Thomas Schiavo argued that every time the inspector comes to the property, no violations are cited.

"But you haven't cooperated at all," she answered. "And the people down there have to look at it. I don't think it's very nice."

Selectman Clifford Mitman suggested a contract should not be withheld because of alleged violations dealing with the building inspector. "What do you call it, aesthetic violations?" he questioned.

Selectman James Gallagher asked that Schiavo keep the place clean, then motioned to have the contract awarded to the two firms. Rocco Laugelle abstained from the vote, and Sullivan voted against it. The contract was approved by a majority of two votes.

No bridge extension

J.M. Cashman of Weymouth, the contractor completing work on the Border Street bridge, has asked for a second extension until Oct. 4. The bridge, which was originally scheduled for completion Aug. 31, was delayed because filming of The Witches of Eastwick was being completed along the structure. The extension was granted to Sept. 20.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew said the state, which is paying most of the construction costs, will want to know the specific reasons for the delay. None were cited on the application for extension.

According to the state Department of Public Works, if an extension is granted, the town may be liable for all additional engineering work. That is about $140 a day, Andrew said.

"We should ask the contractor to pick up those fees. We've already given them one extension," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said. The board decided to wait on the delay request until the reasons are specified by the contractor.

Constitutional committee

Selectmen this week appointed the following persons to the U.S. Constitution Bicentennial Committee: David Wadsworth, who will serve as chairman pro tem, Sam Polito, Agnes McCann, David Chittim, Mary Jane McArthur, and A.J. Antoine. One more person is needed for that committee.

New Summer Street solution

Highway surveyor Harold Litchfield will review the traffic problem on the Border Street curve on Summer Street, and will present his recommendations for improving that intersection. Residents of that small section of Summer Street have complained about speeding cars that travel through that area of land to Border Street and the harbor. Resident Peter Wood suggested this week that a right angle turn from the telephone pole at the beginning of the curb be constructed into the small section of street. That would prevent most Summer Street traffic from coming onto the hilly curved section, he said.

Selectmen, who have discussed this issue for several weeks, with the Summer Street residents, agreed to have Harold Litchfield look at that recommendation. If there is no money in the DPW budget this year, he will have to appropriate it for next year. If the money is there, selectmen said the project should be completed before winter.

Heirloom Day October 11

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an "Heirloom Discovery Day" antiques appraisal day at the Society's headquarters the Caleb Lothrop House, Saturday, Oct. 11 from 10 till 2 p.m.

Representatives of the Appraisal and Auction firm of Robert Skinner Inc. and of Del Greco Coins Inc. will be on hand to appraise antiques, artworks, books, toys, coins and many other types of collectables. Cost of appraisal for all but coins will be $7 per item. For coins the minimum charge will be $2.

Anyone wishing to have old, unusual or specially prized articles appraised by some of New England's leading experts should put this date on their calendar. Proceeds are for the benefit of the Historical Society.

Plan to attend the Cohasset Historical Society's "Heirloom Discovery Day" at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

☐ Congratulations to Kathleen Stanford on her recent engagement to Frank Sullivan of Braintree. Kathleen was proposed to a week ago, and she and Frank have set the date for sometime next September. What an exciting time for all, can't you just see the Stanford family now? Sure to be a large wedding party...

☐ Paul and Karen Fiori are walking around in the clouds since the recent birth of their new baby daughter, to say nothing of the new grandparents, Leo and Mary Fiori. Leo swears she is the prettiest baby girl that he has ever seen! But, don't ask to see pictures yet, last I knew they were enroute from the hospital, and are anxiously awaited by all! I'm sure Leo will show them to you upon request the minute that they arrive...

☐ James Patrick Walsh and Eric Maki are certainly to be commended as our school's two National Merit Scholarship semifinalists. National Merit letters of commendation went to Robert A. Durkin, Scott Fitzsimmons, Lisa M. Gallagher, Lee T. Lacks, Nancy E. Lincoln, Nicole E. Prisble, Susan H. Riley, and David H. Thomas. What a fine representation of students from CHS, everyone should be proud of the scholars and their efforts, as well as our High Schoiol teachers and administrators for "teaching them all that they know."

☐ Bethany Quinton is certainly on her way to becoming a star in the skating world! She was entered in the USFSA Skating Competition recently, and skated away with a gold medal. The event took place in Boston and she won her flight. Bethany is nine years old, and has been in competition for two years. Get this one—in nine competitions she has won nine medals. Bethany is a student at Deer Hill School. Sounds like the Quintons will have to put on a trophy room if Bethany continues her winning ways! Continued success to you Bethany, we'll be watching your progress.

☐ What a crowd turned out for the football game last Friday night in Millis. In case you missed it, CHS did an outstanding job and won it 21-7. Craig Mulcahy scored his first "big league" touchdown with a fantastic catch, and Bob Durkin was awesome, as this weeks papers are sure to mention. People are starting to talk Super Bowl, sure would be grand!

☐ Happy birthday to Sue Fone, her big day is October 8th, so be sure to give her your "condolences" when you see her "around town".

☐ Congratulations to Erik Waal, who was a winner in the Reading Game's recent PRIDE contest held in Braintree. Erik received his award for reading 25 1/2 hours over a three week period. That's a lot of reading for a seventh grader, he's sure to be a success in life.

☐ Don't forget, tonight is Open House at Deer Hill School, with the Osgood School holding their's next week (on Tuesday night to be exact).

☐ Kevin Dunn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kearin Dunn (yes, one of our favorite math teachers at CHS), is on the soccer team at SMU. Another former CHS alumunus makes the big time, our hats go off to you Kevin! And we wish you continued success!

☐ Congratulations go out to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Perroncello, who recently celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary. We understand that they were surprised with a nice party at the Western to honor the occasion, what a treat that must have been!

☐ That's the news from here, be sure to get yours into us so that we can read about your happenings! Everyone loves it.

The Three O's Of Eye Care

Where should you go for your eye care? The choice can be confusing. First, the three main providers of eye-related services must be defined.

An Optometrist is an eye doctor, who is a graduate of a four-year, postgraduate professional optometry school. Extensive training in the human visual system and abnormal ocular conditions are stressed. Clinical experience in the detection and diagnosis of eye diseases and exposure to their treatment is gained during this 4-year period. Complete training in the fitting and follow-up care of contact lenses is also acquired.

An Optician is a skilled craft person and professional, whose area of expertise is the designing, manufacturing and dispensing of eye glasses. This can be accomplished through a 3-year apprenticeship program or schooling. Most technical school programs are two-year in duration, after which opticians must obtain a state license by passing a written and practical examination.

An Ophthalmologist is an eye surgeon, a graduate of medical school, who specializes in the medical and surgical treatment of eye disease.

The incidence of eye disease in the general population is only about 5-7%. Optometrists are trained to provide care to the vast majority of people who need a good, comprehensive eye examiniation, including the screening for important eye diseases (i.e. glaucoma, cataracts) and the status of the visual system in day to day use (i.e., driving, reading, computer work). Also optometrists are trained to screen and detect serious eye problems and refer patients to the appropriate specialists.

Primary Care is defined as the first point of entry into the health care network. Todays optometrists are well trained to meet the challenge.

No good reason

The recently re-established Tri-Town Commission met last week at Hingham Town Hall. Town officials from Hull, Hingham and Cohasset met to discuss common problems and goals regarding their collective sewer problems.

Only one selectman from each town participated in the meeting, so as not to have a quorum from one town's board. If there was a quorum, the meeting would have to be duly posted and opened to the public until a vote from the board closed the session.

And the participants of this commission did not want to have an open meeting.

Members of the press, anxious to learn of the latest developments concerning the towns' sewer woes, were barred from the meeting. Hingham Town Counsel George Ford had previously prepared a written statement, outlining the reasons why this meeting could be legally held behind closed doors.

The state's Open Meeting Law, created to enable open, representative discussions of town agencies and boards, is also open to interpretation. Whether or not this commission falls into the definition of 'governmental body' was the deciding factor in the town officials' move to close this meeting to the public.

According to the state law, a governmental body is "every board, commission, committee or subcommittee of any district, city, region or town, however elected, appointed or otherwise constituted." If the Tri-Town falls under that category, which is subject to interpretation, then they would have to follow the provisions of the Open Meeting Law.

Town Counsel Ford and others may correctly argue that this commission may continually meet in closed session. But for reasons other than strict adherence to the law, we object.

For instance, how would the newly-formed South Shore Coalition be defined? It is a mixed group of representatives from 11 South Shore towns, meeting to discuss topics of urgency that affect this region.

They meet in open session. The press and the public are welcome to attend.

Is this a governmental body? If not, why do they choose to open their doors, when this smaller, more limited group shuts it tight?

There are many issues of importance affecting these three neighboring towns. These issues affect all residents in the three communities, and they have a right to know about the discussions held by officials in their capacity as town representatives.

Discussions about pending litigation or specific contract language, should correctly be excluded from open meetings. But our town officials should use this exclusive section of the law prohibitively. Occasions when the public is not allowed to hear what their representatives are saying should be few and far between. Officials are elected to complete the town's business, but not in secret.

As we have stated, the Tri-Town Commission may have every legal right to discuss the sewer issue in private. We agree this is a grey area of the Open Meeting Law, and allow them this loophole to jump into.

But wouldn't it be more comforting to know our town officials didn't opt for that loophole? Elected officials who push to bar the public from their meetings, deserve a closer watch than those closed doors will allow.

Cohasset Mariner

The Mariner (and supplements) is a paid circulation newspaper published every Thursday at 58 Main St., Marshfield, Mass. 02050 for and about the residents of Cohasset. Letters

Several town departments efforts praised

To the Editor:

After twenty seven years we have moved from Cohasset. In looking over those years we felt that a letter to the town and others in the town who have helped us was in order.

While at times we have disagreed with different town departments we still have appreciated that through their efforts we can say "Thank You".

Thank You to the Cohasset schools which educated four of our daughters in such a manner that they went on to college well prepared and elminating some courses in college that they had completed in High School.

Thank You to the Police and Fire Departments who were always there when we needed them which thankfully was not often.

A special "Thanks" to the Highway Department who were always on the job. Sanding, plowing, filling pot holes and making sure that Cohasset roads were the finest on the South Shore.

Thank You to people like Earl McArthur, who answered every call night or day. Earl Higgings who completed our new home so we could move in on time. Fran Mitchell for his service once again whether it was day or night, snow or rain. Chris Ford and Gene Price, the two realtors, who worked to make the sale a pleasant one to both buyer and seller.

Last but not least a special "Thanks" to the best neighbors one could ever ask for.

Thank You Cohasset, we have enjoyed being a part of you for over a quarter of a century.

Conference oversight

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Mariner newspapers for providing such thorough and thoughtful coverage to the September 13 South Shore Coalition conference. The all-day conference, sponsored by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and the Coalition, was an enormous success thanks, in part, to the impressive turnout of local officials and interested citizens from the towns of the South Shore.

The one notable oversight of your various articles was the failure to report on what was, for many of us, the high point of the conference — Marshfield's Jay O'Callaghan's telling of his original story created especially for the conference. Jay generously agreed to be part of the program to help us capture the spirit of the South Shore and the need for regional cooperation. This he did with a moving and entertaining tale filled with the people, places and history of the South Shore.

We were extremely fortunate to have had someone of Jay's reknown and skill help us capture the purpose and spirit of the South Shore Coalition.

Sincerely,
Joel B. Bard

Recreation Department sponsors ski trips

The Cohasset Recreation Department has scheduled five ski trips for the 1986-87 season.

Individual registration notices will be released about one month prior to the actual date of the trip. Telephone registrations will be accepted; however, payment will be considered the confirmation of registration—all payments are due two weeks before the trip date.

Except for the first trip to Loon Mountain on Dec. 7, the twentieth person to register for each trip will receive a free ski trip. All these trips will be chaperoned by a minimum of two adults who will be volunteer staff of the Cohasset Recreation Department. Equipment rental prices will vary as will the costs for each trip.

The schedule is as follows, but could be subject to change due to prevailing weather and snow conditions on the trip date.

Sunday, December 7, Loon Mountain
Monday, January 19, Gunstock (Martin Luther King Day)
Sunday, February 1, Pat's Peak.
Sunday, February 22, King's Ridge
Sunday, March 15, Gunstock

Prices will be announced with the individual registrations. Most trips will be between $28 and $35. The Recreation Department does not intend to make any proceeds from ski trips, hence, the trip cost will reflect the per capita cost of transportation and lift ticket. Rentals vary but are generally $12 per person. Also, ski lessons are always available, vary in price, but usually are about $6 for a group lesson.

Buses will generally leave the Cohasset Town Hall at 5:30 a.m. and return to the Town Hall by 7:30 p.m. Payments must be by check, made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Refunds for non-participation will be given if 24 hours notice is served—refunds will be given for lift ticket costs, but not bus cost, if no notice is given. The recreation office will be open at both the morning departure time and again for the evening arrival time.

Trips are for all aged students and usually all levels of competence. Chaperones are available to help less experienced participants with any problems they might encounter. Should a participant feel uneasy about skiing it is advised that they sign up for a lesson before they attempt the slopes. Lessons are most always available for all levels of instruction, and those interested in taking a lesson should indicate so at the time of registration.

Bay Bank makes donation to Pratt Library

The newest bank in town, BayBank at the Cushing Plaza, marked its official opening Sept. 20 with a unique ceremony.

Instead of the usual ribbon-cutting, bank officers and town officials participated in an unusual event. The ribbon which was cut by the officials was lined with $20 bills. A total of $400, or 20 of the $20 bills, were attached to the ribbon stretching across the front door of the Cushing Plaza building.

The entire amount was donated by BayBank to Cohasset's Paul Pratt Memorial Library, to be used toward the acquisition of more books.

Library director Richard Hayes thanked Trumbull Curtis, president of BayBank. "With 250 users each day, with 70 percent of the households as active users of the Library, making nearly 100,000 loans a year, you may be assured that your gift will go to a good purpose serving a wide audience in our community," he said.

"Welcome to Cohasset," Hayes added. "It's good to see such an excellent business enterprise as BayBank come to town. The Library Trustees and staff are encouraged by your demonstration of friendship. We are pleased to extend to BayBank, in the name of Jean E. Casey, manager of your Cohasset branch, an honorary corporate membership in the Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc. This is a private, nonprofit charitable corporation established by the people of Cohasset to support and strengthen library services."

Through discussion and tasting, he will examine the following topics: What is wine, the wine making process, sparkling production, critical analysis, and the ten components of wine tasting. The intent of the course is to illustrate that the subject of wine does not have to be intimidating but, rather, is an easy understanding to be further explored. The best way to learn about wine is to taste, and we will be tasting thirty or more wines throughout the course.

Classes are from 7 to 8:30 on Monday evenings and from 7 to 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. This class runs on a continuing basis for eight week periods. The Old China Trade 1784-1842—will be discussed by Ellen Woolf on three Wednesdays starting on Oct. 8 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the afternoon. A fascinating and neglected period in American history is colorfully recreated in this comprehensive presentatin. Tea, silk and porcelain formed the backbone of the nineteenth century trade between the fledgling United States of America and the ancient civilization of China. From Boston to Baltimore, sailing ships carried cargoes across 10,000 miles of hazardous ocean, opening up distant new territories, building fortunes fir Yankee entrepreneurs, and finally, creating a financial and cultural impasse that ended in the Opium Wars and the passing of an era. Cost of this class is $20.

Republicans support more than two-term president

By State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray
Special to the Mariner

House Republicans recently submitted a resolution in the Massachusetts House of Representatives that urges Congress to call a Constitutional Convention to consider a constitutional amendment to repeal the 22nd Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The 22nd Amendment, adopted by Congress in 1947 and ratified by the states in 1951, limits presidents to two full four-year, elected terms. If a president served less than two years of an unexpired term, he or she could still be elected to two full terms.

Massachusetts Republicans join a national effort now under way to remove the two-term limit. The movement was spearheaded by National Republican Congressional Committee Chairman Representative Guy Vander Jagt (R—Michigan), who introduced the repeal legislation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"The 22nd Amendment is an insult to American voters who are wise and well-informed . . .I believe . . .President Reagan is one of the greatest presidents in American history and that the American people overwhelmingly would return him to office for a third term," said Vander Jagt.

The United States was founded on the principle that the people would be allowed to determine who governs and for how long. Under the presidency of Ronald Reagan, we have seen a reemergence of the "American Dream," a revitalization of the economy and renewed commitment to the principles that made our nation great. To deny voters the opportunity to re-elect a president they feel is doing an excellent job is simply undemocratic.

Repeal of the 22nd Amendment would require positive votes by two-thirds of the Senate and House and then approval by three-fourths of the states.

One obvious reason for the repeal movement is to allow President Reagan an opportunity to seek a third term (Reagan, by the way, supports repeal of the limit not for himself, but for future presidents).

Repeal of the 22nd Amendment makes sense now and for the future. It is also the democratic thing to do. If you agree, contact your state and federal representatives and urge them to support this repeal movement.

There's a new spirit at CHS

The change in administration at the school brought a vice principal who welcomed his role as student council advisor.

"These kids are fantastic," John DeLorenzo says. "They are working together to make this year a success. I'm not sure what happened in the past, but we have active people, interested in what's going on here."

DeLorenzo had been student council advisor during his previous positions at Silver Lake Regional High School and at a New Jersey high school.

Although he downplays his involvement, the council officers said it's been with DeLorenzo's encouragement that enthusiasm for the school and the student body has spread.

"I think the whole student body is more aware of its student government now," Powell states.

"Right," Mahoney replies. "No one knew we were here. There was no cooperation between the students and their officers and the council and the administration."

"I'm really looking forward to this year," McNamara adds. "The principal and vice principal really care."

"I've had teachers walk up to me and say, 'it's great what the Student Council is doing.' I agree that the administration has helped us along the way. I meet almost every morning with Mr. DeLorenzo because we have so many things going on at once."

Among the upcoming events planned for the entire student body is School Spirit Week which begins the day after Columbus Day. Each day a separate activity is planned, such as Nerd Day, Pajama Day and Wannabe Day, where students dress according to the specific day's title. That Friday, a pep rally will be held in the gym where awards for the best costumes worn by teachers and students, will be given. A special plaque will honor the grade whose students have displayed the most school spirit, as evidenced by a section of gymnasium wall which will be decorated by each class in the school.

One of the on-going fundraising activities sponsored by the council is the installation of the new Coke machine. "The money we earn from that will help bail us out from the deficit we were left with from last year," Mahoney explains.

A portable television and radio, given by the school's custodian, was raffled off for 50 cents a ticket. The drawing will be made during Saturday's game against Scituate. "That made money for us, too," he adds.

The proceeds from various activities will help support a variety of activities. As DeLorenzo explains, if a certain class wants to go on a field trip but can't meet the expenses, the Student Council may be able to help out. Senior expenses with the prom and yearbooks may be another avenue to deposit the funds throughout the year.

McNamara and Powell are the council's representatives to the school committee. They are required to attend committee meetings to report student concerns and issues to the members.

"I think at the beginning of the year, a lot of students were concerned with the new administration. They were enforcing rules that had never been enforced. It is stricter now, but it's definitely better," McNamara states.

"It's worked out nice," Powell says. "Most have learned that if we respect the teachers and the school, the administration will respect the students.

"They know now that if they have something to say, the administration will listen. If there is a problem, the rules can be bent to help someone. I don't think anyone in this school is afraid to talk with Miss Gallagher or Mr. DeLorenzo."

Their advisor outlines the numerous activities planned for the seventh through 12th grade members of the council. October 22 will be a day-long leadership training program lead by Paul Bernard of Westbrook College. Through discussion sessions he will explain to the officers how a representative student government should function.

Cindy Bell and Jay Marsac will travel once a month to the state house to meet with members of student councils from throughout the state. They will discuss a variety of legislation and "how they make a difference as students," DeLorenzo explains.

The Cohasset council will sponsor a schoolwide assembly Nov. 12 for grades 7-12, called "Everyday's Heroes." The multi-media program discusses how individuals "must strive to do the best they can - to be the best they can in everyday life," the council advisor says.

"They're really trying," DeLorenzo adds," to do everything they should do for this school and the students they represent. They are representative of everyone in this school. Any activity within this school must pass through the council. And anything we can give - information, or by listening to their problems, we will do for the students."

Lepidoptera takes wing

Jeremy Begley, a fifth grade student in the Open Space classroom at Deer Hill, brought to school this past week a beautiful Monarch butterfly.

Jeremy told the members of his class that he and his family had found a number of the caterpillars while visiting Cape Cod during the summer and had brought them home. Most of the caterpillars formed the jade green oval cocoons typical of the Monarch. Several of these then hatched and after a few hours, during which the butterflies pumped fluid into their wings, they were ready for flight.

Jeremy, his teachers, and classmates, all watched from inside the Deer Hill courtyard as this newest of his butterflies took its maiden flight: It soared up over the birch tree heading toward the light and warmth of the sun before beginning its migration toward Mexico.

World cultures studies

This is the second year of a new 2 year program in world cultures at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School. All the 7th and 8th Graders are required to take this in-depth offering.

During their two-year study, junior high school students will examine physical geography and the culture of the United States, the Western Hemisphere, the Pacific area, western Europe, the U.S.S.R. and eastern Europe, Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, the Middle East and North Africa. All aspects of a religion's culture will be studied. Emphasis will be placed upon the geography of each area of the world.

Recent national studies have indicated that America's high school students were deficient in their overall knowledge of geography. According to Social Studies Department head, Edward F. Sheehan, "our new program will go a long way to assist our students to gain in depth knowledge of our world and its peoples."

Three members of the Social Studies Department are presently teaching this new program. They are: Joseph Bouchard, Edward MacDermott, and Donald Kelly.

Over the past summer new map kits have been purchased and they are presently being used by world cultures students in both the 7th and 8th Grades.

Walk-In classes

"Walk-In" classes have begun at the Jr.-Sr. High School. Classes are offered throughout the day in art, music; home-ec, shop etc. These classes allow students in study halls to explore various areas. Students should check the halls for posters or check directly with the teachers to be involved.

Saks stars

Three Cohasset High School students have been chosen to sit on the Fashion Board of Saks Fifth Avenue for the 1986-87 season. They are: Tracy Lowenhagen, Keri Cullinane and Michelle Meagher. Congratulations!

Soccer team gears up for tough Scituate game

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

Boys' soccer

Wednesday, the boys crushed Hanover, 6-0. Coach Dan Magner was pleased with the way in which his team played and felt the key to the victory was Cohasset's tough defense which created good offensive opportunities. Magner also felt his team far outhustled Hanover which led to an explosive offense.

Ian Smart led the team on offense with two goals followed by Todd Fitzpatrick who had a goal and two assists. David Shultz, Ned Chase and Kostas Roukonakis all picked up goals for Cohasset as well.

Magner was especially happy with the defensive efforts of John Reidy, John Linsley, and David Shultz. Goalie Joel Reidy picked up his third shutout of the season. Forwards, Jim Reidy and Ian Smart played well up front and put alot of offensive pressure on Hanover.

This Tuesday the boys will travel to Whitman/Hanson and take on one of the weaker teams in the league. Saturday at 9 a.m. on Milliken Field Cohasset faces one of their toughest challenges of the season—Scituate.

Magner feels his team must play its best game possible in order to beat this talented and undefeated team. However, Magner is hopeful this will indeed happen. Monday, the Skippers take on yet another tough team, Rockland. But the boys are capable of winning this game as well.

Girls' soccer

Thursday, the girls lost a tough game to Abington, 2-0. Abington is the leading team in the league, and Cohasset, according to Coach Kennan Startzell, played better than any other team against tough opponents. In fact, the Skippers kept Abington from scoring until 20 minutes had gone by in the second half. Startzell was pleased with his team's efforts and was especially happy with the way his defense played under constant pressure.

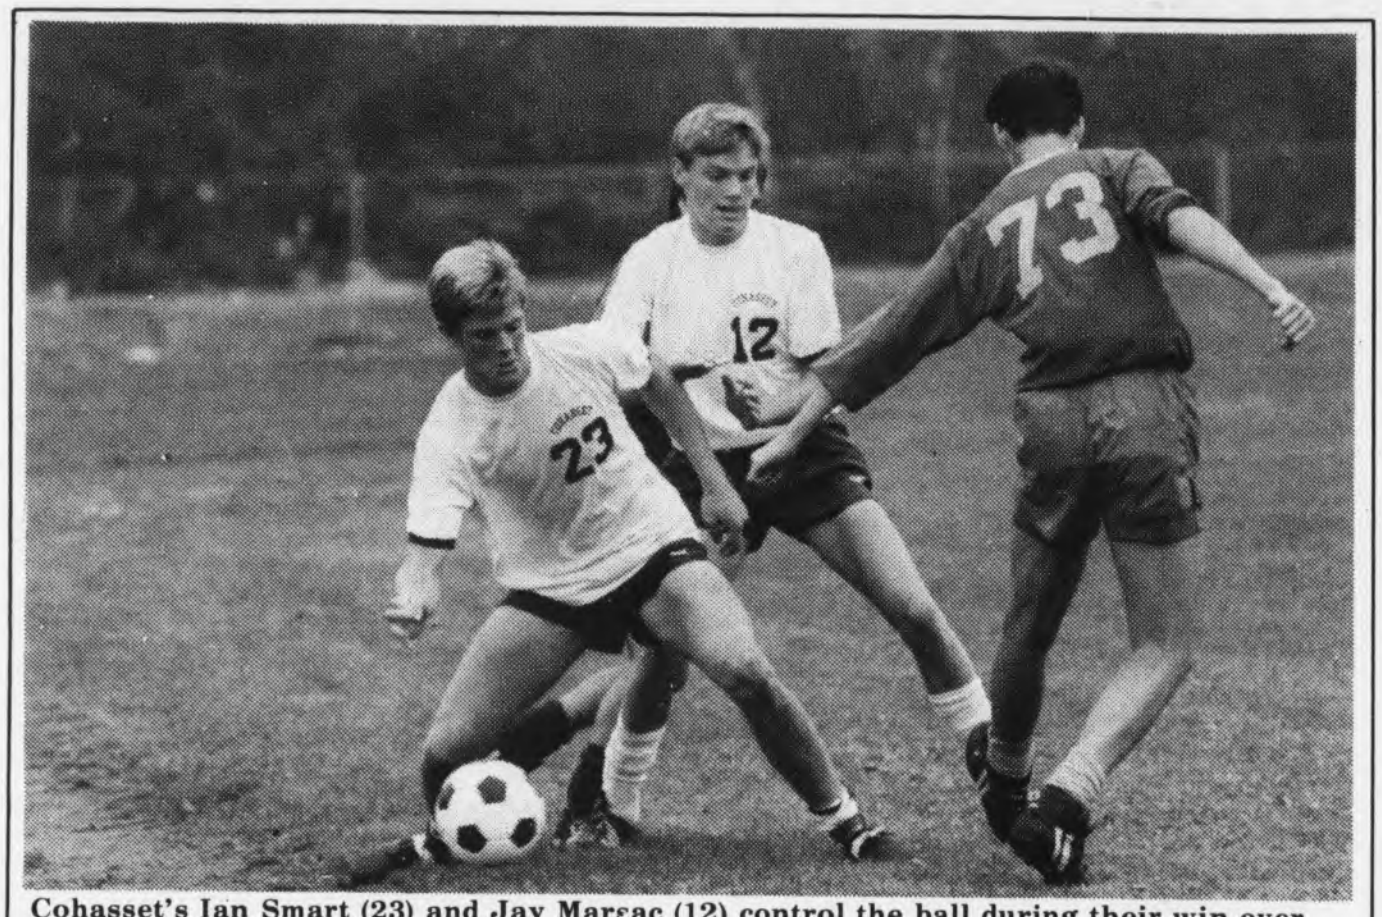
Katie Lord did a fantastic job on defense and contained the league's highest scorer. Vicky Kelly also had a tremendous game off the bench.

Monday, the girls blew past Scituate 3-1. Startzell felt confident that Cohasset was definitely the better team in this contest, and he felt his team showed its superiority by outplaying Scituate the entire game.

Karin Anglin headed the ball into the net off Kerri Kirkendall's corner kick to put Cohasset ahead, 1-0. Scituate then tied the game at one apiece. However, Liz O'Leary scored midway through the second half to give Cohasset the lead for good. Susan Riley knocked in the Skippers' third and final goal to insure the victory.

Startzell felt that Kerri Kirkendall and Katie Lord had good games against Scituate. Startzell also cited Mary Leonard as turning in a good effort.

Wednesday, the girls face a weak East Bridgewater team. Startzell anticipates no problem in this game and hopes that many of his substitutes will see some playing time. Friday, Cohasset takes on Duxbury in what should be an exciting game.



Cohasset's Ian Smart (23) and Jay Marsac (12) control the ball during their win over Hanover.

Football

In an exciting game Friday night, Cohasset overpowered Millis and walked away with a 21-7 lead.

In the opening moments of the game, Cohasset quarterback Sean Corkery threw a beautiful pass to Craig Mulcahy who caught the ball in the end zone to give the Skippers a 7-0 lead. Millis came right back and scored, tying the game at 7-7.

However, Cohasset played tough and hung in the game, and finally, Bobby Durkin broke the tie by running the ball about 30 yards into the end zone. Bobby then added yet another touchdown to his long list, and the Skippers walked away with a 21-7 victory.

Cohasset's offense had a productive day and always managed to score when it was absolutely necessary. However, Cohasset really clinched the victory when it buckled down defensively and caused Millis to remain scoreless for over 3 periods.

Saturday, the boys face an always tough Scituate team. After such an exciting victory this week, hopefully the boys will be able to keep the momentum going and knock off yet another team.

Cable Commission issues consumer regulations

By Jane Tamburri Spitz
Mariner Correspondent

The Massachusetts Cable Commission has issued a set of consumer protection policies aimed at establishing a uniform statewide system.

They include the regulation of billing practices, notification of service options to potential subscribers, and termination of service due to nonpayment.

Cable operators who supply service to South Shore communities as well as throughout the state consider the rulings, that will go into effect Oct. 24, to be superfluous.

"I don't think the Commission's level of concern is legitimate and in reality the regulations won't effect our procedures," said John King, American Cablesystems regional manager for southern Massachusetts.

"Research on the volume of consumer complaints shows that the number is minuscule. There were some problems at first, as there is in any new industry, but they have been resolved. Our computer billing system has gone through two or three generations of itemizing bills," King said.

Yet, the Commission, which was set up in 1971 to promote and regulate the development of cable television, maintains that the rulings are a direct result of a two-year study which yielded valuable data.

The commission reports that "a pattern has emerged with recurring complaints by consumers that their cable bills are hard to understand, that their services have been disconnected without adequate notice and that they have been charged fees or disconnected from service without explanation or without ordering that action."

At first glance, the regulations appear fair and straightforward: potential customers must be informed of all levels of service and bills procedures prior to signing a subscription agreement; bills must include the itemization of services, a phone number where subscriber questions and complaints will be handled, and the date payment is due; operators must give ample notice before terminating service.

Upon closer examination, however, representatives of cable companies voiced confusion over certain rules that lend themselves to different interpretations.

"Under these regulations, we will be required to notify potential subscribers of rates and policies. But there is a question as to when a person becomes a potential subscriber—at the time of the sale? Or, are we required to do massive mailings of written materials to every household on every street we hook up? The commission has not been specific in their rulings," said Dan Carney, vice-president of Campbell Communications, in Pembroke.

Further concern over how much detail will be required on each bill has been voiced by several company representatives.

"If you have a package subscriber, do you have to include a breakdown of costs on each of his bills?" said Thomas Steel, vice-president and general counsel for the New England Cable Television Association (NECTA), a regional trade cooperative.

NECTA is considering taking issue with some of the rulings contained in the commission's report, according to Steel. "We're awaiting clarification from the commission on several regulations," she said.

In addition to finding certain rulings unfair, in that interpretations may dictate excessive time and expense for cable companies, operators also object to being depicted in a negative way by comments contained in the written regulations.

For instance, the report states that "despite the claims of the cable industry that past problems in the customer service area have been reduced or even eliminated, statistical trends show problems continue in this area."

"We're very anxious to see comments by NECTA. We've been waiting for something in writing for weeks so that we can respond to the request for clarification before October 24, when we expect operators to comply with our regulations. We know that some operators are scrambling to be in compliance by that date," said Penny Wells, general counsel for the Cable Commission.

In discussing the Commission's possible motivation for promulgating unnecessary rulings, steel commented that "they're searching for a reason to exist and this set of regulations seems to be an over reaction on their part." He continued, "The ability to regulate now in one way is the ability to regulate more extensively later on."

Spokesman at all three cable companies on the South Shore, American Cablesystems, Campbell Communications and Greater South Shore Cablevision, claim that subscribers will notice little, if any, change on their bills and that overall procedures will remain uneffected by the commission's rulings.

Attorney General candidate conference

Ted Harrington, Republican candidate for attorney general, will hold a press conference at Scituate's Satuit Restaurant between 5 and 7 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 2, according to Jack Conway, Chairman, South Shore Independents for Harrington.

"This will be a fun event for a candidate that our group feels is most able to serve us as the chief law enforcment officer in the Commonwealth," said Conway, a former congressional candidate.

"In order to make this rally for Ted Harrington more interesting and informative, we are going to use a press conference format," added Conway. David Mittell, the ace political columnist in the Mariner newspaper chain, will pose a series of 20 or more hard hitting questions on the major issues and the candidate will handle them on an extemporaneous basis. Conway, a former newspaperman himself, will act as master of ceremonies. There will be no formal speeches.

All voters, regardless of party affiliation, are invited to hear Harrington, a former United States attorney.

Born in Fall River, Harrington graduated cum laude from Holy Cross and Boston College Law School, was a special trial attorney in the criminal division of the U.S. Department of Justice and among other things, served as U.S. Attorney from 1977 to 1981. He was involved in most of the big time criminal investigations of the day. Harrington is a Navy veteran, worked with the late Robert Kennedy and now lives in Needham with his wife and six children.

The first phase of the reconstruction project will cost about $550,000, Ekberg said. That will include a variety of demolition and site preparation work. Electrical conduit lines would be installed, an irrigation system completed, along with the construction of a 400-meter all weather track, a sodden varsity game field, a field for boys and girls soccer, field hockey and football, handicapped access, regrading of the hill behind the high school where the new varsity field will be located, and a fence installed around the field. The clay soil found in the field behind the high school will be given to the town landfill for cover material.

The improvement committee, Ekberg said, will have to meet soon to decide what the next step will be. "If we have to go before town meeting again for this appropriation, it will delay everything another year. We'll really have to decide what to do. We've been before the advisory committee twice, and we've been turned down twice," he noted. "It's disappointing."

Currently, the practice fields used by the varsity teams are uneven and filled with holes. Just this season, varsity football player Phil Mahoney was injured and out for a week when he fell into a hole in the field behind the school.

"Th varsity field," Ekbert commented, "is worse than lousy."

Advisory committee chairman Fred Koed said Wednesday the request was turned down "basically because we felt this was something that should be decided at town meeting."

Art center needs logo

Artists are asked to submit design ideas for a new logo to the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, by December 1, 1986. The new logo will be used on all promotional materials, letterheads and advertising. A $100 prize will be given for the winning design.

All artwork must be camera-ready using only one color and no half-tones. The artist may specify the color to be used.

The new logo will go along with the new building around the corner from its present site in Cohasset Center and the new image. The new 8,000 square foot facility which should open in 1987 will house four large studio/classrooms with better teaching facilities, a central two-story gallery space with professional exhibit lighting, a gallery/members room for community functions, an expanded gift shop and more storage and administrative space.

The new logo should reflect the changes that are currently taking place within the Center which has become recognized as a major cultural influence on the visual arts on the South Shore. The Center has greatly expanded its young artist department by taking its young artist classes and workshops out to other communities of the South Shore.

The design ideas should be submitted to Joni Jensen at the South Shore Art Center. The new logo will be chosen by the Center's Board of Directors. For further information, call the Center, 383-9548.

Photography courses at art center

South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, offers several courses to improve your photography. A new semester of classes began September 22 and advanced registration is required.

Freelance photographer Paul Fortin will teach two photography classes: Beginning Photography Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. starting Sept. 22 and Intermediate/Advanced Photography Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m starting Sept. 24. The beginning course covers all the basics F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, compostion, lighting and subjects. The emphasis in this course is on recognizing the elements of good photography.

In his more advanced course, students will explore various subjects including portrait, people and landscape. He will stress aesthetics, composition and approach needed to create a good photograph.

Bridgewater State College art professor John Droege will teach Beginning Darkroom on Wednesdays from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. starting Sept. 24 and Inspired Photo Critique on Thursdays from 7:30 -9:30 p.m. starting Sept. 25. In Beginning Darkroom students will learn how to develop black and white film, to enlarge and print, to burn and dodge and to mount.

In his Inspired Photo Critique students will learn about the great photographers and what makes their photography stand out. The first hour of each session will concentrate on the aesthetics used by master photographers and a discussion of their design elements. The second hour is on evaluation of the student's own work, either slides or prints.

In October Droege will lead a two day photo field trip and critique workshop. The field trip will be Oct. 18 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The group will car pool to a nearby location for on-the-scene guidance to composition, image-making, and light effects. The following Saturday, Oct. 25 from 2-4 p.m. will be a critique session at the Center. Students may use either color or black and white.

For further information on these and other classes at the Center, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Squadron registration

The Bare Cove Power Squadron will hold its 1986 class registration Tuesday, Sept. 16, at Hingham Central Junior High School, 220 Central St., Hingham.

Registration will start at 7:30 p.m., and classes will begin that evening with Past Commander Russell Sheerin lecturing on boat design, performance and safety.

The course includes study of boating safety, general seamanship, and techniques of coastal navigation. After completing the course, the information gained will enable a person to become familiar with piloting a craft around Boston harbor or similar coastal areas.

A student text provides background study material for the course. Films, overheads, and working models are also employed. A charge of $20 covers all costs for the course and includes purchase of the student manual, a navigation plotter, dividers, and a Boston Harbor chart.

All of these items are retained by the student for future use and reference. There are 10 classes scheduled on Tuesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The last hour of five classes on navigation is given over to personal chart table instruction in coastal navigation, with the assistance of one charting instructor for each group of eight students.

An exam is given, and virtually all who finish the course and complete homework assignments, pass the exam easily.

This will mark the 27th year of classes sponsored by Bare Cove for the benefit of anyone over the age of 12. For more information the following may be called: James McIver, Hingham (749-7547); Joseph Becker, Cohasset (383-0044); Leo Farrell, Scituate (545-1863); Henry O'Brien, Weymouth (337-2625); and Richard Farrell, Marshfield, (837-2031).

Lonborg: Sox shouldn't change their style

By John O'Donnell
Mariner Staff

For 11 summers Red Sox fans have been hoping for their favorite team's return to the World Series, and now only the California Angels stand between the Sox and another appearance in the Fall Classic.

In clinching the American League Eastern Division title last week, Wade Boggs, Jim Rice and company earned the right to play the West champion Angels for the American League pennant and a berth in the World Series.

New England baseball fans have had a long wait in between Sox trips to the Series. Since 1946 the Red Sox have appeared in only two, in 1975 and in the Incredible Dream season of 1967.

Like the 1986 Red Sox with flame-throwing Roger Clemens leading the pitching staff, the 1967 Sox featured a hard throwing righty, Jim Lonborg.

Jim Lonborg, DDS, said this week that the '86 Red Sox are a more balanced team than the 1967 Sox.

"We pretty much had one main man in Carl Yastrzemski," said Dr. Lonborg from his Hanover office. "This team has four guys who have driven in close to 100 runs.

"I think the only similarity between our team and today's team is true of any championship team," said Lonborg. "With any championship team, there are contributions from all the individual members.

"Every member of the team plays a role in a championship," he said.

While today's Sox have nearly a week to rest and prepare for the playoffs, the '67 team clinched the pennant on the final day of the season behind Lonborg's pitching in Fenway Park.

To their credit, fans at last Sunday's clincher did not storm the field and rip up the Fenway sod, like the unruly mob that left more dirt than grass in New York's Shea Stadium when the Mets clinched earlier this month.

Lonborg remembered the crowd at Fenway when the Sox won the pennant in '67.

"The fans came on the field after the game," said Lonborg, "and they were pretty active.

Jim Lonborg

"They were so happy we had won, but there wasn't anything like what happened in New York this year," he said.

"I think the difference was that there wasn't any premeditation like there was in the past few days," he said. "Nobody knew we were going to clinch it, and when we won everybody just shared the moment."

Even though the 1967 Sox lost the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals, Lonborg said the memories of winning the pennant can't be erased.

"For us, winning the pennant happened so quickly that the World Series was almost anti-climactic," he said. "The real significance to us was to win the pennant.

"We had another hour-and-a-half of waiting to see if Detroit would lose after we won our game," said Lonborg. "It was like waiting for an election result."

In those days there were no playoffs; a team went straight from the regular season's last game to the World Series. Lonborg said today's format is tougher on a player's nervous system.

"Back then there were no playoffs," said Lonborg, who now lives in Scituate. "In terms of stress it was a lot easier than it is today."

Lonborg said that the Sox should do things in the playoffs as they have all year.

"I don't think they should change anything about how they've done things this year," he said. "They shouldn't try to hit home runs after the balanced offense they showed this season.

"When you've got so many people driving in runs you've got a good team," he said.

"I know they're not going to have an easy time with the Angels," he said, "but this ballclub is such a good ballclub all around that they should do well.

Maybe the Fenway faithful will get a chance to see a third World Series since 1946.

Promises fall short in nuclear power trial

By John H. Cutler
Special to the Mariner

Commentary

In the fall 1986 publication of Issues In Science and Technology there is an article by George Woodwell titled "A Technology That Failed." One of his areas of research has been the ecological effects of ionizing radiation and toxins. He was the chairman of the 1983 Conference on the Long-term Biological Consequences of Nuclear War. In their introductory remarks the editors of Issues In Science and Technology wrote the following prologue:

"Was Chernobyl just an accident, or is it the last straw? Ecologist George Woodwell believes that nuclear energy has been given a fair trial, has failed badly, and should now be abandoned. He argues that the health and environmental effects of Chernobyl were extremely serious—not only the deaths, illnesses, and abandonment of land near the reactor but also the exposure of millions, perhaps hundreds of millions, of people to the increased risk of cancer. In Woodwell's view, human and technical frailty guarantee that such an accident will happen again, perhaps with far worse consequences, as long as we rely on nuclear power to meet U.S. energy needs."

Here are a few excerpts from the article:

From experience with tests of bombs and with accidents such as that at Chernobyl we know that:

The most severe hazards in the short term come from the cloud of radioactivity released during the accident and from short-lived radioactive particles deposited on the earth's surface immediately downwind.

Radioactive gases and debris released into the troposphere are carried around the earth at middle latitudes in days to weeks; in a slightly longer period the contamination becomes global, although 'he transfer of radioactive material across the equator is limited.

In contrast to emissions from a nuclear weapon, those from a reactor accident may continue over several days, contaminating a series of overlapping areas downwind as wind and weather change.

The amount of fallout on the ground is heavily dependent on the amount of precipitation because rain removes particulate matter from the atmosphere and deposits it on plants and soil.

The most important radionuclides that become long-term internal emitters are strontium 90 and cesium 137. Strontium behaves as calcium and settles in bones, where it irradiates the marrow; cesium is similar to potassium and accumulates in the muscles.

The movement of radioactivity in the environment is complicated and not easily generalized; constant vigilance through monitoring and research are required to avoid surprises that present serious hazards.

More excerpts:

Soviet reports indicate that at least 28 people died from acute irradiation within 75 days after the accident. Three hundred people were trated for radiation exposure, more than 100 were affected acutely, and 100,000 or more were evacuated from their houses in the region near the reactor. Others, persuaded that proximity to the still smoldering ruin was dangerous, left the region on their own despite official advice to the contrary. And the problems with residual radioactivity are not yet over.

The final costs of Chernobyl in abandoned land, contaminated water and crops, and human illness and mortality have yet to be tallied. The greatest effects will be felt over years in increased frequency of lethal cancers among those millions—perhaps hundreds of millions—of people exposed to elevated levels of ionizing radiation.

The accident calls attention to the seriousness of unresolved radioactive waste problems in the United States.

Reactors are intrinsically complicated and unstable. Their operation, as with so much of the human enterprise, is a compromise with safety. From time to time there will be accidents, large and small, that will progressively and irreversibly contaminate the biosphere. If the next Chernobyl-like accident is in the United States, are we prepared to evacuate Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and abandon it for several decades? Such an accident at Indian Point might deposit radioactivity on New York; at Pilgrim, on Boston; and Seabrook, New Hampshire, stands to windward of Portsmouth, Kittery, York, Portland, the Maine coast, and Canada's Maritime provinces. Can we afford to risk 100 to 1,000 square miles of a densely populated section of the United States to the carelessness or incompetence of reactor operators?

Technologists will advance new designs for reactors that seem to have great promise, that reduce size, increase reliability, and offer better protection against accidents. But the technologists will not solve the waste problem. Nor will they ensure competence in operators or abiding goodwill among the public. A reasonable argument might be made that a nation as advanced in science and technology and politics as the United States is capable of developing nuclear energy facilities and regulating them wisely, safely, and openly. Recent shifts against maintaining a strong government regulatory function belie even that note of optimism.

It seems clear that we have given nuclear power a fair trial and that its promise falls far short of even the most modest hopes. The earth is not large enough to accommodate this technology; political systems cannot manage it; and although scientists and technologists may have performed admirably, they have not been able to solve the fundamental problems of contamination of an imperfectly run world. The verdict is the same even if we consider economic problems, climatic changes due to carbon dioxide increases caused by fossil fuels, and the apparent pressures on global energy supplies. These problems can be resolved without nuclear power—and will be, if there is to be a future for industrial civilizations.

Nuclear energy can be systematically and deliberately abandoned as a potential source of power. The transition need not be abrupt—it cannot be. Existing power plants can be closed permanently at the end of their useful lives without being dismantled. When it is safe to do so, they can be sealed in place without the risk inherent in dismantling them and further handling of their massive inventories of radioactivity. Immediate demands for energy can be met through intensified efforts at conservation. Longer-term needs can tap the only enduring resource available now, the sun.

The Chernobyl incident, a small catastrophe, seems likely to receive the intensive scrutiny it deserves and to stand as a reminder that we, each of us, five billion strong, live downwind of 300 reactors operated by mere people.

Perhaps the two most frightening comments made by Woodwell are these:

Much more radioactivity is present in any one of the 300 reactors now operating worldwide than that produced by any bomb.

From time to time there will be reactor accidents that will progressively and irreversibly contaminate the biosphere.

Jews observe the most solemn of High Holy Days

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

Rosh Hashanah

Beginning Oct. 1 and ending Oct. 12, Jews all over the world face the most important time of the spiritual year — Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

It is such a critical time of year that School Committees in Randolph and Weymouth decided to reschedule a school football game, originally scheduled during Rosh Hashanah.

The game was originally set for Saturday afternoon, Oct. 4, the second day of the two-day Jewish holiday.

The game is now set for Sunday night, Oct. 5 at 7:30 p.m.

Randolph School Committee member Robert Gass said, "Our recommendation is that the game be rescheduled for Sunday evening and the date and time be set to allow enough preparation time for Jewish football players."

This calls to mind the matter of famous professional Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Sandy Koufax who refused to pitch a World Series game because the game was scheduled during Yom Kippur.

It is conceivable this could happen again in professional baseball as the American and National League playoffs will be scheduled during the Jewish holy period.

In Hebrew, Rosh Hashanah means "the first of the year" It also signals the beginning of the "High Holidays" or the "Days of Awe." Yom Kippur which means the "Day of Atonement" in Hebrew comes 10 days after Rosh Hashanah and concludes the holy period.

According to Jewish tradition, Rosh Hashanah is the day on which God judges the deeds of every person. It is on this day that Jewish people resolve to live better lives. They pray for forgiveness and a year of peace and happiness for themselves and all the world. It is a happy holiday because Jews believe that sincere prayer and good deeds will find favor in God's eyes.

Judaism has three religious sects, Orthodox, Conservative and Reform synagogues. Orthodox and Conservative Jews celebrate Rosh Hashanah for two days and reform Jews observe the holiday for one day.

Rosh Hashanah, a family-centered holiday, begins at home during the evening hours as the family celebrates the coming of the New Year with a festive dinner. One custom is the eating of an apple or fruit dipped in honey to voice the hope that the coming year may be full of sweetness.

The family then departs to temple for services that night and the following day.

In the most solemn part of these services, the congregation prays to God to hasten the time when all people of the earth will be brothers and wickedness and tyranny will disappear.

The Biblical scripture read from the Torah (first five books of the Bible) focuses on Abraham and Isaac. It recalls the sacrifice that Abraham, father of the Hebrew people, was willing to make in order to demonstrate his devotion to the Lord. Even to this day it reminds Jews that they, too must, renew their faith.

The one symbol which characterizes both Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur is the shofar, a ram's horn used in Biblical times for messages, announcements, emergencies and assemblies.

The call of the shofar reminds the congregation of the need for doing good and for living a God-fearing life. It also calls upon worshippers to repent any misdeeds.

Yom Kippur

The Day of Atonement is the last day of the "Ten Days of Penitence" which began with Rosh Hashanah. To demonstrate the seriousness of this holiday, Jews refrain from eating, drinking and working. Young children try to fast for part of the day. The entire day is spent in prayer and worship.

Jews ask forgiveness not only from God but from man. Any wrongs must be righted whenever possible.

The Biblical prophet Isaiah said that the fast of Yom Kippur is acceptable to God only if it leads to good deeds towards man. Also conducted on this Holy Day is the Yiskor, a memorial service for the departed. This service reminds those whose dear ones have passed away to follow the path of righteousness and to remember the good deeds of their departed.

The concluding prayers of the day are recited towards sunset. At nightfall, the end of the fast is announced by a single blast of the shofar. Worshippers return to their homes to break the fast and to begin the new year joyous and glad of heart.

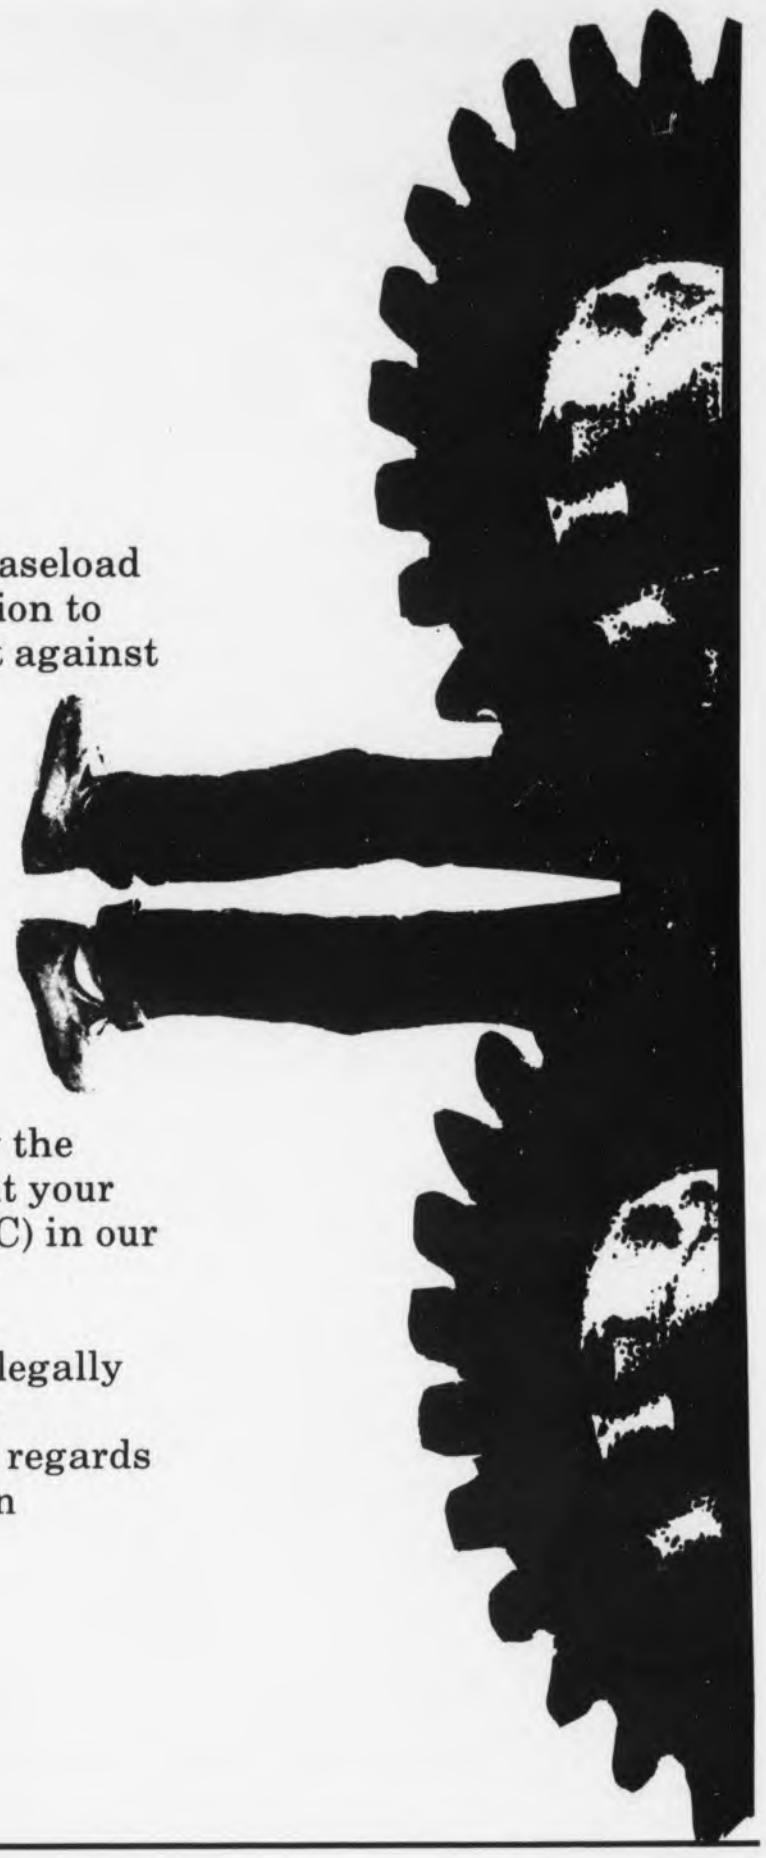
A Stone's Throw——————by Paul Steven Stone

Caught up in the wheels of justice



Dear Mr. Stone, the letter began. In an effort to reduce the caseload in our court system, our law firm has secured judicial permission to combine seemingly unrelated law suits into a class action suit against a single individual.

We are pleased to inform you, the letter continued, that our computer has selected you to be one of the first defendants in this unique program. And aside from congratulating you for assuming an historic position in the annals of jurisprudence, we hereby also inform you that we have taken the liberty of contacting a number of individuals and organizations judged by our computer to be likely plaintiffs in a court action against you some time in the future.

To be honest, the letter went on, we were quite impressed by the number and variety of activities you've engaged in throughout your life, and we feel the list of co-plaintiffs (see Enclosures B and C) in our suit represents an outstanding cross section of contemporary American life. Indeed, you should feel extremely proud.

In the interests of justice, the letter concluded, you are now legally restrained from contacting any of the co-plaintiffs (again, see Enclosures B and C) and although this may prove difficult as regards your mother, children and current employer, we believe we can depend on your own sense of ethics and fair play.

Otherwise, we'll really sue the hell out of you.

Association for Retarded Citizens opens new site

By Valerie Kroon
Mariner Correspondent

South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens (SSARC) passed yet another milestone Sept. 24 with the ribbon cutting and an open house at its new vocational site in Quincy Center.

Located in Quincy Fair, the renovated former Sears building on Hancock Street, the new site is the second facility for SSARC's Harbor Industries.

Harbor Industries services close to 90 clients from the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth. The new Quincy facility offers employment to the area's higher functioning clients and prepares them for transitioning to competitive employment in the community.

The ribbon cutting ceremony honored government officials, legislators, supporters and staff of SSARC. A special honor, the SSARC 1986 Challenge Award was presented to Richard (Dick) Frye of Braintree.

Frye, owner of Frye Insurance Agency on Washington Street, has been a supporter of SSARC since 1975. He served as the association's president in 1981-82 and presently serves on its board of directors.

Frye has established a trust fund to benefit SSARC in memory of his mother Margaret. This past July, he donated a Mercedes-Benz truck to the association.

"That truck has been a significant aid in shipping and receiving," SSARC Executive Director Leo Sarkissian said as he presented Frye with the award.

"Dick Frye symbolizes dedication and steadfastness of service." Sarkissian said. He's never been a casual member of the organization and he's steered us through some turbulent waters."

Frye called himself "only a spoke in the wheel." He then presented a dozen roses to Ann Glennonof Braintree, SSARC vice president, in recognition of her commitment to the asociation.

Introducting other honored guests were Rev. Gary Blume, minister of Weymouth's First Church and a member of SSARC's Human Rights Committee, and Maria Plante of Cohasset, SSARC president.

Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley opened the ceremony with a welcoming address.

McCauley cut the Harbor Industries ribbon with the help of workshop director Timothy Hassett-Salley, 10-year staff member Ann Doten, and workshop employee Kathy Gavin of Norwell.

Presented certificates for their 1986 sponsorship of Harbor Industries were local businessmen Bob Fox, Louis C. Bailey, Jr. and Frank Messina. Messina's company renovated the Quincy Fair complex and the new Harbor Industries facility.

Ray Desautels of Hingham, past president of SSARC, recognized area legislators and presented plaques to those present.

"Our friends in the legislature have opened their arms in the past and will in the future," Desautels said. "But much needs to be done. There remain 2000 unserved retarded adults in Massachusetts. In the next few years I am going to devote much time to see if we can do something about this."

One of the needier areas in mental retardation are for more services for the over-22 population after they've transitioned out of Chap. 766 educational programs.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset), long a supporter of SSARC, told the audience that she would "definitely" file over-22 funding legislation again.

"Tonight is very exciting, and I give my word—I will support you," Murray said.

"Rep. Murray has in the past been very available to us (SSARC)." Desautels noted.

Also honored was the Weymouth Planning Board for their success in obtaining bloc-fund grants for SSARC and for their assistance in maintaining the SSARC facilities in Weymouthport. For two years, members of the board have partially funded services for 11 Weymouth mentally retarded citizens who would otherwise remain unfunded.

Paul Dillon, Planning Board vice chairman, accepted the certificate of appreciation.

SSARC was founded by a small group of concerned parents in 1951. The association began its first sheltered workshop, now Harbor Industries, in the 1970's at the Kennedy Health Center in Quincy.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

More helpful shortcuts to good eating

Thanks to those of you who read last month's column giving shortcuts in the kitchen, we'll all be in and out of there in a flash. Here are more ideas to save precious time and speed you on your merry way.

Ketchup. You can use that hard-to-get-to last drop by adding enough lemon juice to dilute, horseradish to taste. Shake well and presto—a tasty seafood sauce.

Sara Nolan's party dessert. Fill separate bowls with nuts, chopped-up candies and cookies, brownies and fruit. Serve scoops of ice cream in separate bowls and let guests make their own sundaes—children love it.

Helene Riggle's way with raisins. Keep raisins soft and flavorful by storing them in a glass jar with brandy or bourbon to cover. They keep indefinitely and give added flavor to cakes, cookies, chutney or baked apples.

Diana Campbell's punch crock. When serving hot spiced wine, or hot soups at a party, keep it at an ideal serving temperature by using your crockpot, set at low, as a bowl.

Baby food. Puree cooked vegetables in a blender. Freeze in ice-cube trays and wrap individually for the freezer. You'll have a perfect size serving for baby and if you use fresh veggies, there will be no preservatives or additives.

A dollar bill. This has nothing whatsoever to do with a cooking column, but is good to know, anyway. Use the bill as a measuring stick. It's 6 1/8" long.

Always a treat to sample someone else's cooking, why not gather up a friend or two and go out to lunch? That's what we did the other day and it does seem that when we get a group of women together these days, the talk invariably turns to either grandchildren or food. Which is how Dorothea Reeves happened to send this recipe along for our readers. While we were all trying to determine what ingredient made our cream of cucumber soup so distinctive (curry), she told of this recipe which she and Charles had in the Hotel Imperio in Lisbon, Portugal. Intrigued by its delicate flavors, they returned again the next evening and together analyzed the dish which they have served many times over the years.

SOLE WITH BANANA

1 lb. fillet of sole. If frozen, defrost and dry
3 large, or 4 medium bananas, moderately ripe
10 Ritz crackers, butter to moisten crumbs
2T dark brown sugar
1/2 lemon, juiced

Lay sole in shallow baking dish—about 7 1/2x12". Sprinkle with lemon juice. Peel bananas, cut in quarters lengthwise. Lay on top of fish. Roll crackers to make crumbs. Melt the butter. Mix butter sugar and crumbs. Sprinkle over bananas. Bake 30 min. at 350 degrees.

While waiting for the coffee to perk the other night, I glanced through the cookbook that came with our blender. I tend to ignore this little device which stands forgotten in a counter corner and so had forgotten how handy and speedy it can be. Eggwhites for meringues, pancake batters, cream for whipping, crumbs from bread crusts, crackers, chips and graham crackers—even ham hash are made in a flash. Imagine how quickly you could make this

NUT-FILLED DEVIL'S FOOD

Into blender container put:
2/3 c. shortening or soft butter
1 3/4 c. sugar
2 eggs
2 egg yolks
1/2 c. cocoa
1/2 c. warm water

Cover and blend on high speed for 30 seconds. Add
1/2 c. walnuts
1 c. coconut

Cover and blend on high speed for 10 seconds. Pour mixture into a bowl and gradually stir in 3/4 c. sour milk alternately with a mixture of 2 1/4 c. sifted flour, 1 tsp. baking soda and 1/2 tsp. salt. Turn into agreased 9"square pan and bake in a preheated 350 oven for 50 min. Serve warm with whipped cream.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

Forget about handmaidens in Massachusetts

The Dragon propped his feet on the coffee table.

"Remove my socks, " he directed. "Then scratch the ball of my right foot. Near the big toe. And bring me a diet soda."

I looked at him in disbelief. "Scratch your own darn foot."

He shook his head sadly. "Clearly you haven't read today's paper. Women are supposed to abandon their quest for self-identity and submerge themselves in their families. I hate to be the one to point it out, but you've been a little lax in the submerging department lately."

I snatched the paper from his hands. "Where does it say that? Who wrote it?"

He gave me a condescending look. "Only a presidential candidate, that's who. He also says that the husband is the high priest in any family. That puts you in an ancillary role—a handmaiden to the high priest, so to speak."

"For someone who said he wanted a peaceful weekend, that's pretty rash so-to-speaking, Bucko," I told him.

"Look," the Dragon pointed out reasonably, "this guy does not speak without authority. He also says that when Hurricane Gloria was approaching the Virginia coast he used his powers of prayer and then he and God got together and sent it away. How do you argue with someone who can break up hurricanes?"

"If I remember correctly," I sniffed, "he didn't exactly break it up. It was just a year ago that Gloria clobbered Massachusetts. Come to think of it, parts of the South Shore didn't get their electricity back for weeks. I don't think it was very nice of him to tell Gloria to leave Virginia alone and then let her wipe us out."

The Dragon nodded. "I remember that.

"Do you suppose," he continued darkly, "he knew that the women in Massachusetts aren't very good handmaidens to their high priests?"

"I suppose I don't place burnt offerings before you three times a day? I suppose I don't seek out the best detergent to keep your raiment gleaming even as the sun? I suppose our children are not as olive trees around your table?"

He looked surprised. "Olive trees around my table?"

"It sounds okay in the marriage ceremony."

"Look," the Dragon persisted, "the fact remains that I'm the high priest and you're the handmaiden. If you defer to me in all things we won't have any problems."

"Maybe you won't have any problems," I objected, "but personally I have a real problem deferring to someone who thinks t.v. wrestling is on the level. And that lady mud wrestling is an art form."

"Well," he sighed, "you're just going to have to get used to it. And now that you've reminded me, after you get me the diet soda you can check the t.v. listing to see if there's any wrestling on now."

I smiled. I removed his sock and scratched his right foot near the big toe—oh, maybe just a little harder than necessary. Then I got him a diet soda.

As I approached the couch he looked suspicious. "You're going to dump that on my head, aren't you?" he asked.

I smiled again. "Of course not. Not on purpose, anyway. But sometimes some of us handmaidens trip. Fall, even. And the liquid can go anywhere. It's just lucky for us our high priests are so understanding and all forgiving. Where do you want it?"

He jumped up quickly. "Never mind. I'll get one for you, as a matter of fact. Why don't you sit down?"

I sat on the couch, tucked my feet under me and smiled.

"I'd much rather be married to you than that presidential candidate," I told him. "After all, you can take a joke, can't you?"

He nodded. "I took you, didn't I?"

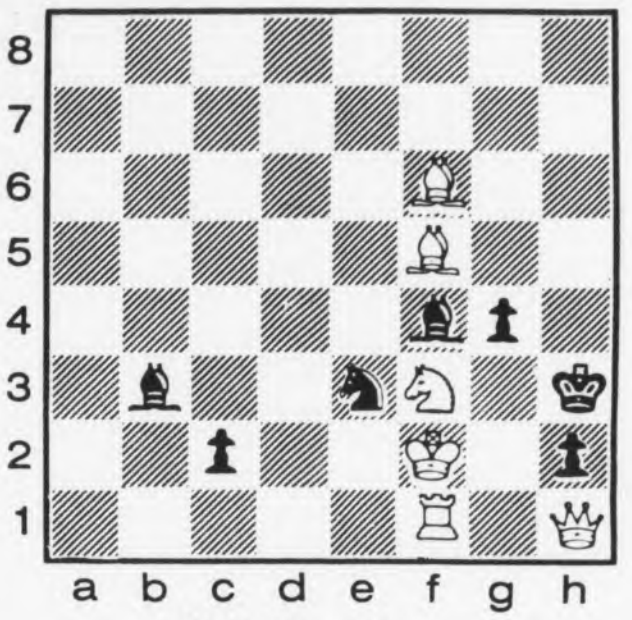
CHESS QUIZ

By Chris Bernstein

'Over Easy'



White to move
Mate in one

Solution:

See Classified Pages

. . . the woman who grows up with the idea that she is simply to be an amiable animal, to be caressed and coaxed, is invariably a bitterly disappointed woman. A game of chess will cure such a conceit forever. The woman that knows the most, thinks the most, feels the most, is the most. Intellectual affection is the only lasting love. Love that has a game of chess in it can checkmate any man and solve the problem of life.

CHARLES DICKENS

THE move is there, but you must see it.

It's a wait and see attitude in the fire station

It was a year ago that derisiveness within the fire department threatened to rip it apart. It was the union against its chief. The community was divided in its loyalties.

It was just a year ago that selectmen voted not to renew the fire chief's contract. It was a matter of administration, they said, and began the search for a new department head.

January 1, Chief Daniel Brock began his duties in the Cohasset Fire Department. Matters have settled into a welcomed silence as the firefighters become acquainted with their new administrator.

Most firefighters still refuse to publically discuss the matter. They declined comment for publication.

But one firefighter who remained anonymous said the department has changed, the men have matured during the past year. "I don't want to talk about the past," he said, "only to say that morale is slowing creeping up after being crushed the past two years."

Morale in the department was "destroyed," he said, by the former chief. "But it wasn't just the men, it was the equipment and the station that were let go. Anyone who comes here can see it.

"Unless the town decides to cough up the money for repairs, the same thing will happen with this station as happened at Beechwood and the West Corner."

The firefighter said the morale within the department "may be creeping up a little now. It was stationery, but it never got worse than it was last year."

The men have taken a "wait and see" stance regarding their new chief, he noted. When asked if the personnel have matured as a result of their previous experience, he answered, "oh yeah. Where our department was cloistered for years, we were at once thrust into the town of Cohasset politics. I think the towen administration stuck us out on a plank - they wanted us involved in the politics."

He continued, "the department's not in the limelight now because that person who wanted us in the limelight is gone."

The new chief acknowledges "It's been quiet" in the Elm Street station.

"All I ever hear from the community, is that they never hear anything about the fire department any more," he said. "I think that's because we're mainly in a transition period right now. With four shifts and 24 men, on a day-to-day basis, it takes a while to get into the same direction. I expect by next year we will accomplish things that the public will hear about. Our training will be completed and people will see more of us."

When he arrived in Cohasset in January, Chief Brock found several deficiencies. Since that time he has instituted changes within the department, and has gone to town meeting with requests for more equipment. He has appointed a training officer who is in contact with the state fire academy. Along with the chief, that officer has developed an overall program

Selectmen seek way to spend pennies from H'wood

The front area of the town hall will soon receive a facelift, thanks to Hollywood.

But selectmen still have a major portion of the $25,000 gift from Warner Brothers yet to spend.

Warner Brothers gifted the town with that sum after town officials allowed them access to town property and streets during the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick" this summer.

The film company also donated $25,000 to the First Parish in return for the three days of filming in the church's Meeting House on the common. Church members are undecided how to spend the money.

Selectmen are asking for ideas relating to a project which will benefit the entire town, rather than assisting separate organizations and programs.

They decided Monday night to expend about $3,500 to tear out the asphalt frontage at town hall and replace it with landscaping. Selectman Diane Sullivan, who made the suggestion, said one estimate for the project was $3,500.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said he would prefer the town spend the Warner Brothers endowment on a project that will benefit the entire town. Although several organizations requested a share of the funds, Mitman suggested "doing something we might never get around to doing."

Sullivan agreed, adding the project should not be a project that would later add tax expenses to the town. She suggested a small portion of the money be set aside for the town hall pavement project.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle agreed with the project and further suggested the board consider renovating the common's duck pond. "But my first priority," he added, "would be the front of town hall."

When Sullivan suggested another town project might be to install guardrails along Border Street, Mitman noted, "but guardrails are so mundane." Selectman James Gallagher agreed with that assessment.

"We'd like suggestions," Mitman added, "regarding projects the whole town would benefit from. We need comments so we can make a decision."

Selectmen said the pavement project at town hall would not interfere with any proposals to renovate town hall or add onto the building. If town meeting ever voted to finance an addition, the front landscaped portion of the property would not have to be torn apart or altered, they said.

Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church, said Warner Brothers used the interior of the Meeting House for three and a half days during August.

Physician forum presented Oct. 30

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It's happened to everyone. You're in the doctor's office ready to discuss a list of issues and questions with your physician. But for some reason, whether you were too shy to ask, or the physician was too rushed with other patients, the list was left unanswered.

October 30, the Social Service League of Cohasset will attempt to resolve that frustrating situation. That afternoon the league is sponsoring a forum with three female physicians who will talk, then attempt to answer questions on a range of issues and topics.

"It could be titled, 'all the things your doctor meant to tell you, but the phone was ringing or there were too many people in the waiting room and he never gets around to discussing these things with you,' " co-organizer Virgina Riley explained. With the assistance of Terry Caughey, they have developed an afternoon forum that is bound to attract strong attention from women throughout the community.

Three female physicians will address the public for a 20-minute segment. Following the talk, each doctor will be available to answer questions from the audience. After the three speakers have completed their portion of the program, together they will answer questions from the audience.

The participating physicians will include Dr. Susan Emmer of Cohasset, a private practitioner in chiropractic and family wellness. She will talk about nutrition and exercise. Dr. Emmer currently conducts a class on nutritional awareness each Tuesday night at the community center.

She completed her graduate studies in nutrition at Columbia University, and believes a proper diet is an essential step in preventative medicine, Riley explained.

The second physician will be Dr. Jeanine Carlson, chief of internal medicine at St. Margaret's Hospital in Boston.

Riley attended a recent lecture given by Dr. Carlson and was impressed enough to ask her to Cohasset. "She gave an overview of women's health issues. She talked about osteoporosis, and about stress-related diseases. She also commented on the necessity of mammograms. It was a very interesting talk - I'm so glad she agreed to participate in our program," she said, noting that all three physicians are young professionals. "They really relate to women of all ages, but they are very young themselves. I hope this will attract the young women of our community to this program. It's as important to them as to the older women to know about health issues."

For instance, Riley said, according Dr. Carlson, osteoporosis actually is a thinning of the body's bones which begins as an adolescent. Between the ages of 18 and 30 years, a physician will be able to detect whether a women's bones will thin.

"Dr. Carlson emphasizes the need for exercise and eating the right foods. We've all heard about the importance of eating right and exercising, but I think these doctors can really relate to the women in this community," Riley added.

The third physician will be Dr. Lisa Fusaro, a psycho-therapist from the Neponset Health Center.

She will be discussing the topic of women and stress, according to the program co-coordinators.

"People don't always realize that in addition to stress on the job, there is stress at home, in a

Bylaws approved by state

The attorney general has approved two warrant articles passed by special town meeting June 24. The amended bylaws will change the starting time of the annual town meeting, and will allow non-residents to address the meeting under specific circumstances.

Article 28 which was approved by town meeting by a unanimous voice vote, states that only registered voters may address the meeting. However, according to the new amendment, a professional person employed by the town regarding any matter under discussion may address the meeting. Other non-residents may address the meeting if the moderator grants that privilege.

The amendment was proposed following town meetings last year at which a non-resident was not allowed by a vote of the meeting, to address the issue of funding the sewer project. At second meeting, an engineer hired by the town was not allowed to discuss his report regarding the watershed protection district.

The second approved amendment will change the starting time for the April town meeting from 1 p.m. to 10 a.m. Residents approved this amendment in June, noting that an earlier starting time will allow for the completion of more business on the first Saturday of April.

Unsanitary conditions at park

The state Department of Public Health, the Division of Community Sanitation, will be sending an official to investigate residents' charges that rats have been seen at Wheelwright Park.

In a letter dated Sept. 9 to the Department of Public Health, Red Gate Lane resident Jacqueline Wirth stated that a group of horse-owners have filled the park with various materials and have cleaned the manure left at the park for nine years. She said rodents found there, "measure at least five inches."

She continued, "the Cub Scouts recently had their outing in Wheelwright Park, they have always used the open space for activities; this time the arena, flooded with manure and urine, the kids still tried to play ball, and some were eating their picnic lunches in this deplorable mess."

Wirth added, "I hold the Cohasset selectmen responsible for creating this situation and they still allow it to exist. I would like the state Board of Health to investigate this matter."

In August, a petition signed by 20 children requested the park be returned to its natural state. "This would enable the children and families to use the entire field for passive recreation and to enjoy the use of Wheelwright Park in a safe and healthy environment," the petition stated.

Town counsel recently ruled that selectmen, acting as trustees of the park, could allow it to be used as a riding area.

Animal quarantined

Animal Control Officer Richard Yokum, responding to complaints about a Hill Street dog, was bit by the animal as he attempted to enter the owner's property.

Officer Yokum was bit by a dog owned by Brian Anglin of 7 Hill St. as he entered the Anglin property Sept. 25. The officer was responding to complaints from Anglin's neighbors about the dog. The officer ordered the dog permanently restrained "or I will request your dog be removed from town or destroyed."

The dog has been ordered quarantined by the Board of Health.

In a letter to selectmen last month, Janice Magner told how the Anglin dog came after her while she was walking on Hill Street. Although the dog did not bite her, it wrapped its jaws around her leg and would not let go. When she yelled to the owner to assist her, Magner said he answered, "What do you want me to do about it lady?" As she continued to walk away, the dog poked its head at her leg and barked. "The owner acted as though this was all totally normal and finally called the dog into his car."

She asked that selectmen resolve the situation as soon as possible. Officer Yokum said he received complaints about the animal on Sept. 18, and from Sept. 22-24. Since the latest incident, the dog has been quarantined.

Delay in appointment

Selectmen decided to delay the appointment of a patrolman to the Cohasset Police Department.

Three weeks ago, selectmen interviewed the three top Civil Service candidates for the department vacancy. Last week they postponed the appointment, saying they wished to continue to investigate the backgrounds of the three candidates.

This week Selectman Sullivan said the board decided they will continue to interview from the list of persons who passed the Civil Service exam. "There will be no appointment tonight," she stated.

"It's a standard procedure that we do not rent out the Meeting House. But anyone using the building is expected to make a donation," Rev. Atkinson explained.

Money, he said, was not part of the church's negotiations with the film company. "We don't rent out the building, no matter what," he said. "But we were pleased to receive the donation. We expected they would make a donation, but we never set a number with them. They later told us after we agreed they could used the building, that they would give us a donation of $25,000."

"At our service of worship last week I handed out three by five-inch cards. Now there were church members, visitors, guests and friends at the church. It was a raw brainstorming sort of thing," Rev. Atkinson explained. "I think it will take about four weeks to sort everything out and refine a list of projects."

It is a bylaw of the church, he added, that any expenditure of more than $1000 be authorized by a vote of the parish.

The suggestions on the index cards were fairly evenly divided, he noted. About one-third suggested the money be invested or put in the bank. Another third felt it should be spent on the church's music program. The final third suggested the sum be given away to a charity or organization.

"Many people suggested we do a little bit of each," Rev. Atkinson said. "I just hope it will be a fun thing for people to explore. But it's also a chance to think of the purpose of the church and if this project will be consistent with how we see the church."

One thing the money will not be used for, he insisted, is to supplement the successful Meeting House campaign or annual church pledge drive. Rev. Atkinson said members of the parish committee "strongly felt this donation should not be used in any way that might undermine our goal of funding the programs of the church through member contributions. Thus, their funds were not included in either our Meeting House Campaign or the 1986-1987 pledge drive."

He explained the Meeting House Campaign was actually oversubscribed, totalling $247,000 in pledges. That was $47,000 more than necessary for the renovation project. The remaining amount, according to the minister, may be used as a maintenance reserve fund for future repairs.

"We do have some Parish House needs now," he added.

The church will have its semi-annual meeting Oct. 26 during which more ideas will be discussed. "We may arrive at a concensus by then," the minister said. "Or, if we are still undecided, we'll have to postpone the matter."

Rev. Atkinson, who said this is not the largest single endowment to the church, outlined a list of suggestions from the parish. They currently include: restoring the Meeting House piano, purchasing an electronic keyboard, redesigning the choir loft, investing the money with the income going toward building maintenance including a piano and organ, parish house repairs, rebuilding the parish house piano, purchasing an office computer, donating to several organizations including the Salvation Army, sponsoring a Thanksgiving party for the community, developing a youth center, and starting a college loan fund.

One parishioner wrote, "$25,000 given to us for basically doing nothing. Sure we could buy a computer, a new electric organ, a copy machine. We need all these items but we can also afford them if we choose to raise the funds and purchase them.

"I vote we give the money to the poor and needy. There are many programs which we have noted before like the Pine Street Inn,DOVE, etc. What better message for First Parish to proclaim than that we are a church that cares about others."

Rev. Atkinson explained, "it's a wide open process in which everyone will be debating. I think this will be an enjoyable time for the members of the church."

Selectmen endorse Cultural Exchange expenses

Selectmen repeated their endorsement of a request to the advisory committee by the Cultural Exchange Committee for $800 in expenses.

The exchange committee was denied the appropriation last week by the advisory committee. The exchange committee requested $800 to purchase a wood and brass plaque with the Cohasset town seal on it, with the names of Cohasset and its sister city, Souppes Sur Loing inscribed on it, and the date of the official visit by four Cohasset couples this week to France.

Pictorial books of Boston and other small gifts will be given to the welcoming committee of Souppes and to town officials there. As chairman Judy Keim explained to selectmen Monday night, this week's visit to Souppes will conclude the two towns' official welcome, and pave the way for future informal exchanges between residents from both towns.

In addition, she noted, the committee has been developing a series of slides of Cohasset to present to Souppes. They will continue working on the production during their stay in France. It will be used in the Cohasset schools, by Cohasset organizations and by private families.

After being twice denied the appropriation, Keim told selectmen the committee will "continue to move forward with dignity and style to represent the town of Cohasset."

Keim explained that $450 of the appropriation will be used for the gifts, $250 for the slide show and script, and $100 for stationery. "It is my understanding," she said, "that not all the advisory board knew we were town-appointed."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he hoped the exchange committee would resubmit the request, with the understanding "that these people will not benefit from the gifts. These are gifts from the town of Cohasset."

Selectman Cliff Mitman emphasized that no costs were involved in establishing the official sistership with Souppes. "But as it went, it became apparent that if this was to work, to turn into anything, it would cost us something," he added.

"This visit," Mitman said, "is the last of the formalities. This is the planting of initial seed, then the exchanges in the future will not involve a cost to the town."

Selectman Laugelle said he supported the committee's work in support of Gen. Thomas Churchill, the Cohasset resident who liberated Souppes Sur Loing in World War II. It was in his honor that the two towns decided to form this bond. The exchange committee was appointed by selectmen to begin establishing a formal relationship between Cohasset and the French town. "I can't believe they would refuse this $800," he added.

Selectman Mitman suggested the committee proceed and see what the actual costs of the purchases will be. "If we could be reimbursed upon our return, that would be wonderful," Keim said.

In other action, selectmen will meet with town employees to discuss a proposal to begin bi-weekly paycheck installments.

Selectmen Chairman Diane Sullivan said this week that Town Accountant Joanne Whittemore and Town Treasurer Elizabeth Ripley agree a bi-weekly paycheck schedule will save the town about $9,000 in the first year of implementation, and will be less computer work for the two departments.

The new system will be in-house, she said. Town employees' paychecks are now processed by Automatic Data Processing. The town has also saved money on the purchase of the in-house computer software system. The town purchased the software for $5,000. Today's price, she added, is $10,000.

The plan, Sullivan explained, would be to alternate pay periods with payment of the town's operating expenses.

In order to help employees through the transitional period between the weekly and bi-weekly system, a cash voucher will be available. A town employee need only fill out the voucher and give it to the department head. The cash advance, she said, will get the employee through the first one or two weeks of the new system.

Union contracts, she added, must be negotiated, but it is not an unusual step for a municipality to take. The school department issues its paychecks on a bi-weekly basis.

The current system, she said, actually violates state policy by including the next day's (Friday's) pay into the week's check which is processed Thursday evening.

Selectman Sullivan suggested that town officials meet with the employees "to give them as much

SELLER'S REMORSE

After just a week on the market, your agent has brought you a terrific offer to purchase your house, a little less than the asking price, but much more than you expected to get for the property. You met the prospective buyers briefly when they saw your home, and they seemed really nice. They didn't ask for the family hierloom chandelier in the dining room, and said to go ahead and take the drapes to your new home. After your agent goes over the paper work with you, it looks pretty good, and you sign.

Then the agent leaves. You start to think about what you've just done, and you feel awful. You've been robbed! You could have gotten more! You know they'll let your garden go to seed and pull down all the beautiful wallpaper you hung yourself. Welcome to seller's remorse! This is a perfectly normal way to feel, especially if you're selling the home where you've lived for many years and that's loaded with memories. If you get a really bad attack of seller's remorse, call your agent right away. And remember, it's almost always temporary, and will be overcome with the excitement of moving to your new home.

For a move in your future, call HOME CENTER REALTY'S professionals at 749-8833, or visit our office at 57 Water St., Hingham.

time to prepare."

"If the town employees don't want this, I definitely won't vote for a change," Selectman Laugelle said. "I don't think some of them can survive on a two-week pay period."

Mitman noted that most companies pay on a bi-weekly basis. He inquired about the cost savings and asked how many towns use the bi-weekly system.

Selectmen agreed they should meet with Ripley and Whittemore to discuss the proposal in greater detail.

Selectmen voted Monday night to increase the half-time employee in the selectmen's office to fulltime. The pay increase for the position will be included in selectmen's budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

Selectman Sullivan said the office is increasingly busy with continual telephone calls and residents requesting assistance at the town hall. She suggested the current 20-hour position be increased to fulltime. Selectmen agreed and will put the increased staff position in next year's budget.

'Heirloom Discovery Day' scheduled for Oct.11

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its 1986 antiques appraisal "Heirloom Discovery Day" at the Caleb Lothrop House Saturday, October 11 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Heirloom Discovery Day" will feature two expert antique appraisers from Robert W. Skinner auction house and representatives from the firm of Del Greco, a Quincy coin, jewelry and precious metals specialist. As with previous Society-sponsored antiques appraisal days, this forthcoming day will give everyone the opportunity of bringing to experienced appraisers antiques, collectables, artwork, furniture, and almost anything else of comparable nature of which you have wondered the value. This year's "Heirloom Discovery Day" at the Society's Lothrop House has added for the first time a coin expert.

For antiques appraisal the Skinner firm will send two experienced appraisers. Karen Keane, General Manager and Vice President, a former teacher in the Boston Schools, holds a master's degree in art history from Boston University. She has worked at Robert Skinner's since 1978, and also has been associated with the Museum of Fine Arts. She also is a Skinner Auctioneer and has been Assistant Department Head of the Americana Department.

Stephen L. Fletcher is a Vice President, auctioneer and head of the Americana Department and has been associated with Robert W. Skinner, Inc. for more than 20 years. He conducts household and institutional appraisals, and participates in appraisal forums and programs for civic groups and historical societies.

Among the types of items which can be appraised at the Society's "Heirloom Discovery Day" will be artworks, books, chinaware, textiles, glass, porcelain, toys, dolls, and folk art. Colle .tables of many types, including gold and silver items and coins also will be appraised.

Del Greco Coins Inc. of Washington Street, Quincy, is one of this area's leading firms specializing in coins and jewelry, old gold and silver, and will appraise items in these categories at the "Heirloom Discovery Day".

Cost of the Skinner appraisal will be $7 per item for a verbal appraisal, with written appraisals being at somewhat higher cost. For the Del Greco appraisals, the minimum will be $2, with cost above that depending upon the value of the item appraised. The appraisal charges represent a donation to the Cohasset Historical Society.

Plan to bring your prized antiques, coins, and other collectables to the Saturday, October 11 "Heirloom Discovery Day" at the Cohasset Historical Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St.

Eagle Scout candidate beautifies Whitney Woods

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The work of Michael Lelecas has made the Whitney Woods of Cohasset a more inviting sanctuary.

Lelecas, an Eagle Scout candidate from the local Troop 28, cleared trails, built benches and bridges and marked trees in an effort to make the refuge more popular.

Whitney Woods is located off Route 3A, near the intersection with Sohier Street. Trail maps of the reservation usually are available at the Mobil service station across the highway from the Woods' entrance.

Lelecas said he chose for his Eagle Scout project to rehabilitate Whitney Woods, because he wanted to do a project "the people would get something out of."

Beginning in the Summer of 1985, Lelecas said his project was slowed down by Hurricane Gloria and the winter months.

"Hurricane Gloria threw stuff on the paths," he said, "so I had to reclear the paths, which took a long time.

"There are lots of paths in these woods," he added. Whitney Woods covers 688 acres; he estimated the project took him about 400 hours to complete.

"The main reason to do an Eagle Scout project," he explained, "is to show your leadership in getting other people involved, leading and instructing them."

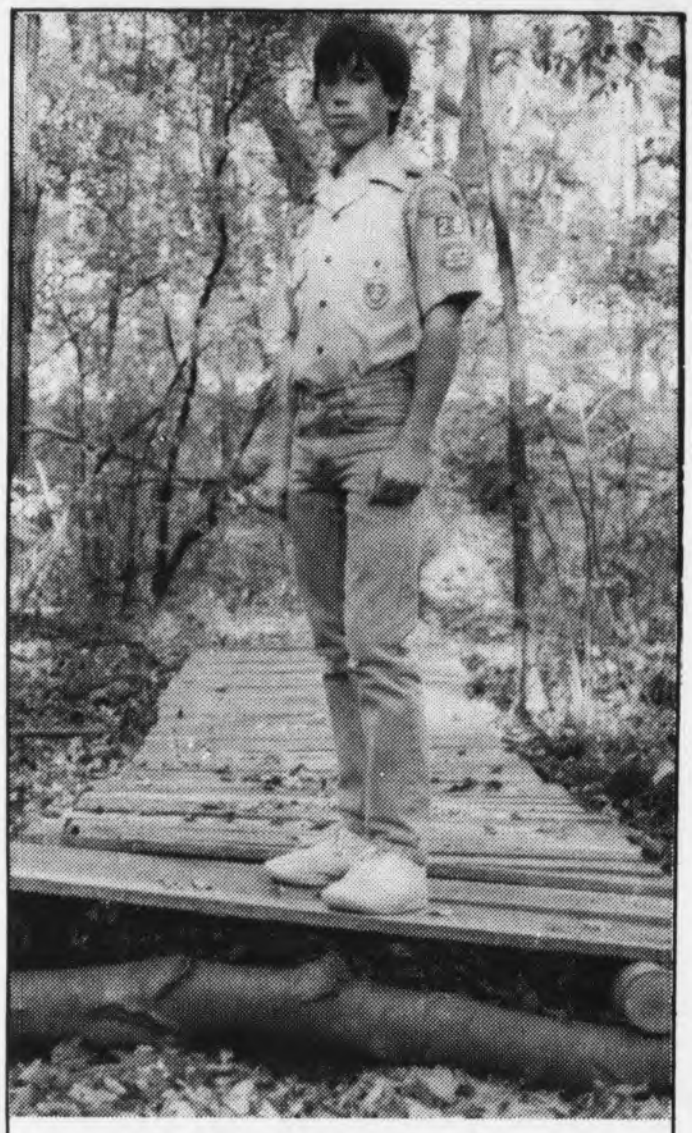
Lelecas said he enlisted the help of the Trustees of Reservations and their maintainance crew, L&R Realty, Rocco Laugelle, Richard Farwell, neighbors and other scouters.

"I constructed two bridges and repaired another one," he said. "I cleared many trails and built benches for people who might get tired; there are quite a few old people who walk through these woods."

Lelecas said he felt the most important thing he got out of the project, "was working with other people, getting to have them all work together."

He explained, "I learned how to organize the groups doing particular jobs and how to give instructions. I learned how to use the group to an advantage."

Lelecas commented, "It's not just the outdoors that interests you, it's learning to be a leader, not just a follower. It's learning to give your knowledge to other kids."



Michael Lelecas

A 16-year-old junior at Cohasset High School, Lelecas said he hopes to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and eventually go into medicine.

He added, his twin brother Nicholas is presently working on his Eagle Scout project at Wheelwright Park.

"He wants to be a doctor too," Lelecas said. "We want to work as a team."

He added, he believes his six years of scouting and his leadership training will help him acheive such ambitions.

Lelecas said the most enjoyable aspect of his Eagle Scout project was, "getting to work with other kids, teaching them what I know, and being able to organize a group."

He commented, "I've lived in Cohasset all my life, but I didn't know about these woods until someone mentioned this to me.

"I came into the woods with a guide," he said. There is so much information you can get from these woods: Ode's Den; Rooster Rock and all that. Not a lot of people in town know about them."

He explained, "That's another thing I wanted to accomplish, to get other people to know more about these woods."

He stood on one of the bridges he'd built and looked about at the forrested expanse and commented, "These woods are so huge.

"These woods are so huge, it's incredible. They go all the way back to Wompatuck," he said, "and out to where the old Army place was. They still have the old stone wall that separated them back there."

Now that Lelecas has completed his project, he must go before the Eagle Scout boards and assure the board members he is: Trustworthy; loyal; helpful; friendly; courteous; kind; obedient; cheerful; thrifty; brave; clean and reverent.

"You learn a lot from trying to be those things," Lelecas said. "When you first join scouting, you're not going to be all those things.

"Those are goals," he said, "and I feel I'm there, every one of those."

Lelecas said he wants to continue scouting after he becomes an Eagle Scout.

"I want to stay in the troop for a while and help them build up and become well known," he said, "so other kids will join, because it's a great advantage in getting you ready for when you get out of school. It helped me a lot, that's for sure."

Historical Society offers famous artwork

The Cohasset Historical Society currently is offering reproductions of some of the noteworthy local oil paintings, watercolors and prints from its numerous collection of historical art dealing with the subject of 19th century Cohasset.

Nearly a dozen of the Society's works, most picturing subjects relating to the early years of the town, can be obtained in high-grade photographic reproductions.

Among these unusual and unique works of art are such paintings as "Christopher James' Farmhouse" by Frank Shapleigh: (the 1704 James farmhouse is today's Red Lion Inn); a gouache of the barque "Kepler" in the harbor of Venice by the Italian painter Giovanni Lurzo ("Kepler" was owned in part by Cohasset's Capt. David Wilson); the "First Black Rock House" of Capt. Nathaniel Nichols (an early inn by the sea on Jerusalem Road) painted by a local artist and done in primitive style); also several striking views of Cohasset Harbor during the 19th century (one is the only known oil painting showing the first Minot's Light in the background); a fine recently done view of the harbor as it appeared in 1898, painted on commission by contemporary marine artist Richard Loud; an unusual oil of the three-masted schooner "Harold B. Cousens" (named for a member of a Cohasset sailmaking family); and a striking character study portrait of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Keeper Roscoe Green Lopaus painted by R. Atkinson Fox in the latter 19th century.

Other subjects available as prints include a picture of the ill-fated first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, a primitive watercolor of the Lothrop family at the Sandy Cove home of Capt. John Jacob Lothrop done by Sarah Young Lothrop before 1820; and a reproduction of John James Audubon's exquisite original print title "Swallow Tailed Hawk Carrying Garter Snake."

For information relating to prices of these most unusual art reproductions, to see small proof copies, or to order one or more, contact the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, or call 383-6930. These fine photographic reproductions are perfect for home or office, and make thoughtful gifts at any time of the year.

Flood insurance coverage increased

Limits of flood insurance coverage have been increased for Cohasset residents.

This coverage is a result of conversion to the Regular Phase of the National Flood Insurance Program.

As a result of recent adoption by town officials to safe-guard property from flooding, expanded limits of coverage are made possible. Where previously only $35,000 of coverage was available for a home, now $185,000 coverage may be purchased. Increases in contents coverage from a previous $10,000 to a present $60,000 are also available. Coverage increases for a small business and other classes of structures are also obtainable.

Information on rates and amounts of insurance available may be obtained from any licensed property and casualty insurance agent. During the first thirty (30) days after conversion to the regular program, coverage will become effective the day following application, whereas usually there is a five (5) day waiting period.

Travis Coley, an 8th grade member of the CHS soccer team, saw some action during a recent match.

☐ Received a note from Ruth Goodwin this week, something she thought we'd all get a chuckle out of . . . the story about Jack Nicholson and the flustered ice cream purchaser made the Daily Breeze in California, where her daughter, Ruthie lives! Ruthie couldn't believe her eyes, and sent it on to her mother. Sure can't get away with a thing in a small town, can you? PEOPLE magazine even called the owner of the Strawberry Parfait for a story on that one! Imagine our little town in PEOPLE?

☐ A "little birdie" came all the way from Phoenix the other day . . . seems that Joyce Hoffman was playing golf during her recent vacation there and shot a hole-in-one! Congrats to you Joyce.

☐ A special happy birthday wish to Tom Gormley, as he celebrates his seventieth birthday. Here's to a wonderful year and many more of them.

☐ We hear that Erwin Cone is recouperating nicely after his recent accident, something that's always good to report! You'll be as good as new in no time with all of us rooting for you, Erwin.

☐ The Community Center's fall programs are underway, and there are a few that should be mentioned: if you have a son or daughter that plans on taking the English Achievements this December, be sure that they enroll in Ron Emmons' English achievements course; it's a five week session, held on Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m., costs $45, and is designed to prepare students for this most important test. There is a Collecting English Pottery course that will familiarize you with different types of wares, meaning of marks and how to tell the age and origins of a piece. You can even bring in your piece for expert identification and appraisal! There are three workshops that aren't full yet: Braided Stuffed Holiday Bread, with Rita Kirk; Cut and Pierced Lampshades with Sue Leahy, and a Gingerbread House Worskhop with Donna Cloherty. They all promise to show you all the "tricks of the trade," and sounds like fun so call the Center for more information.

☐ There is also a special event taking place at the Community Center next month, on November 11 to be exact. They are planning a doll house tour from 1 to 5 p.m. They plan to "open some mini doors to you. Adults and children alike will enjoy this enchanted tour. Visit a half a dozen doll houses around town and a few more at the Center and have tea and cookies afterwards at the Center. Tickets are limited so get yours early.

☐ Congratulations to Kevin and Flora Neill of 622 Chief Justice Cushing Highway on the birth of their son. The grand event took place on Sept. 13, so everyone is sure to be settled in by now . . .

☐ Congratulations to the Boys Soccer team and their big win over Scituate last Saturday . . . and to the boys football team with their win over the same town! Its great to see these "friendly rivals" play one another, especially when we come out the victors!

☐ How about that Abigail Adams! In case you missed it, Abby has qualified to compete in the most prestigious equestrian events in the country, the USET Medal. She and her mare Waltzing Wave will travel to New Jersey for the event! Abby will also be in a lot of other events, so you

Editorial

Another choice?

If only it was a simple issue. If only the proposed restoration of the Old Colony railroad was as clear as black and white. But it isn't.

We all agree that transportation to Boston from the South Shore is the worst nightmare for any driver. But the solution is not as focused.

Driving to and from Boston each day is a slow death for many business people. It is one of life's little burdens we must endure.

So when someone pronounces a supposed cure to our long-suffering ailment, the very least we should do is to pay attention.

Pay attention to this proposed project.

It may not be the polio vaccine of the 80's, but the Old Colony is a viable, possible alternative to a problem that seems to have no end.

The rail line is there, in part and in whole. Consultants for the project compare this line to the very successful commuter system on the North Shore. There is a collective will out there that wants this railroad, and there is likely a way to make it all possible.

In last week's Cohasset meeting, supporters and opponents were told that if all goes according to schedule, there may be a rail line there by the year 1991. That is a statement bound to please those frustrated Boston commuters, and likely to enrage homeowners who live yards away from the sleeping steel line.

To use an inadequate analogy, it is comparable to the philosophy that we should provide shelter for the homeless - but not next door.

There are people here in strong support of the restoration project. But the most vocal opponents in any town, are those who live adjacent to the proposed rail route.

And we've noticed at these public meetings, that abutters who have lived in their homes many, many years, recall the Old Colony line with a childhood fondess. Generally speaking, they would enjoy a view of the trains again, the convenience of hopping on the train without a walk or drive.

It is largely the new abutters, those who purchased their homes in the last 15-20 years, who denounce the project. They are fearful of the trains, the noise, the vibrations it may create, and the dangers of a fast locomotive a few yards from their backdoor.

We're not saying they have no reason to worry. But the best route would be to intelligently follow the study being conducted by the MBTA consultants. Voice an opinion, and listen to all sides of the argument.

If a viable alternative exists, let it be known. But without the name-calling and allegations.

This is, afterall, Massachusetts. We live in a state where the governor has traditionally pledged himself to homerule. If the majority says no to the train, it will not be shoved down the throats of anyone along the Greenbush line.

This is, afterall, not Seabrook. In that community, the voice of the majority was silenced by a former governor who would not listen.

Listen to the arguments carefully. Listen to both sides. You don't have to be the loudest to be heard. Evaluate both sides, and decide what the best choice is for you and your community.

If the railroad is not the best choice, what is the solution to an increasing problem?

Think about it, but think fast. The sanity you save may be your own.

Town support needed for cultural committee

(This letter was written by the Cultural Exchange Committee and was presented to the Board of Selectmen. Ed.)

We want the citizens of Cohasset to be aware of what the Cultural Exchange Committee has to offer to everyone.

On Tuesday, September 30th, representatives from the Cultural Exchange Committee and the Board of Selectman appeared before the Advisory Board to ask for financial support for their efforts.

Because of the questions raised by the Advisory Board it became apparent to us that many people in our community might be unaware of the ongoing work that our committee has been charged to do.

After proclaiming the town of Souppes Sur Loing our sister city in August, 1984, the Board of Selectmen appointed a committee to begin its work. The first step was to receive the small delegation from Souppes.

The town-wide response during their ten day visit was warm, generous and evident in the attendance of the official welcoming dinner and also the town wide reception at the Lothrop House to welcome the Mayor of Souppes and to show support for the program. More than 250 people attended this affair on a sunny summer's afternoon.

The funds for this town-wide reception were generated by a gift from the Rotary Club and the sale of Bicentennial Flags sold by committee members. In addition each committee member and host family gave a great deal of their time, effort, and, frankly, finances to see that a proper reception was given to these officials.

A pen pal program is underway at the Jr. High School and with the cooperation and assistance from the Foreign Language Department our committee is developing an active French Club.

A successful exchange took place this summer between 13 year old Jennifer O'Leary and 13 year old Diane Prudhomme from Souppes and this will continue this summer.

Several families in Souppes have invited individuals and families to stay with them just as we have had several Cohasset families approach us with interest and enthusiasm in wanting to open their homes also.

A number of young people have expressed interest in a camp program that Souppes has made available to us.

In addition, Mayor Prudhomme has generously offered to provide some of our young adults with a summer job opportunity in order to make travel to Souppes possible for everyone.

Now it is time for Cohasset to make its official visit to Souppes.

The Chairman and the Vice-Chairman of the Cultural Exchange Committee and two of the host families will make the trip to Souppes on October 9th as representatives of Cohasset at the request of Mayor Prudhomme. The visit is an official one.

After we arrive in Paris at 7:30 in the morning on Friday, October 10th, the group, having been met by a welcoming committee, will travel to Souppes and will attend a formal luncheon.

On Saturday, October 11, at 9 o'oclock we will tour the schools and meet with the French committee to discuss a number of different exchange programs open to everyone. We will continue a tour in the afternoon. At 6 o'clock a reception will be held for us at the Communal Hall followed by a dinner at 7:30.

On Sunday, October 12th at 10 o'clock, we tour the nearby sugar factory and meet with the president of the company. After lunch, we tour a nearby fortified town and abbey. At 5 o'clock we attend a church concert performed by the residents of the Abbey.

The tour continues with a three day "free break". We will meet lots of people and do lots of things, but the Advisory Board needs to know this is an official visit with all the protocol involved that one should expect.

Our visit to Souppes will enable us to bring back to Cohasset a real picture of our sister city and how we can blend our goals.

Once these initial exchanges have taken place, we expect the formalities to be concluded and to open our program officially to everyone in Cohasset-with student exchanges, summer camp opportunities, house exchanges, etc. Anyone in Cohasset of any age need only approach a committee member to obtain more information for their own use.

The gifts that we will be presenting to the town of Souppes include a wooden and brass plaque with the Cohasset town seal on it and the word amiticia (Latin for Friendship) and the names of our two towns and the date October 1986. We will also be presenting the town with a photo album of pictures of Cohasset. In addition, Cohasset tiles, Pictorial books of Boston and other small gifts will be given to some of their Welcoming Committee members, Historical Society, Cultural Exchange Committee and town officials. Gifts for the host families will be provided by the four visiting couples.

In addition, we have been developing a series of slides of Cohasset to present to their townspeople and students and we will be working on one in France so that we can offer a slide show and script to our school children, teachers, Cohasset families and community organizations.

One of the most disturbing comments made during the Advisory Board meeting was the accusation that this committee served only a few—an idea that our committee has worked hard to guard against. It is for anyone of any age who reaches out for the opportunity.

The temptation, after being turned down for financial support twice, is to say, "If we're a town-appointed committee with no support, we might as well become defunct."

As far as we're concerned, this committee feels that it has one choice, not two, and that is to move forward with dignity and style to represent the town of Cohasset.

We need to know that the town of Cohasset stands behind us.

Father returns from West Coast to clear name

First in a two-part series.

By Cathy Conley
Mariner Staff

John Missett has come back to the Boston area from Benton City, Washington to "clear his name."

Almost two years ago, in December 1984, the 39-year-old electrician was thrust into the media limelight.

Newspapers and newscasters called him "kidnapper" and "abductor" of his own son.

The boy that he had brought up for 13 years was taken from him and given to his biological mother.

After this traumatic separation, John went through five months of court proceedings in which the charges were downgraded from kidnapping to custodial interference.

Since the arrest of John Missett two years ago, three out of the four principals in the case have changed their minds.

The son decided he wanted to go back to live with his father.

The biological mother decided the boy should go back to live with his father.

And the courts decided the boy should go back to live with his father.

The only one who did not change his mind during the entire two-year ordeal was John Missett.

"I knew that this would evenually happen. All I have ever wanted to do was take care of my son. I just wanted to be here in the area when Eric needed me," John said.

On June 22, 1971, a son Eric was born to John and Linda Missett.

When Eric was two and one-half, Linda left her husband and son to "find herself," in John Missett's words.

She wrote a letter to her husband and son in which she stated "I want out. I don't want possession of anything ... I cannot handle the responsibilities of family."

I came back to clear my name. No greater insult can be laid on any human being than to be called a kidnapper and a child abductor.

— John Missett

She told her husband that she must "truly find myself regardless of cost."

For the next few years, Linda Missett led a very troubled life, according to John.

On October 10, 1974, John and Linda Missett received a divorce settlement in Dedham Probate Court.

John was given full custody of his son.

"How many men were given custody of their children in those days," John said.

The divorce settlement specified that the mother and son could correspond freely and were allowed two telephone calls per month. Visitation rights were also spelled out.

For the next two years, John brought his son for visits with his mother every other weekend.

On March 22, 1975, in Dedham District Court, John received a modification on his divorce settlement which allowed him to take Eric out of state, if necessary, to find work.

"I complied with visitation rights until my son started to exhibit bizarre behavior.

"He would dismember his GI doll and bury the parts.

"He related troubling stories about the kind of people my former wife was associating with," John said.

"On one occasion, I found her so badly beaten I couldn't leave my son.

"At one point, my son said that during a fight, he was thrown across a room onto a couch by my ex-wife's suitor," John said.

This was the last straw.

"In September 1976 I went to court to ask that visitation be restrained to daylight hours, perhaps in the presence of her (Linda's) mother to ensure Eric's safety.

"I petitioned the court and wanted to tell them that I feared for my son's safety," John said.

At the same time, Linda Missett asked for more visitation rights.

"The judge gave his full weight and consideration to her which is both traditional and customary in Massachusetts," John said.

Linda Missett's request for visits every weekend was approved. John's restrictions were denied.

"The judge pushed his glasses to the end of his nose and looked over them at me with contempt.

"After he gave his decision, he said — 'do you have anything else to say.'

"From that day forward, I decided that I was the only one who cared about the welfare of my son. My ex-wife was not going to look after him. The courts were not going to look after him. I was the only one left," John said.

John Missett

In 1976, work was scarce for an electrician in the Boston area.

"Local 103's books were loaded. There was 50% unemployment in the area. So I decided to seek work elsewhere," John said.

On October 30, 1976, with full custody of his son and a modification order that he could leave the state with him, John vacated his apartment in Brockton with his son, went to New Hampshire, remarried, and began seeking work across the country.

The family lived for brief periods of times in more than dozen states including Montana, Nevada, California and Alaska.

"It was hard to get work because local men would get top priority so it was necessary to move a lot," John said.

From October 1976, when John, his new wife Nancy and Eric began relocating across country, they did not contact Linda Missett.

"I kept asking Eric if he wanted to call his mother, but he said no," John said.

In January 1977, Linda went to court and asked for full custody of Eric.

She said she had not heard from her son for four months and did not know where he was.

She was granted custody.

"Nobody ever contacted me; I was never allowed to even speak.

"My family who lives is South Boston always knew where I was but were never asked.

"At the time of the custody change, I was in violation of two telephone calls a month for four months. That's all," John said.

John said that the custody change papers did not catch up with him until March 1977.

"I said to myself — there they go again. I had no chance to even appear. They acted arbitrarily and without any concern for Eric's safety and welfare.

"I was not afraid of losing him.

"I felt that the legal agreement I had was good in 49 states.

"Eric was happy. I felt comfortable. My overriding reponsibility was to protect my son. It always was and it always will be," John said.

John disregarded the custody change order and "I went about my life."

"I never downgraded Linda to my son. I never said she was a bad person. And I always told Eric he could contact her if he wanted to," John said.

From 1976 to 1979, the Missett family crisscrossed the country wherever John could find work.

During this time, two sons were born to John and Nancy Misset.

Finally in 1979, when Eric was eight years old, the family settled in a rented home in Benton City, Washington.

"Benton City is a lazy little town —a nice clean place with a good school system. It was a perfect place to bring up a family," John said.

"I had always intended to have Eric see his mother when he was mature enough to handle it.

"I wanted him old enough to drop a dime if he needed me. I wanted him to be old enough so that his word would carry weight." John said.

As the years went on, work became scarce in Washington and the employment picture for an electrician brightened in Massachusetts.

John checked and found there were no warrants for him in Massachusetts.

In June 1984 the Missett family rented a home on Hemlock St. in Braintree.

Eric, then 13, stayed for the summer with a friend in Washington and joined his family in September, just in time to enter the seventh grade at South Junior High.

Meanwhile, Linda Missett had lost contact with her son for eight years.

During this time, she had tried in vain to find him.

She wrote letters to newspapers and made pleas on television.

In 1980, she registered with investigators of Child-Find in New York and sent a photo of Eric when he was three to the agency.

The picture was distributed throughout the country.

On October 12, 1983, newscaster Natalie Jacobsen showed Eric's photo as a missing child, "kidnapped" by his father.

Though no one in the Missett family saw the newscast, "we received multiple phone calls," John said.

And within an hour he had packed up his wife and three sons into the family car and drove to New Jersey.

John stayed there to find work and his family returned by train to their home in Benton City.

The snapshot of the tossled haired three-year-old caught the eye of South Middle School's nurse Geri Cook as she watched the newscast at her home at 21 South St., Braintree.

"This child has been missing for eight years. His name is Eric Missett," Jacobsen said.

Cooke knew this was the name and the face of the strapping 13 year old at South Middle.

She called Jacobsen, who in turn contacted Child-Find.

Within an hour the Braintree police were at the door of the Missett home.

The family was gone — but not by more than a few minutes.

After learning that her son was missing from the Braintree address, Linda Missett filed a criminal complaint against her ex-husband charging him with custodial interference.

But, this time, it was not difficult to find Eric.

Braintree school records showed that the Missett family had lived in Benton City, Washington, for the four year prior to coming east.

A call to that school system showed that the missing boy and his stepbrothers were back in their old school.

On November 16 in assistant district attorney Robert Banks office in Dedham, it was decided that Linda Missett accompanied by Braintree detective Gerald Currie and Quincy policewoman Barbara DiNatale would go to Benton City, with a warrant to arrest John Missett.

The Benton City court gave Linda custody and within a day, Linda, Eric and the two detectives had landed at Logan Airport in the glare of TV cameras and flashbulbs.

After a flurry of intense publicity, which lasted for almost two weeks, Eric and Linda settled into an apartment in Framingham, and the young teenager enrolled in junior high school.

After the much-publicized reunion Linda said that privacy was her top priority so that her son could get on with his life.

"Meanwhile, I had been called a kidnapper and an abductor," John Missett.

"You must remember that there was a frenzy about missing children in 1983.

"They wanted to drag me through the streets in chains like Quasimodo, in the glare of television lights," he said.

There were two warrants out for John Missett's arrest.

He waited until they were returned to court and then turned himself in to Quincy District Court.

"They had expected to find an abused, neglected child.

"Instead they found a handsome, popular, robust, well-adjusted teenager, who was the president of his class.

"Then they started to zero in on John Missett.

"They found he had no criminal record.

"They found he never even had a speeding ticket.

"They found a honorably discharged Vietnam veteran, who had spent the last 13 years bringing up his son," John said.

"The attitude of law enforcement officers and the courts changed.

"They were saying we don't want this guy to go to jail.

"But they sure as hell did when they sent two cops to Washington to find me.

"On April 26, 1984, though no media people ever asked, my case was continued without a finding for two years," John said.

First & second graders learn about the butterfly

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Monarchs visited first and second graders at the Osgood School Monday morning.

Anne Torrey of Scituate, introduced the students to the beauty and wonder of the monarch butterfly.

Formerly a Norwell teacher, Torrey one summer wanted to find a way to interest her own four children in the great outdoors.

Her neighbor recommended getting involved in a zoology research project, which involved the tagging and tracking of monarch butterflies.

Over the past two decades, Torrey has served as a research associate to Dr. Fred Urquhart, a professor of zoology at the University of Toronto.

The children listened with fascination as she described the monarch's metamorphosis from caterpillar to butterfly.

She explained, each monarch finds a friendly milkweed plant, where it lays about 600 eggs.

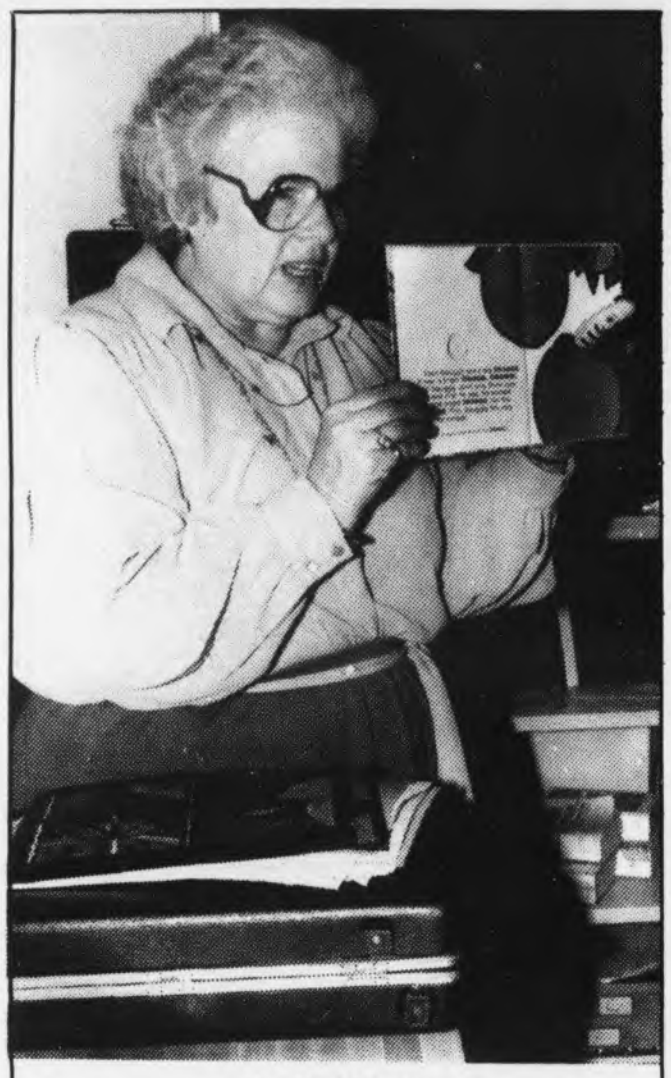
From an egg, emerges a tiny caterpillar," she said, "which eats the eggshell and then feeds on the milkweed plant. The milkweed is the only food monarchs eat as caterpillars."

Torrey was quick to point out, all 600 of the monarch's eggs do not survive. "I'm glad they don't," she said, "or we'd all be up to our eyebrows in monarchs."

Because the caterpillar's skin does not stretch as it grows, she explained, the little worm must moult. It puffs air under its old skin and crawls out in new covering. The caterpillar loses its skin four times within two weeks.

After its last moulting, the caterpillar moseys away from the milkweed and looks for a place to hang out.

The caterpillar spins a "silk button" and hangs from hooks on its back legs in J-form, Torrey said.



Anne Torrey

She compared the monarch's button-hook maneuver to "velcro sneaker wraps"... at which point half the audience began wrapping and unwrapping its sneakers.

"In a few hours," Torrey said, "the caterpillar becomes a chrysalis." She showed the children a pair of them dangling like green and gold earrings from a net.

She explained, the green color of the chrysalis disappears over two weeks' time, revealing the new creature inside the transparent shell.

When the monarch butterfly emerges, Torrey said, its body is fat and its wings are limp.

She explained, the insect's body is filled with a fluid which fills the small-scaled wings "like a beach ball.

The fluid in the wings also acts to protect the colorful monarch from predators. Birds can't stand the taste of the stuff and they don't eat monarchs.

Rather than milkweed, the butterfly nourishes itself on the nectar of flowers. "It's an important part of providing us food," Torrey told the children, "because it pollinates the flowers as bees do."

Torrey showed the class a slide show, which described Urquhart's research project.

She told the students how she refrigerated the butterflies and tagged them.

The tags identified the eastern monarch's trail from Toronto, where it spends July and August, to the mountains of Mexico where it winters.

She explained, monarchs west of the Rocky mountains congregate along the Baja peninsula of western Mexico, where it is against the law to disturb them.

She added, the monarchs are partial to a tree coincidentally called the Torrey pine.

"One of these days, I'm going to go out there and see them," she said.

What's next? No more soccer?

Letters

To the Editor:

One thing I like about the people in the government in Cohasset is that they "tell it like it is." Just think, we'll have dinosaurs grazing on the common soon with the progress we're making here.

I haven't been going to the "Log and Line" often enough. I missed the one about soccer being taboo. I've even been told, and I consider the source reputable, that all signs on entrance roads to Cohasset will read, "Mandatory one year sentence for carrying a soccer ball in this town."

Let's get serious! I hope all the parents and followers of Cohasset Soccer Girl's Leagues, Boy's Leagues, Clinics, School Teams etc. will literally stormTown Hall in protest to the blatant attack on this sport by someone in the Park & Tree Dept. I won't even mention anything regarding the action by the Board of Advisors because they bet on the Edsel and voted for Mondale too!

I've devoted a lot of time to Cohasset soccer. I guess I could take up knitting and sewing since it looks like Mr. Laugelle's recommendations would affect the girls teams most.

The heck with Septic Systems, I've really been shaken up by this latest bit of nonsense.

Are we the American nightmare?

To the Editor:

In her "Memo" to the Mariner of October 2, State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray states that "under the presidency of Ronald Reagan we have seen the re-emergence of the "American Dream", a revitalization of the economy and renewed commitment to the principles that made our nation great".

I question whether we are seeing an American Dream or an American Nightmare. To quote James Reston in the New York Times of October 5. "The Federal debt during his Administration had doubled by 1985 and has now crossed the $2 trillion mark. Net interest on the debt has almost tripled, the trade deficit is now four times larger than it was when he came into office, and for the first time since 1959 the United States is now a net importer of food."

In addition, the Reagan Administration has reduced aid to the poor, dragged its feet on cleaning up toxic waste and coping with acid rain, and shirked what should be our assistance to developing countries.

I hope that the National elections next month will point the way to a change in the Administration in 1988 that will restore hope of regaining the American Dream.

Sincerely yours,
Chester W. Smith

Thanks to Cohasset Fire Department

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Fire Department of Cohasset for responding to the call my children made Thursday, Oct. 2 to transport me to the So. Shore Hospital due to illness.

It is sure nice to know that we have such caring young men to respond to our needs in an emergency. They even took the time to find out if my children were old enough to be left alone.

My family and I wish to extend our thanks to these dedicated men on the Cohasset Fire Dept. and are sure glad to have them in our town.

Student council meeting held

The following items were discussed at the October 1 meeting of the CHS Student Council:

1. Spirit Buses

The spectator buses to the Millis football game on September 26 were a great success and it was suggested that there be spectator buses more often to the various athletic events.

2. Coke Machine

The Coke machine at CHS has brought in a big profit to the treasury since it was installed.

3. Multi-Media Program - "Everyday Heroes"

On November 12, a wide screen movie entitled "Everyday Heroes" will be shown during Periods: 2 & 3 for grades 7, 8 & 9 and then 10, 11 & 12. The cost for this movie is $350 which the School Committee will take care of and the profits will also go to the treasury. Students will be charged $.50 if they wish to watch the movie. The subject of the program is commitment and dedication.

4. Leadership Training Program

On October 22, an all-day program will be offered to student council members. The program will stress communication, working together and getting to know one another better. The student council members will be excused from classes. It has been requested that no tests be given on that day.

5. Music Department Request for Dance

The music department requested permission to hold a dance later this month but it will be rescheduled since the junior class has planned a dance within the month.

6. Raffle

A raffle for a portable TV that Mr. Stover donated was held during Saturday's football game against Scituate. Tickets were sold during the lunch periods last week and the football game with the drawing held during halftime. The profits will also go to the Student Council treasury.

The Coming of Winter

The leaves are turning brown as the soil,
The plants are getting ready for their winter sleep.
The mushrooms are white as the snow.
I saw a bird flying tree to tree, but I don't know its name.

Pen pal and astronauts

Donald Kelly, a veteran social studies teacher in Cohasset Junior-Senior High school is the faculty advisor for two unique student programs.

For the past 20 years, Mr. Kelly has guided Cohasset Junior High School students in a pen-pal program with students in Africa and Asia. The program is offered by the Afro-Asian Center in Saugerties, New York. This is a unique program which has set up a year-long personal penfriend program between students of corresponding grade levels in the United States, certain African nations and those of Asia.

Presently there are thirty-five 7th and 8th graders in Cohasset signed up in the program. "I have been running this program for twenty years and I find it an exciting way for my students to learn about the culture of African and Asian peoples," Mr. Kelly stated.

"The students bring their penpal letters to class and we all share the rich information contained in them" he added.

Recently Mr. Kelly became involved in The Young Astronaut Program. Sponsored by The Young Astronaut Council, this innovative program receives its monetary support from over 20 large American corporations.

Members who join the program receive newsletters, posters, accurate computer updates on space exploration, participate in national contests and assist one another to achieve better grades in mathematics, science and social studies.

Presently there are nine junior high school students participating in this program. They are: Christopher Bartow, Jason Legere, Dan Fitzpatrick, Scott Lavalle, Christian Anderson, John Donovan, Peter Glyman, Jon Mitchell and Jennifer O'Leary.

Student elections

Plans were made recently for the election of two Cohasset High School juniors to take part in the year-long Student Government Day Program.

Mr. Edward F. Sheehan, Social Studies Department Chairman, who serves as faculty advisor for the program, appeared before a meeting of the Student Council to explain that body's role in the program.

The Student Council will conduct an election in grades 9-12 Tuesday, November 4th. Philip Mahoney, Student Council President, assisted Mr. Sheehan in explaining the program and the Student Council's supervision of the nomination and election of delegates.

Student Government Day is a program mandated by the Massachusetts State Legislature. Participating high schools in Massachusetts pick one delegate and an alternate from their junior class. The two juniors then attend seminars in the State House during the period from December to March.

April 4, the delegates fill thier designated rolls in State Government. Friday January 24, 1987 the names of all delegates are put into a glass bowl and the first name drawn serves as State Governor for April 4 — which is designated by law as Student Government Day. Other names are drawn and students are chosen to be State Judges, Heads of State Departments and members of the Massachusetts' House of Representatives and Senate. Parents and relatives of these students are invited to attend these ceremonies on Student Government Day.

CHS Field Hockey team out to even the score

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Opponents beware! Cohasset High School's field hockey squad is serving notice, "This is our year."

The defending league champions got stopped in the state semi-finals by Bellingham last year, 1-0. Now, they're out to even the score.

"This is the team that can go all the way," coach Clare Brady said. "I think we can do it if we want it badly enough. I think this team really wants this; they're working hard and believe it or not, they even ask for extra running. It's a dream team!"

At the season's midway mark, the Skippers have suffered only one loss, a 2-1 decision to Sandwich.

"Against Sandwich, we weren't using our speed enough," Brady commented. "We're a very quick team, but we weren't coming out quickly enough in that game; we were waiting to see how the other team was playing.

"We talked about it," she added. There was a tremendous difference in the Skippers' style in the next game.

"We beat Duxbury for the first time in about 10 years," she said. "We came out and attacked, and it was probably the best game we ever played as a team. Everything we talked about, they went out and changed."

Brady added, "I was in shock; it was really amazing. Our speed, when we use it, and our good stick-handling can sometimes make the other team look foolish.

"We dribbled right around them, as if they were standing still," she said.

Along with their speed, stick-handling and balanced scoring attack, the Skippers have a super defensive weapon. Her name is Lisa Shumaker. "The best in the state," is how Brady described her team's goaltender. "You can't get the ball by this one.

"Last week," she recalled, "there was a penalty stroke called on us, which means they put the ball in front of the net and they get one shot on the goalie.

"The goalie has to stand there with both feet on the line," she explained, "so they have almost the entire net to shoot at.

"It's something they practice all the time," Brady said. "It's a very difficult shot for the person taking the shot, and I always tell them if they put the ball in the opposite top corner, no one can stop it.

"Last week in the game against Sandwich," she said, "I saw someone stop it."

The coach smiled and pointed to Shumaker. "She got her hand up there; it deflected off the post and hit her in the helmet. She batted her helmet down and kicked the ball out of there," she said.

"The girl is amazing," Brady commented. "She's so quick and she has such good concentration. She's always in the right position."

"The other coach came up to her yesterday and said, 'Are you a senior yet?'," Brady quipped. "He's glad that she's leaving this year."

Along with Shumaker, Maureen Farren is helping Cohasset to victory with a sharpshooting flair that netted her 10 goals, along with 10 assists, in the first eight games.

The CHS team in practice as they continue a winning season and head toward a berth in the State Tourney.

Farren is the second most prolific goal scorer in the league.

Brady, who is in her first year as head coach, after serving as an assistant for the past eight years said, "I'm trying to improve each player as an individual and then trying to put them together as a team.

"One of the things I really strive for is teamwork," she explained. "We try to use everybody to the best of their ability. If we have one person who's really good at something, we try to exploit that."

Brady said, a key factor in the Cohasset squad's ability to operate as a team is communication.

"They talk a lot out there on the field," she said. "There's a lot of input from the kids, so they can take a lot of credit for this ball club.

They're watching the same game I am," she added, "but they can see different things."

Beyond the speed, talent, drive, communication and team work, this Cohasset club has shown a greater asset, which may bring it back to face the Blackhawks.

Heart.

"The day after my father died," Brady recalled, "we had a game. I came to the game and these kids were absolutely amazing.

"They came up and said, 'We don't know what to say to you, so we're going to go out and play. At halftime, it was 7-0. And they won 10-0; it was incredible."

She explained, "Except for that game, the most points we've scored in a single game is four. They played absolutely flawless field hockey."

CHS sports roundup: Football team rolls on

By Lisa Shumaker
Sports Correspondent

Football

Saturday, the boys clobbered Scituate by an impressive score of 23-0.

In the first quarter Bobby Durkin burst up the middle of the line and ran 40 yards to give Cohasset a 7-0 lead.

The key to this touchdown according to coach Phil Pisano, was the hole created in the middle of the line by the excellent blocking of Patrick O'Conner and Jeff Lloyd. With one second remaining in the half, quarterback Peter Sandblom, who replaced the injured Sean Corkery, threw a 40 yard bomb which connected with Bobby Durkin in the endzone to give Cohasset a surprising 14-0 lead.

In the third quarter, the offensive line established itself, dominated over Scituate's defense, and allowed the Skippers to march 65 yards until Bobby Durkin finally ended the march with a touchdown. Finally, in the final quarter Bobby Durkin finished off his perfect scoring record by kicking a 30 yard field goal to assure the 23-0 victory for Cohasset.

Obviously Durkin was once again Cohasset's star offensive player as he earned all the Skipper's points and gained most of the yardage for the team. However, Pisano was equally impressed with his offensive line consisting of Adam Whitman, Mat Maloney, Jeff Lloyd, Jeff Lydon, Jeff Soltesz, Patrick O'Conner, and Mike Meers. This group of linemen controlled Scituate's defense which allowed Bobby to gain the yards necessary for the win. Furthermore, Pisano was proud of the way in which Peter Sandblom came into the game and replaced Sean Corkery at quarterback. Pisano was very upset about Sean's injury and realizes that Sean will be surely missed; however Pisano was encouraged by the poise which Peter showed in this game. Pisano was also pleased with the way in which Bob Coleman came off the bench to play fullback.

Pisano was also happy with the defensive efforts of his team and felt that Philip Mahoney, Mat Maloney, and Jeff Lloyd led Cohasset's impressive defense.

This Saturday the boys face one of their toughest challenges of the season, Weston. Weston, according to Pisano, has a very strong and very big team and should prove to be tough competition for the Skippers. However, Pisano is confident in his team's ability and talent and feels Cohasset should fare well on Saturday.

Girls' Soccer

Wednesday, the girls tied East Bridgewater 5-5. Coach Kennan Startzell felt his team worked well together in this game and he was proud of the fact that the girls did not quit even though they got behind in the score early in the game. Startzell believes that his team must develop its "killer instinct" in order to pull out tough games like this.

Catlin Staunton led Cohasset offensively with three goals while Kerri Kirkendall followed with two of her own. Startzell also felt that both Susan Riley and Melissa Shea turned in good efforts for the Skippers.

Friday, Cohasset lost a close game to Duxbury 3-2. After being down 2-0 for most of the second half, Cohasset's Liz O'Leary came back to score and put Cohasset only one goal down. Then with 10 minutes remaining in the game, Kerri Kirkendall kicked in the tying goal for Cohasset. Unfortunately the Dragons came back and scored again to put themselves ahead for good 3-2.

Startzell called this an "incredible game" and was very proud of his team's efforts. Startzell was especially pleased with the way in which his bench rallied behind the team and incited the playing members to excell. Startzell felt his whole team played well but specifically singled out Kerri Kirkendall, Melissa Shea, and goalie Nancy Riley as having great games.

This week the girls face Silver Lake on Monday, Hanover, Tuesday, and Norwell Thursday. All games should be very exciting and Cohasset is very capable of coming out on top in all three.

Field Hockey

The girls started off the week Wednesday by beating Duxbury for the first time in over 10 years! Early in the first half, Maureen Farren scored with assists coming from Julie Bowdoin and Sarah Dickerman to put Cohasset ahead 1-0. Then in an exciting second half Maria Cahill scored to further increase the lead to 2-0. Then Duxbury pressured Cohasset and came away with a goal. However, Cindy Spooner clinched the victory for the Skipprs slipping the ball by the Duxbury goalie to give Cohasset the win.

Coach Clare Brady felt that her team played the best game they played all season and believed that the key to the victory was the fact that Cohasset dominated the game from the opening whistle. Furthermore, Cohasset used its speed and never had any letdowns throughout the entire game.

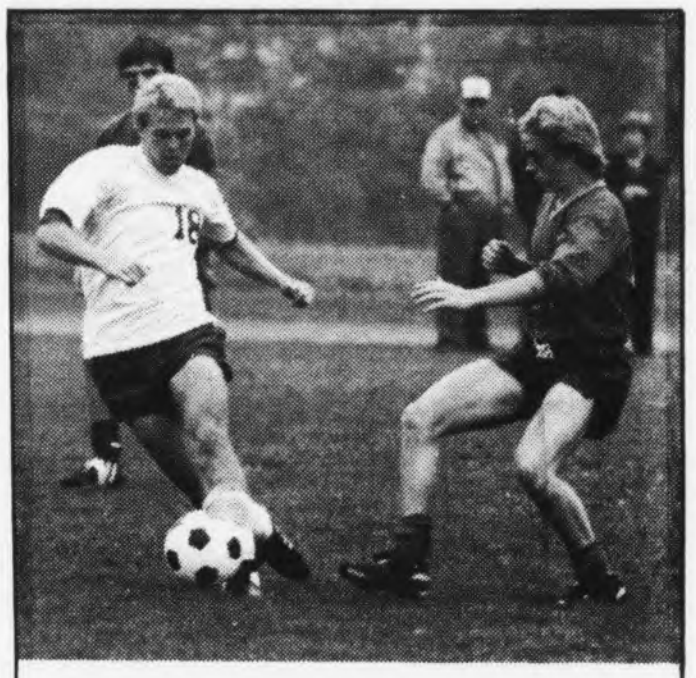
Brady was especially impressed with the efforts of Julie Bowdoin and Debby Hartley in this game but felt that everyone on the team contributed to this tremendous victory.

Friday, the girls tied Hanover 1-1 in what was one of the most frustrating games of Cohasset's season. Cohasset controlled the ball almost the entire game, however the girls just could not put the ball in the net.

Hanover led most of the game after scoring early in the first half, however halfway through the second half Maureen Farren tipped in Debby Hartley's drive into the circle to tie the game 1-1.

Brady cited Sarah Dickerman, Sara Bishop, and Debby Hartley as having good games against Hanover.

This week the girls face Middleboro on Tuesday and Abington on Thursday. Both games are home and both are against teams that Cohasset beat easily the first time around. Hopefully the girls will be able to repeat their first time performance this week. Friday, the Skippers travel to Scituate and take on a winless Sailor team.



Cohasset's John Reidy (18) in action against the Hanover Soccer Team.

Drama workshop begins

In "Take Her, She's Mine," Phoebe and Henry Ephron gave Broadway a warm, affectionate comedy. The plot is built around a typical father and daughter and traces the humorous problems which occur when the daughter goes off to college. With this play the Cohasset Drama Workshop will begin its 1986-1987 season October 11 and 12.

Featured as Frank and Anne Michaelson are junior Joe Mazza and senior Karin Anglin. The Michaelson's college-bound daughter, Mollie, will be played by senior Jenna Emmons, while her younger sister will be played on alternate nights by juniors Jen Coley and Heather St.Onge.

The hometown boy who pursues Mollie will be portrayed by junior Peter Kasperowicz with junior Michele Casolaro featured as his mother. Juniors Mary Beth McNamara and Laura Kuhn and seniors Cindy Bell and Jill Shockman are Mollie's fellow dorm residents. The boys who pursue Mollie and her friends are seniors Phil Mahoney, James Walsh and Mark McManus and juniors Jason Marsac and Scott Caristo. Mollie's feminist professor will be junior Lauren Kalita; the high school principal will be Mary McElroy, a senior. Junior Samantha Platt will appear as a punk coffee house owner.

"Take Her, She's Mine" will be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, October 11 and 12, in the high school auditorium. Tickets are priced at $3 in advance and $4 at the door.

A new attitude revealed at fire station . . .

for the department. The officer provides that training to meet the specifications of the program.

"It's a good department with a lot of potential," Chief Brock stated. "If you ask me what it would take to make it the best department for Cohasset, I would say a 100-man department is financially inconceivable for this town. The size is pretty much dictated by the budget. But we can exploit the potential of the members we have here." The men who were once sharply divided with the former chief, are now "cooperative" according to their new administrator. "I've received a lot of cooperation from them, and they've helped me. The department is looking to improve.

"I wasn't around here before, but I'm pleased with the direction we're going in. Suggestions I have made, or requests — the men agree with them and in turn, they're able to voice their opinions. Usually they have ideas they want to share."

The new chief described his management style as "a team leader. I don't feel in this department this size the chief can work independently without feedback from his men. It takes their cooperation to get things done. This form of management is a quicker way of getting things done. In this department, with the rotations the way they are, it takes a full week before you get feedback on any idea. But we're beginning to change and the men are cooperative."

When asked how he would assess his performance, Chief Brock thought long. "I'd say I'm doing a good job, more because I've done only what was needed in this department. It will take another year to measure how good a job. We've been in a transition phase and it will take another 6-12 months to measure the progress we've made."

The chief said the men will be seen in the town more often on inspections, and in the schools bringing fire prevention education into the community.

One firefighter said, "last year, things went down, down. Things couldn't have been worse. Then it's wait and see, wait and see. I think people are beginning to see.

"The new chief," he continued, " is more apt to be deliberate. He thinks things through, weighing the effect of whatever decision he makes. We don't have the single order issued by the chief, which is the tool some chiefs used to assert their authority."

The new administrator, he said, "applies his authority through people. He talks to his men. I think he's very comfortable talking with his officers. He's assessed the department quickly as being a department that has not been taking full advantage of all the technology available. He has reorganized, got us a new engine and other equipment which was sorely needed."

The Cohasset Fire Department, he added, "always attended to business. This is the way the department was run years ago — we did our business without any problems. As far as I'm concerned, this is the way I want it to continue. You do your job, maybe you get a thank-you, maybe not, you get your pay and go home. That's all."

Chase Group Realtors joins forces with DeWolfe Co.

By John Black
Mariner Correspondent

The Chase Group Realtors has joined forces with DeWolfe New England, one of the largest privately owned real estate organizations.

In a press conference Monday at Kimball's By the Sea, Chase Group President David J. Chase, said "We saw the need to offer our customers and clients a broader range of services and more extensive marketing programs. DeWolfe New England offered us the opportunity to provide those services and systems through its $500,000,000 company."

The existing management and sales team of Chase will remain in place. David Chase will serve on the DeWolfe Advisory Board and as chairman of the Board of Chase Real Estate. J. Phillip Murphy, Chase's partner, has been named a vice president of DeWolfe New England and will remain involved in the management operation of Chase in Hingham.

The Chase Group Realtors is a six office residential and commercial/industrial real estate brokerage firm serving the South Shore. Offices are located in Hingham, Marshfield, Duxbury, Pembroke and Plymouth with 60 full time realtors associated with the firm.

The DeWolfe New England organization was founded in Milton and both Chase and DeWolfe feel that they can offer the South Shore the best in real estate and related services.

"Every town is different." Richard DeWolfe, President of DeWolfe New England, informed those employees attending the breakfast conference. "We feel it's important that management is responsible to the needs of their own individual communities."

This acquisition by DeWolfe is the second major acquisition within 2 years for the company and brings the number of DeWolfe offices to 28, ranging from Nashua to Plymouth.

Chase Real Estate, as the new company will be known, will benefit from the expanded service capability, professional marketing support, state-of-the-art technology systems, financial and relocation services as well as an executive training program developed by DeWolfe.

The training programs will be held at area DeWolfe Learning Centers and consist of 3 phases: basic training for those with no realtor experience, certification for those specializing in areas such as appraisal or relocation and management training.

The merger between the two companies will be heralded by a well organized media blitz that includes TV and radio commercials and advertising and local papers.

"We are going forward with great enthusiasm!" David Chase assured his employees at the close of the conference. His statement, as well as the reason for the meeting, were given a round of applause.

DeWolfe New England also owns and operates Emerson Real Estate and DeWolfe Realtors, Property Trust, the financial services arm of the organization, and DeWolfe Relocation Services, Inc.

Corporate headquartersof DeWolfe New England are located in Lexington. Anyone concerned with the companies' merging may contact Dale Marcy at 863-5822.

N.E. Friends Home

Meeting for worship in the manner of friends is held every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. at the New England Friends Home, 86 Turkey Hill Lane, Hingham.

An effort is now being made to revitalize this meeting and begin a First Day School for children of those attending. Quaker meeting is a silent worship service during which each person turns inward in order to find the presence of God within. This silence is frequently, though not always, broken by spoken words. For many Quakers and attenders at meeting, the fact that the worship is not directed by a priest, minister or rabbi is an asset. This allows each person to accept responsibility for his own worship experience.

A new attitude revealed at fire station . . .

for the department. The officer provides that training to meet the specifications of the program.

"It's a good department with a lot of potential," Chief Brock stated. "If you ask me what it would take to make it the best department for Cohasset, I would say a 100-man department is financially inconceivable for this town. The size is pretty much dictated by the budget. But we can exploit the potential of the members we have here." The men who were once sharply divided with the former chief, are now "cooperative" according to their new administrator. "I've received a lot of cooperation from them, and they've helped me. The department is looking to improve.

"I wasn't around here before, but I'm pleased with the direction we're going in. Suggestions I have made, or requests — the men agree with them and in turn, they're able to voice their opinions. Usually they have ideas they want to share."

The new chief described his management style as "a team leader. I don't feel in this department this size the chief can work independently without feedback from his men. It takes their cooperation to get things done. This form of management is a quicker way of getting things done. In this department, with the rotations the way they are, it takes a full week before you get feedback on any idea. But we're beginning to change and the men are cooperative."

When asked how he would assess his performance, Chief Brock thought long. "I'd say I'm doing a good job, more because I've done only what was needed in this department. It will take another year to measure how good a job. We've been in a transition phase and it will take another 6-12 months to measure the progress we've made."

The chief said the men will be seen in the town more often on inspections, and in the schools bringing fire prevention education into the community.

One firefighter said, "last year, things went down, down. Things couldn't have been worse. Then it's wait and see, wait and see. I think people are beginning to see.

"The new chief," he continued, " is more apt to be deliberate. He thinks things through, weighing the effect of whatever decision he makes. We don't have the single order issued by the chief, which is the tool some chiefs used to assert their authority."

The new administrator, he said, "applies his authority through people. He talks to his men. I think he's very comfortable talking with his officers. He's assessed the department quickly as being a department that has not been taking full advantage of all the technology available. He has reorganized, got us a new engine and other equipment which was sorely needed."

The Cohasset Fire Department, he added, "always attended to business. This is the way the department was run years ago — we did our business without any problems. As far as I'm concerned, this is the way I want it to continue. You do your job, maybe you get a thank-you, maybe not, you get your pay and go home. That's all."

One of Sandy's goals is to add more information about our parishioners, graduations, births, marriages, needs for prayer, baptism. HELP FOR FR. NGWENYA

The Outreach Committee in September voted to assist Fr. Jabula Ngwenya rebuild the roof of his retirement home in Swaziland, which was damaged by severe storm winds. Fr. Ngwenya still serves a large parish which includes seven congregations. Our aid to him today renews a relationship that began years ago when Fr. Ngwenya visited and preached at St. Stephen's, and reminds us of our wider church family.

Other Outreach grants include: $250 to the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese for use in their grant program, which last year awarded funds to 34 programs. The Episcopal Divinity School was named to receive our church's grant toward theological education.

VILLAGE FAIR PROCEEDS

Each year the Outreach Committee in conjunction with the Village Fair Chairperson this year, Sheila Wallingford, choose projects to be funded by the proceeds of our Village Fair, Saturday, December 6. Two programs were selected.

The Anglican Child Care Fund/Ethiopia, established in 1985 by the Presiding Bishop's Fund, provides shelter and care for orphans in that country. One half of St. Stephen's portion of the Fair proceeds will go to this program. A correspondence will in turn be set up between the church school and one or two of the children.

The second half of the proceeds will go to our Diocesan Hospitality program which provides guest rooms for relatives and friends of hospital patients needing specialized treatment in the Boston area. In three years this ministry has provided over eight thousand night's lodgings for guests from 47 states and 28 foreign countries.

SENIOR CITIZENS

Gertrude Hooper is organizing members of St. Stephen's to serve the Senior Citizen lunch at the Unitarian Parish House on the second Tuesday of each month. This service involves no meal preparation, and only two hours of time, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. This is a valued ministry - if you would like to serve call Gertrude at 383-1111.

BICYCLE TRIP TO BE POSTPONED

A parish bicycle trip to Cape Cod originally scheduled for October 4 will be postponed to a future weekend.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Peter Pearce began a two-year term as Property Committee chairman at a meeting on October 1. He succeeds Marge Dougherty, who concluded her second term ending four years of dedicated service. The Vestry. acknowledging her fine work, said: "Not only have you tackled difficult tasks with energy and enthusiasm,you've carried through on projects in a responsible and capable manner." Thank you, Marge.

Marion Ellis of Scituate celebrated her 94th birthday, Oct. 5th. Unfortunately, she was in the South Shore Hospital. The congregation had a cake, sang happy birthday and sent cake, a gift and cards to her. We hope she recuperates soon and is back in her rightful place in the choir loft.

At the South Shore Science Center . . .

Join naturalist Barbara Devine at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell on an autumn walk through a "knob and kettle" area to the far north end of Jacobs Pond. The path will wind through the boulder field remains of a recessional moraine and along the ridges of eskers left by the last glacier. Come catch the color of a changing season. Wear comfortable walking shoes and meet at the Science Center on Wednesday, Oct. 15. The walk is from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Prepaid registration is required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559.

FLOWER ARRANGEMENTS

Think back to the warm days of summer and get a jump on your Christmas presents at the same time. Create beautiful floral cards using pressed and dried flowers from local meadows. We'll provide flowers; other materials, samples and helpful hints. Join naturalists, Jennifer Beaven and Sandra Palmer on Thursday, Oct. 16 at the Science Center from 10 a.m. to noon. Prepaid registration is required (members, $5; non-members, $6). Call 659-2559.

RED-BELLIED TURTLES

Is it a painted or red bellied turtle—can you tell the difference? Come and find out all about this rare reptile. The Red Bellied Turtle was declared a federally endangered species in 1980 and is presently known to be located in only a few ponds in the Plymouth/Carver area.

Dr. Terry Graham, Assoc. Professor of Biology, Worcester State College, has spent many years studying these unique chelonians and is involved in efforts to protect and assist existing populations. This illustrated discussion will include his most recent fieldwork and the exciting "headstart" program.

Join us at the Science Center, Friday, Oct. 17 from 8 to 10 p.m. Prepaid registration is required (members/$5; non-members/$6.50). Call 659-2559.

FLIGHT OF THE MONARCH

The Mystery of the Monarch! Much of this butterfly's life and travels remains a riddle for researchers. Anne Torrey will help us learn more about the monarch born on our native milkweed. Butterfly banding will also be explained. Join us at the Science Center, Saturday, Oct. 18 from 10 to noon. A great morning for the whole family! Prepaid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays. We observe Columbus Day on Monday, Oct. 13. Trails, exhibits, library, gift shop. Free admission.

Joan Benoit to dedicate new track

Championship marathon runner Joan Benoit will be cutting the ribbon on the new $350,000 track facility at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham, October 9.

The ceremony which will be attended by parents, faculty members, community leaders and others who have helped with the planning and fund-raising, will take place at 2 p.m. The public is invited.

The athletic complex features a 400-meter track with softball and soccer fields. The eight-lane track has a modern tracklite surface, with a separate area for field events and two jumping pits. The fields have underground sprinkler systems.

At the dedication ceremony, Notre Dame athletes will participate in a relay race to show spectators the ability of some of the runners who have brought three consecutive cross-country state titles to the Hingham school.

Following the festivities, refreshments will be served.

Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, has planned an open house for prospective students and their families on Sunday, Oct. 19 from 2 to 5 p.m. The 68-acre campus is located at 1073 Main St. (Rte. 228).

NDA, a college preparatory high school and the oldest Catholic day academy for girls in New England, was founded by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur in 1853. The Academy was located at several sites in Boston for over 100 years before moving to Hingham in 1965.

The school is equipped with modern classrooms, a library, auditorium, studio facilities, state of the art computer training equipment, sports facilities including a new $350,000 track, soccer and softball complex, a chapel and beautifully landscaped grounds.

Students presently enrolled in the school come from 40 cities and towns and 96 percent of the graduates attend four-year colleges.

Transportation to the Academy is available from Boston, Hingham, Scituate, Dorchester, Quincy, Plymouth and Brockton areas.

For further information on the open house or for information on the entrance exam which will be held Dec. 13, contact the NDA Admissions Office at 749-5930 or 749-5455.

marriage, in a family with divorce and death, and with spouses and children of alcoholics. Dr. Fusaro will talk about the things we can do to relieve that stress," Riley said. "Rather than doing something destructive like overeating, she will talk about constructive ways to deal with the problem."

Riley and Caughey explained the number of issues the Social Service League has recently highlighted, including alcholism, drug abuse, and grief. The league decided it would be worthwhile to deal with the topic of women's health issues. "There are so many topics to discuss, things we really don't have a chance to always discuss with our own physicians for whatever reason. But with more women doctors, we feel we have an opportunity now to deal directly with these topics and invite everyone to participate," Riley explained.

Jeff Steele & Virginia Riley

Riley and Caughey expect the range of topics to include information about Pre Menstrual Syndrome (PMS), cystitis, bladder infection and cancer. "I think women physicians are able to relate easily to issues of concern from other women," they said.

The program will be held October 30 from noon to about 2:30 p.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Registration is not required. However, babysitting will be provided for anyone who pre-registers. If the babysitting service is needed, call the Social Service League at 383-0771 or 383-0821 to pre-register.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

On nuclear power, and water

For months my admirers (both my mother and my sister are agreed on it) have been urging me to undertake to treat the nuclear power issue with the same wordy bombast with which I have carrried on about transportation. I have thus far declined, and for a good reason: the certainty that I am not qualified to do so. Unlike a great many of those on both sides of the nuclear power issue who are only too happy to give voice to their strong opinions, I know that I would only be showing my ignorance were I to try to tell you whether or not nuclear power generally, and Pilgrim I specifically, are safe, Therefore, until the day comes when I feel qualified to comment on this issue I must confine myself to tangential observations relating to the behavior of the proponents, the opponents, the regulators and the regulated.

For instance, one thing I believe is that on an emotional level—partly consciously, partly unconsciously— many nuclear opponents confuse atomic generating plants with atomic weapons. They are unable and unwilling to distinguish them between a multi-magaton hydrogen bomb and what President Eisenhower used to call "the peaceful uses of atomic energy."

This confusion and obfuscation tend to weaken the case they are trying to make against nuclear power because the hardy political center that ultimately governs in America sees through the irrationality and the hyperbole. Far better for the opponents' cause if they would tone down their rhetoric, quit practicing juvenile civil disobedience, listen to their opponents, and carry on the debate rationally.

On the other hand, I don't believe the proponents have paid much attention to the history of science. For, from the myth of Icarus (who flew toward the sun until the sun's heat melted the wax that attached his wings to his body) to the surprisingly similar story of the failure of the o-rings on the Space Shuttle, the history of man's technological advance has been fraught with accidents. Yet these atomic plants are situated among our people where serious accidents are bound to have grave consequences not only for the brave pioneers who, like Amelia Earhart and Christa McAuliffe, choose to take risk, but for thousands of ordinary citizens.

The best analogy to the Pilgrim and Seabroook plants, it seems to me, is neither Three Mile Island nor Chernobyl, it is the Space Shuttle. Like the Space Shuttle, atomic plants are a brilliant technology (even the opponents must concede that) that has been developed by a brotherhood of scientists, is managed by a brotherhood of executives, and is policed by a brotherhood of technical experts.

Now, a "brotherhood" is another word for a bureaucracy, and one need know nothing of nuclear issues to appreciate that when one bureaucracy policies a second which supervises a third, the possibilities for institutional failure exist. "Institutional failure" is what occurred in the case of the Space Shuttle, and we have every reason to suppose that it can happen in the case of atomic plants. Judging from the stories of bumbling management of Pilgrim I by Boston Edison and narcoleptic policing of that management by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, it has already happened—it just hasn't yet resulted in an accident.

What is the answer? Faithful fans of Wall Street Week already know the answer: nuclear power is moribund for want of investors; no more will be built. Seabrook ,then, is the equivalent of the 1964 Studebaker: the latest in design but the last of a breed. The market place has settled the nuclear power issue at least through the turn of the centry when declining oil reserves may cause another generation to reopen the question.

The only question left to us to decide is what to do about the present generation of reactors. The fact that we are abandoning new nuclear construction will probably diminish the future safety of extant reactors because those reactors till operate without the technological and safety improvements that a growing industry would naturally provide. Nevertheless, I would hope that Pilgrim and Seabrook would operate long enough to amortize themselves, for you and I will pay the price if they cannot. If they cannot—if they are deemed unsafe or if our people simply decide that they do not want nuclear power stations— we will just have to pay the price in a weakened economy. If our decision goes against keeping extant plants open, today's regional economy is as well equipped to kiss off a four billion dollar investment as it has ever been in history.

If, on the other hand, extant plants (including Seabrook, which though built has not yet operated) are to operate in the coming years, it seems to me that one reform is essential: Supervision of the plants should be taken away from corporate entities that have an economic interest in keeping the plants "on-line." It is simply begging for trouble to entrust control of a plant to a company like Boston Edison when, by definition, any curtailment in the production of electricity costs that company a great deal of money.

The model we should follow if we decide to continue to operate nuclear power stations is the military model, specifically the Naval model. Under the late Admiral Hyman Rickover the Navy operated a great many nuclear reactors, none of which to my knowledge ever failed in a major way. The reason is simple. Admiral Rickover had the authority and the courage to shut down any reactor at will—and no interest not to. His authority could not be appealed or lobbied against or countermanded in any way. Accordingly, if we are to continue to operate plants such as Pilgrim, we need "Rickovers" on-line at every site. At Pilgrim we need an authority that is in no way beholden to Boston Edison, an authority that can and will shut the thing down at any time.

* * * *

Some people wish nuclear power would just go away. I wish the issue would just go away. I wish it would go away not because it is complicated and frightening; not because I increasingly despise the spectacle of demonstrators going to Seabrook with the express purpose of getting arrested on television; and not because I am sick as well of the ambulance-chasing, demagogic way many politicans deal with the issue.

I wish nuclear power would go away as an issue because the chances of an accident at Pilgrim I, even under the apparently poor management of Boston Edison, are small. I am not qualified to say if they are ten thousand-to-one or ten million-to-one, but they are somewhere in that range.

Yet as I write these words, in every community where my words will be read or used to wrap fish, there are wells that are contaminated with leeching cesspits, with gasoline, with p.c.b.'s, and with ten thousand other toxins. As a practical matter, the chances that you and I are going to die of atomic radiation and are infinitessimal compared to the chances that we will die from the water we drink during the next twenty-five years. Yet as long as we are obsessed with nuclear power we will not give our full attention to the environmental enemy at hand.

In the seventeenth century we burnt witches but it was smallpox that wiped out villages. As we turn to the 21st century, the word is water.

Praise for kind Politicus article on Filipino people

To the Editor:

I would like to thank you on behalf of my husband and myself and the Filipino people for the kind words in Mr. Mittell's article of Sept. 24/25, 1986.

It is a very perceptive analysis of the current state of Philippine-American relations which is rarely found in the American press, I'm afraid.

Filipinos have gone through tough times and more lie ahead but we do believe and fight for Democratic values in our own way. These values are not only held by the educated and elite members of society but are prevalent throughout our country even among the poor and so-called ignorant.

I am very touched that Mr. Mittell noticed it and expressed it.

Thank you again.

A Stone's Throw — by Paul Steven Stone

The South Shore's Last Retreat

Somewhere on the South Shore

Three weeks and the war goes on. I write by moonlight in one of the last woods on the South Shore. K, the unit commander, objects to my presence, but the strain of constant retreat leads him to reject anything that doesn't directly aid the war effort. In the end, he relents, ominously holding on to my press credentials.

I understand his tension. This morning, contact was made with another unit and everyone's fears confirmed. The war goes badly in all zones. Cohasset, the first to fall, already has construction footings in place for condominiums up and down once proud Jericho Road. No one can accuse the Developers Alliance of wasting time.

A flare rises in the night. Most likely Alliance patrols out hunting the few planning board members still at large. Another reason for K's agitation. He holds no brief for planning boards. "Appeasers" he calls them, barely stopping short of blaming them for the war. One camp rumor holds that K only joined the war after a bowling alley was built next to his beachfront cottage in Duxbury. A pattern often observed among the guerrillas. Few join before the war hits home.

Tomorrow, this unit moves out at first light. Continuing the retreat. Like frightened creatures running before the bulldozers, they're driven by instinct rather than intellect. But islands of refuge, like these woods, are on a faster course of retreat. And soon these weary soldiers will have no choice but to stand and fight.

Ironically, by then the South Shore won't be worth fighting for.

Tide Chart author notes the clockwork and the sun

By Larry Stein
Special to the Mariner

Did you know that the sun is not as regular as clockwork? That is, ordinary clockwork, the kind which turns the hands of a clock at a constant rate. The sun as we observe it from here on earth actually speeds up and slows down on a regular basis. We will explore this phenomenon and relate it to other things with which we are familiar.

Each week in the Mariner there is a tide chart. In addition to the information about the local tides, there are three columns relating to the sun. These give, respectively, the time of sunrise, sunset, and a less familiar one headed "Sun on the 75th Meridan". This is the column which shows the irregularity of the sun's motion as we shall see.

The earth is encircled by imaginary lines known as latitude and longitude. Latitude lines are parallel to the equator, and become smaller and smaller in diameter as they recede from the equator and approach the Poles. We will not be concerned with latitude. Longitude lines encircle the earth from North Pole to South Pole. They are called meridians.

A celestial meridian is an imaginary line in the sky running directly over the imaginary line on the earth's surface. Meridians, or longitude lines, are numbered in degrees and minutes (a minute is 1/60 of a degree) east and west from the prime meridian which passes through Greenwich, England, a suburb of London. The prime meridian is numbered zero.

This forms the basis for the standard time system which we all use. Each fifteen degrees there is a meridian which passes through the center of a time zone. The meridian on which Eastern Standard Time is centered is the 75th. You will note that if each 15 degree interval is a standard meridian, 75 degrees is five hours away from the prime meridian, (75 15=5). Ignoring for a moment the effect of Daylight Saving Time, our noon is defined as the average time the sun is on the 75th meridian. But the Almanac, and the Mariner tide chart tell us that sometimes the sun is late, and sometimes it is early.

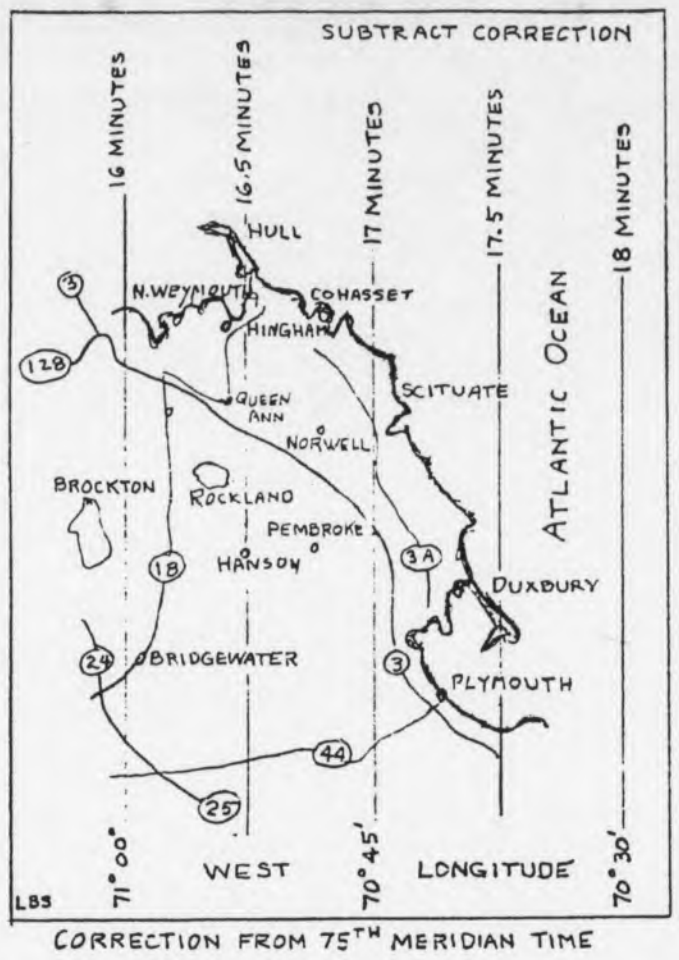
Actually there are only four days each year when the sun is right on time. These days are not exactly the same each year, but they are approximately April 15 (in honor of the IRS?.), June 13, September 1, and December 25. At other times the sun may be off by as much as 16 minutes.

This is all well and good, but here on the South Shore we do not live in Cooperstown, N.Y. or Camden, N.J. which are on the 75th meridian. We are east of the line, and therefore the sun arrives here a little earlier than it does there.

The small map of the Mariner circulation area indicates the number of minutes earlier that the sun arrives here. For example, if you live near Queen Anne's corner or in Hanson, the sun will cross your meridian 16.5 minutes (16 minutes and 30 seconds) earlier than the 75th.

How can we use this information? Suppose we wish to determine just where north is. When the sun is on our celestial meridian, it is due south of us. Therefore the shadow of a vertical object like a Pole will point exactly north. For any day it is only necessary to look up the meridian information in the Mariner, subtract the correction shown for your location, and observe the time of the sun on your meridian. Remember, the Mariner table is expressed in Daylight Saving Time when in applies. This means that in the summer the meridian crossing will occur a few minutes before 1 p.m. Let us take an example: Assume that we live in Hanson, and want to know the time at which the sun is south on October 4. The Mariner table says the sun is on the 75th meridian at 12:48:46. The correction for Hanson is 16 minutes and 30 seconds. Subtract the correction, which leaves 12:32:36 (hours, minutes, seconds). So, just after lunch that Saturday, the sun will be on the meridian.

Before the invention of modern sophisticated systems such as loran, gyro compasses and radar, this was an excellent method for determining true directions. It is superior to the use of a magnetic compass which is affected by nearby magnetic material, and by the wandering of the earth's magnetic Poles. Knowledge of the sun's deviation from standard time was also required for celestial navigation at sea.



It is well to consider the effect on a sundial of the sun's irregularity. If the dial is installed so as to be correct on those four great days when the sun is on time, it will be about 14 minutes slow on Feb.11 and 16 minutes fast Nov.3. What a way to run a Solar System.

Saltwater fishing, a fall bonus for shore enthusiasts

By Bill Smith
Special to the Mariner

ANGLER'S CORNER

Saltwater fishing in the early fall is exceptionally good for both shore bound fishermen and boat anglers. Two of the most exciting game fish, striped bass and bluefish, are within easy access of fishermen. These two fish feed heavily close to shore as they begin to store fat for their long southern migration.

Fish begin to school and moving south in mid-September As they do, they become very aggressive, chasing bait in the shallow waters along the beaches. Bait dunkers and plug casters do equally well and some of the largest fish are caught in local waters during this time.

Weather conditions often force boat fishermen to join their brothers who seek bluefish and bass from the beach. There are a number of areas within a short drive that produce good fishing for surf fishermen.

Locally, the Plymouth Harbor and Duxbury Bay provide some of the most consistent action in the early fall. Although the outer beaches of these towns require four wheel drive access and beach stickers, there are public access areas. The Powder Point Bridge in Duxbury, although closed to vehicles, is open to fishing. Bluefish often push bait, predominately pogies, into this area. Fishermen will do well using cut baits fished on bottom rigs as well as surface plugs. Striped bass can be caught by drifting sea worms or live lining bait fish from the bridge especially on the outgoing tides. The breakwall in Plymouth Harbor is a good bet for local anglers who use similar techniques.

Tackle requirements are simple. Most anglers use eight to ten foot surf rods and reels. Good quality line in the fourteen pound to twenty pound range will handle even trophy fish. Common sense must be used in playing and landing game fish from a bridge or jetty. Fish can not be lifted high up out of the water without losing your catch or worse, damaging tackle. Use either a bridge gaff or walk your fish into shallow waters and land them from the shore. Most other anglers will cooperate with you and will expect the same courtesy.

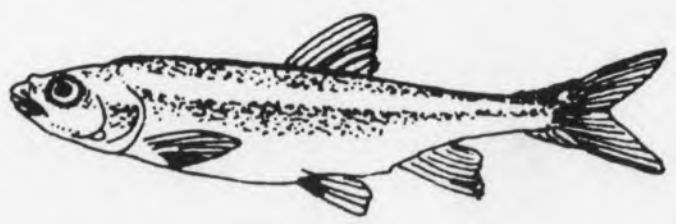
In Bourne, the Cape Cod Canal is often a hotspot for migrating fish. Access is easy but the fishing is difficult, especially for the novice. Fish slack tides with cut baits, jigs, and eel rigs. Flowing tides can be best worked with darting plugs, large swimming plugs, and surf poppers. By regulation, boat fishing is prohibited in the canal east of the State Pier in Buzzards Bay because of transport traffic. Scusset Beach at the east end of the canal is a flat sandy beach which should not be overlooked.

Sandy Neck Beach in Barnstable is also a good fall spot although most bass caught from the beach will be undersized and must be returned to the water. Scorton Creek enters the Cape Cod Bay in this area. Bluefish and bass frequent this estuary attacking bait as it flows from the creek. Salters, sea-run trout, in excess of two pounds are also caught here. Take East End Beach Road in East Sandwich to get to the mouth of Scorton Creek.

Further down the Cape, Truro beaches on Cape Cod Bay provide excellent fishing and easy beach acccess off of Route 6A. Fisher Beach and Corn Hill Beach have public parking lots. Some very large fish are often caught by fisherman using sand eels fished on bottom rigs. The Pamet River separates these two beaches and is the attraction for foraging game fish.

Race Point in Provincetown is probably the most famous surf fishing spot on the East Coast. Fishermen from far away journey to "P-Town" to fish these waters during fall. Tremendous amounts of bait combine with very deep water to provide an excellent habitat for game fish. Beaches in this area are managed by the United States National Park Service and are open to all anglers although four wheel drive access has been severely limited in recent years.

Ocean beaches such as Newcomb's Hollow in Wellfleet, Nauset Beach in Orleans, and Nauset Light Beach in Eastham also are consistent producers. These sandy beaches are easy to fish and either managed by the Park Service or the town which maintains public access. Bottom fishing with sand eels, worms, and cut baits account for many catches of bass and bluefish. These baits must be used with float rigs because of the presence of skates and dog fish (sand sharks). Live eels and swimming plugs are also effective. Many trophy fish are caught on these ocean beaches every fall.



Popponesset Beach in Mashpee is often overlooked by the fall fishermen but can be quite productive. This is a good spot for daytime fishing particularly for those seeking bluefish. Weakfish, although not common, are also caught from this beach. Plug casting is best in the area.

These areas have proven to be productive year after year. Other areas can be reached by boat or four wheel drive vehicles. The Mass. Beach Buggy Association (MBBA) has done an excellent job keeping beaches open to all anglers and their work in conservation has helped save many a beach from destruction. All local anglers are urged to support this group which maintains a constant vigil for all anglers.

(Bill Smith, owner of Adams Tackle, when not in the store, will often be found fishing one of these fishing spots in his four wheel drive camper. Up-to-date fishing information can be found on the fishing hotline. Call 826-8342 from 9 P.M. to 9 A.M.)

FROM THE KITCHEN

Indian Summer introduces fall-time favorites

As the tide of fall sweeps across our landscape, change is all around us. Beribboned straw hats, now limp after a summer of decorating our front door, bow to the passage of time and give way to Indian corn, four ears wired together and flaunting an orange ribbon. No doorstep is in proper autumn decor without a big, fat pumpkin selected from a mountainous pile at a roadside stand.

Even our appetite recognizes harvest time, with apples, squash, cider and gourds on the shopping list for the upcoming holiday weekend. And, of course, part of the October scene is the harvesting of cranberries from the bogs so familiar in this area. Ever since 1975 when Ellen Garretson sent along some recipes she has been preparing since she came to live on a cranberry bog, I've been making her

CRANBERRY CUPCAKES

1/2 c. butter
2 c. flour
1 1/4 c. sugar
2 eggs
1/2 c. milk
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1 1/2 c. chopped cranberries

Cream butter and sugar together. Add eggs one at a time and blend. Sift dry ingredients, add alternately with milk. Add berries. Grease baking cups. Sprinkle top with sugar. Bake 375 for 25-30 min. Makes two dozen.

Darlene Beauvais dries weeds and fall blossoms to make her wreaths and floral arrangements... Suzanne Mitchell roasts chestnuts in hers. However, most of the millions who are buying microwave ovens these days only use them to save time by defrosting meats, heating frozen, commerically prepared dishes, reheating leftovers and baking potatoes. Pierre Franey, the noted chef, considers the above time-saving uses just the beginning and after a thorough study, concludes: "For me, the microwave oven proved best as a supplementary appliance to a conventional oven. If forced to choose between the two.....I'd go for the latter." Here is how he used a microwave.

CARROT & TOMATO SOUP WITH DILL

1 1/2 pd. carrots, cut into thin rounds
2 medium-size onions, sliced
2 potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2" cubes
1 1/2 pd. ripe tomatoes, cubed
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste
6 c. chicken stock
1 c. heavy cream
2 T lemon juice
1/4 c. fresh dill.

1. Place all ingredients except cream, juice and dill in micro-safe, 4-to-5 cup casserole. Cover and cook at high heat for 30 min.
2. Remove bay leaf and with slotted spoon place solid contents of casserole dish in bowl of a food processor or blender. Reserve the liquid. Add 1 c. heavy cream. Puree until smooth. Return to a serving bowl, stir in juice. Garnish with dill. Serves 6 - 8.

To Stan Hardy fell the fun task of judging the pie contest at the annual Dwyer Farm Day. To Fahy Bygate of Duxbury went the honors for her Williamsburg pecan pie. Right in step with the season is this pie, easy enough to make for company this weekend.

EASY PUMPKIN PIE

1 pie crust, baked with following filling:
2 eggs
1 c. canned pumpkin
3/4 packed brown sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. each cloves, ginger & nutmeg
1 can (13 oz.) evaporated milk

Heat over to 425. Beat eggs slightly in large bowl. Stir in next five ingredients until smooth. Gradually stir in evaporated milk. Pour into crust. Cover edge with 2 to 3 " strips of aluminum foil to prevent excessive browning. Bake 15 min. Reduce oven to 350. Bake until knife inserted near center comes out clean, 45 to 55 min. longer. Cool pie. Serve with whipped cream.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

Guess who's just around the corner ?

"Bah, humbug!" I greeted the Dragon as I came through the door.

He looked mildly surprised. "Whatever happened to 'hello?' "

"I had to call Boston City Hall today, and they put me on hold."

The Dragon looked confused. "Poor baby?" he offered tentatively.

I shook my head. "I had to listen to taped music while I was waiting."

He shrugged. "It happens."

"You don't understand," I snarled. "The tape was playing 'It Came Upon a Midnight Clear.' In September. I'm just not ready for this."

"I can remember when we were in grammar school," the Dragon mused. "Nobody even mentioned Christmas until Dec. 1. And then it was sort of tentative. We spent the four weeks of Advent preparing for Christmas. We did lots of extra praying, and we shopped and we hid the things we bought, and we wrote lists for Santa and we hinted wildly to everybody else about Flexible Flyer sleds and Daisy rifles."

I nodded. "And Shirley Temple and Sonia Heinie dolls and baby dolls with eyes that opened and closed. And ice skates and bicycles. And books.

"But except for the school's annual Christmas pageant, we didn't start hearing Christmas carols until Dec. 24. And then they started, and they continued right through to Little Christmas Jan. 6. Everything was in its proper place."

The Dragon sighed. "Now the radio stations stop playing Christmas music at noon Dec. 25. Then they give us a couple of mandatory 'Auld Lang Sine's' and maybe a 'What Are You Doing New Year's?' or two, and it's onto 'My Funny Valentine.'"

"I just can't take it," I told him. "I can remember how angry my parents were when the stores started to advertise Christmas stuff the day after Thanksgiving. They said Christmas was getting much too commercial and they wouldn't even send cards anymore. But they always did.

"Then we started seeing Christmas advertising right after Hallowe'en. They'd yank the spooks and the black cats out of the display windows and shove the right jolly old elves in.

"After a few years of that, magazines began running pictures of Christopher Columbus discovering the New World in a miniature sleigh drawn by eight tiny reindeer.

"And now Mayor Flynn's office is playing Christmas carols on Sept. 30. We're still waiting for the leave to turn, for heaven's sake."

The Dragon patted my hand. "Don't worry about it. We're not going to have Christmas this year. We're much too broke, and everything costs far too much. We'll just have to explain to the kids — they're old enough to understand now — that Santa won't be paying a visit. Maybe we could get everyone something he really needs. Like a pair of socks. Or nylons.

"We could be like the Louisa May Alcott family, or the 'Little House on the Prairie' family and have a real, old-fashioned Christmas. The kids can make ornaments out of paper. You can spend three and a half months sewing and knitting things for everybody. I'll bring in a tree from the forest. I'd bag a wild turkey, but I never did get that Daisy rifle."

I pulled my hand away and glared at him. "Do you realize you do the same thing every year? First you say there's to be absolutely no Christmas spending. Then you start disappearing for hours at a time and when you come home you hide mysterious looking packages under and behind everything in the house. Then you look in chandeliers and bureau drawers to see if anyone's hidden anything for you. We decorate with ornaments and greens and lights just like everybody else, and on Christmas Eve you drag out more presents than the Shah of Iran used to get on his birthday."

He looked puzzled. "Well, if I do the same thing every year, why are you so upset because I'm doing it now."

"Because," I explained through clenched teeth. You used to do it in November. Now you're starting the first week in October. You've become one of them."

The Dragon looked guilty. "Sorry, honey," he apologized. "Why don't you sit down and have a nice cup of tea. I think I'll go a-wassailing."

Coach says 'We've had some good ballgames'

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The bigger they are, the harder they fall.

The Cohasset Skippers football squad has fought like David against Goliath five straight Saturdays.

Their latest victim was Weston, a non-league behemoth twice their size.

Phil Pisano, Cohasset's head coach called the Weston contest a crucial match-up. "Our stiffest competition as of yet" was shut out, 21-0.

"I think we've had some good ballgames," Pisano said.

He attached significance to the struggle against one local opponent. Norwell.

"The game against Norwell was a nail-biter, an excellent game in terms of spectator excitement. We had to come from behind by two touchdowns in the fourth period to win it. That was not a blowout."

Pisano added, he believes that game helped the Skippers realize how good they could be when obstacles present themselves.

"They have the ability and the determination to come back and give it a supreme effort and pull it out," the coach said.

He added, coming back to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat against Norwell gave his team a great deal of confidence.

"I think it was the turning point in the season," he said. "That really got the kids believing in themselves for the 1986 season."

As a coach, Pisano brings philosophy and thematics to the game of football.

In preparing for this week's dual with Duxbury, he gathered his team around him and said, "Okay guys, the theme for this week is D-Day. D-Day was the day the allies threw everything they had into the invasion of Europe. This week, I want us to throw everything we have at Duxbury."

From the sidelines, Clark Chatterton, the athletic director at Cohasset High School has watched this team build its 5-0 record.

"Someone asked me when was the last time the team was 5-0," he commented, "and I said I didn't want to be prejudiced, but it was when we played

In 30 years, Eric Pearson has seen a lot of changes along Cohasset's Route 3A. Not all good and not all bad, he says. And it's about to undergo another.

After 37 years in the automotive business, Pearson is leaving. The longtime Cohasset resident is retiring from Highway Motors, the business he created in 1956.

This week, the real estate transaction will be completed and another auto dealership will take its turn at the familiar site next door to Jack Conway's office. This new dealership, according to Pearson, will feature "expensive foreign autos, with quality service technicians - just what this area needs."

He may be retiring from Highway Motors, but Pearson has no intention of quitting the wheelin' and dealin'. He still owns about 55,000 square feet of property adjacent to the Highway Motors building. It's his intention to develop a professional office building or retail space on the property.

"I should have something developed by next spring," he says, sitting within the nearly empty office space of the Highway Motors headquarters. A few chairs, file cabinets, and ashtrays are left of what was once a bustling showroom.

Pearson is a well-known personality in his hometown. He's been a resident of Cohasset for 35 years. He's never shied away from local politics, making his strong opinions known throughout the commun-

New sergeant likes being a local cop; Noonan always strived to be an officer

He was 29 years-old, being interviewed for a position on the Cohasset Police Department. Former Chief Randolph Feola asked young Brian Noonan, "If you got on the department, what job would you want?"

Noonan quickly answered, 'Yours."

That was in 1974. Noonan got the job, despite the fact the former chief was only slightly amused with his reply. "He laughed," Noonan recalled this week. "A little."

This is his 13th year in the department. Just last month, Noonan was appointed sergeant. He worked hard for that appointment, but is not secretive that someday he would indeed like to be chief.

"I make no bones about that," Noonan said. "I look forward to that goal, and I'll be working for it."

Noonan is a 40 year-old native of Cohasset. Since he can remember, he has wanted to be a police officer.

His career was diverted for a while when he was employed as a materials control engineer at Stone and Webster. There, he was in charge of all materials shipped to a nuclear power station in Mineral, Va.

"I didn't have my degree, I had taken some computer courses at Northeastern. But I had decided," he said, "that being an engineer wasn't really what I wanted.

"I had always been interested in police work since I can remember. And I finally got to take the test."

He was 25 years old, and had to endure a Civil Service exam, along with a physical and strength test. "It was a real lengthy process in those days," he explained. Finally, at the age of 29, Noonan was appointed to his hometown department.

"I must have really wanted to be a police officer," he laughed. "I took a $5,000 pay cut to come here."

During his youth, Noonan knew just about all the police officers in town. His favorite was Lt. Thomas Kane. "I don't know," Noonan remembered, "he always seemed to be around, ready to talk to the kids in town. I guess he sparked an interest in me that was already there. He influenced me, although I was already interested. He encouraged me to pursue law enforcement as a career."

The lieutenant, Noonan said, was a "real compassionate officer. He was easy to get along with and easy to work for. Everything seemed to flow along when he was working. But he was pretty strict, too."

Since he was very young, Noonan wanted to be a

Sunday marks start of VFW Post

They used to go to Scituate, Hull and Hingham, but this weekend, everything will be official. Cohasset will have its own VFW Post.

Cohasset's Veterans of Foreign Wars will proudly call Post 9146 their own, when the state commander presents the official charter Sunday afternoon.

The ceremony will take place at the George H. Mealy American Legion Hall on Summer Street, where the VFW holds its meetings.

Post Commander Ralph Perroncello reflected on the establishment of Cohasset's Post 9146.

"It started last November," he said. "A representative of the VFW came around and wanted to know if we could get enough people interested to join the VFW, and we all signed up."

There were 15 charter members, he added. "I guess one word led to another." Today there are 6[illegible] members of Post 9146.

"We forgot about it until they contacted us in February," Perroncello said. "The next thing we knew, we had a small meeting over at the VFW post in Scituate. There were eight of us and we all seemed interested.

"We had another meeting a week later," he added, "and we were optimistic we'd be able to have a post if we could get enough people interested."

Eleven members were instituted the evening of March 25 at the Rotary Hall. Now, on the third Tuesday of every month, the Cohasset VFW meets George H. Mealy post, courtesy of the American Legion.

The group's first order of business was the "drive for a flag fund," Perroncello said. "We were very fortunate in having a lot of the members, the people in town and the businesses donate for our flag fund.

"I now have the money to buy our flags," he added, "which we have already ordered."

Perroncello said he hopes to get 100 members by the end of the year for Cohasset's new post. "I don't

Clothing damages in movie

Samuel Mercer, location manager for "The Witches of Eastwick," sent a letter last week explaining that Warner Brothers will pay the cost of cleaning all clothing worn by the extras during the filming of a scene in the First Parish Church.

During that particular scene, Jack Nicholson, who portrays the main character, was possessed by evil spirits and vomits a bloody-concoction. Several of the extras who were sitting near Nicholson during the filming, may have had their clothing soiled.

Mercer explained that Warner Brothers' wardrobe personnel had arranged to clean the clothes worn by the extras in that scene. But if anyone, including many Cohasset residents who participated, had their own clothes cleaned, they may forward the receipt to Warner Brothers for reimbursement.

Mercer noted that no one was told their clothing would be replaced by the film company. "However, I do feel that those people sitting close to Jack have a legitimate claim should they feel that their clothes were damaged beyond reason," he wrote. A detailed letter with all receipts should be sent to Warner Brothers along with such a claim, Mercer added.

Mercer also stated that Warner Brothers is scheduled to do additional aerial filming in the area.

Hazardous waste resolution

A household hazardous waste collection day, to be held in collaboration with the town of Hingham, will be held Saturday, November 22. The exact time and place of the collection day has yet to be decided.

Last week, Cohasset selectmen adopted a resolution endorsing the Hazardous Waste Clean"p Initiative which appear on the Nov. 4 election ballot.

In the resolution, selectmen state, "43 communities have already lost drinking water wells to toxic chemical contamination; at the current rate of activity, it will take at least five to ten decades before the state's hazardous waste sites are cleaned up; the Hazardous Waste Cleanup Initiative would give polluters and the state strict, but reasonable deadlines and standards for finding and cleaning up these dumpsites; the Hazardous Waste Cleanup Initiative has the unanimous endorsement of the Massachusetts House of Representatives which voted 145 to 0 in favor of the proposal."

Two local restaurants were recently awarded "A" ratings by the local health board. Inspections of the establishments earned the restaurants the highest health board standard. Dr. Charles Bliss (L), health board chairman, presents the award along with Health Agent Joseph Godzik (far right), to Judy Kulturides, of the Log 'n Line, Robert Infusino of With Richard, and Judy's son, Chris Kulturides.

Lily Pond Estates hearing

The water commissioners have requested that the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering conduct a public hearing on the acquisition by the town of 37 acres of land surrounding Lily Pond.

The commissioners requested the hearing as the first step in purchasing the land for the preservation and protection of the drinking water resource.

"The land has been surveyed for house lots." the commissioners stated in a letter to the DEQE, "and the proximity to Lily Pond is our prime concern. We are making efforts to prepare the budget for this taking in for the April, 1987 town meeting."

Cedarledge Village Committee

Appointed by Melvin Waldfogel, president of the association, the committee is responsible for overseeing landscaping as the project nears completion. It will also make recommendations to the association on long-range improvements and capital expenditures.

The members of the committee are Andi and Mickey McCarthy, co-chairs, Craig Muir and Gertrude Waldfogel.

Liquor license violation

Based on a claim made by two state investigators, the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission has suspended the license held by the George H. Mealy American Legion Post for three days. The suspension will take place Nov. 3 through Nov. 6.

According to the state commission, two ABCC investigators entered the Post on July 9. The two men were served beer by the bartender, despite the fact the Post holds a license which restricts the sale of liquor to members of the club.

In the Sept. 23 hearing, testimony was presented which stated the Post had improved the procedures "so that it would be able henceforth to restrict the service of alcoholic beverages to those authorized by the law."

Despite the testimony, the ABCC found the Post violated state law and the all alcoholic club license was suspended for three days. The Post has 30 days from the Oct. 6 decision to appeal the finding.

Dr. Woods honored at BU

Honored last week for 35 years of association with the Department of Oral Surgery at Boston's University Hospital was Dr. Edward F. Woods of Cohasset.

University Hospital is a teaching hospital of Boston University's Medical and Dental School.

Dr. Woods is a graduate of Bowdoin College and the Tufts University School of Dental Medicine. He is a Fellow of the Academy of General Dentistry, a professional organization that stresses the vital role of continuing education in guaranteeing the quality of dental care provided to the public, and requires a significant commitment to on-going graduate study of its members.

He has participated as an Educational Associate in the Tufts University Dental Extern Program, whereby senior dental students spend a continuous period of time in dental offices learning daily patient care and the management of a private office.

Dr. Woods, whose hobbies include bagpiping, history of the Revolutionary War Period, and growing orchids, maintains an office for the practice of General Dentistry at 69 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

LWV Service auction

Saturday, October 25, the Cohasset League of Women Voters, will sponsor a service auction. The event takes place at the American Legion Hall on Summer Street. Cocktail hour will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. with the actual auction beginning at 8:30 p.m. Admission tickets are $5 per person; there is a cash bar and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

The League is hoping to raise funds to continue their public service endeavors such as Town Affairs Night, Public Forums on current topics (i.e., railroad restoration, housing, etc.), and along the lines of your recently received Know Your Schools booklet, the League is planning a revision of the long overdue Know Your Town booklet.

Some of the items to be auctioned are: catering services, a weekend in a New Hampshire condo, boat rides, a night at Kimball's, a weekend at the Sheraton, gift certificates, reciprical wills, a puppet show, a chainsaw and many, many more. There are at present 45 items to be auctioned ranging in value from $15 to $750.

For additional information or to buy tickets, please contact Mary Larson at 383-0775.

Free lead poisoning screening

The board of health and the Social Service League will sponsor a free lead poison screening clinic for children between the ages of 18 months and five years-old, Wednesday, October 22 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St.

This screening consists of a painless finger prick and a small amount of blood withdrawn from the finger for analysis.

Lead poisoning is caused by eating, chewing or sucking on lead painted objects such as window sills, railings, toys, jewelry or printed material. Other sources include — contaminated soil or dust and fumes created by home renovation and sand blasting. Auto fumes are also hazardous. The risk of lead poisoning is increased by hand to mouth activity in young children.

Since most children have no symptoms, a blood screening test is the only detection method for lead poisoning.

For further information, call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Cohasset Village Fair prepares for 46th year

Not even Santa's elves start back to work earlier than the men and women who help each year with Cohasset's Village Fair.

The Fair is held each year the first Saturday in December. But preparations for the event begin in January.

This year's general chairman, Annette Sawchuk, explained, "we barely get through Christmas and it's time to start planning for next year's Fair."

The planning begins in the winter months, but really gets into high gear as the summer ends and the autumn appears.

This is the 46th year of the widely-acclaimed Cohasset Village Fair. It is the traditional yuletime tradition in which the five churches of Cohasset work together to create a huge Christmas village of gifts, handmade articles, toys and food.

Wise shoppers from the South Shore, the North Shore and Cape Cod travel each year to uncover special gifts at bargain prices. The Common is decorated in festive colors, with Santa holding court with admiring children. Music plays softly from the Town Hall, where shoppers stream through the crowds to find the perfect Christmas selection.

Tables are set up in church halls throughout the Common. Handmade wares are for sale within the Unitarian church, St. Stephen's, and the Congregational church.

"It's a unique event," according to Carol Sandblom, chairman of the Boutique table. "To have five churches in one town cooperating like this, every year, almost throughout the year, makes this a very different fair."

Indeed, according to chairman Sawchuk, about 300 residents participate in some fashion. Whether it's donating articles for the Bargain Bazaar table, knitting mittens for the Boutique, or packaging candy for the children's grab bags, there's usually something for everyone to do.

"There's one woman who calls the day of the fair and says she has knitted five pairs of mittens. No one asks her to do it, and she never says anything in advance. It's just something you expect, because she does it all by herself every year," Sawchuk said.

In the 1960's the Fair was a joint effort by three churches, St. Stephen's, First Parish, and Second Congregational. St. Anthony's parish joined the effort in the late 1970's, and the Greek Orthodox Church was added six years ago.

It's a lot of work, the participants agreed. "But if you don't do it, who will?" Sandblom, Sawchuk and Jean Manganaro asked.

"I really don't know who would have accepted if I hadn't taken the chairmanship," Sawchuk said. "And since I was on the central committee last year, I had an understanding of how it worked."

The central committee, she explained, consists of one or, ideally two members from each church. They are the directors who locate others to serve as table chairman and workers.

As a member of the central committee, Sawchuk gained valuable insight into the considerable behind-the-scenes work of the Fair. "The central committee members are the ones who ask everyone else to help out," she laughed. "You need to get every involved and everyone working."

A total of about 50 people help Manganaro each year with her wreath table. An average of 300 wreaths are made and sold at the Fair. "We need that many people to do the little things, like cutting wiring," she explained. "We must have to cut miles and miles of wire. So we need as many people as we can to help out."

The balsam wreaths are a special and unique feature of the Village Fair. No two wreaths are the same, Manganaro stated. "We decorate them with nuts, and pine cones and pods. But they are all individually-created and all different."

And this year, as in the past, customers will be able to place a special order for large 36-inch wreaths. For $25, Manganaro and her crews will create a special extra-large wreath.

There will be few changes in this year's festivities. But there will be one alteration.

Baby strollers will not be allowed inside town hall for most of the day. This restriction was put into effect, according to Sawchuk, because of the numerous complaints issued every year by people unable to navigate through the auditorium.

"I've had a lot of people complain," she said. "Especially elderly people who get banged around by the strollers in a crowd. Not to mention the babies that probably get accidentally whacked with a pocketbook or bag. We decided it would be best to prohibit strollers in town hall from about 10 in the morning to 1 in the afternoon. Those are the busiest hours."

Although they are the peak times for the annual Fair, organizers said that may be the worse time to attend. No one should come to the Fair as the doors open, thinking the wares will be sold out by noontime.

"We make plenty so we always replace what we've sold with the same item. We don't usually sell out on any table because we make so much. And what we have to sell in the afternoon is the same quality as the items we sold first thing in the morning," Sandblom said.

Manganaro's workers begin the Fair rush the week before the event. The fifty workers gather each day at the Congregational Church to decorate the wreaths. Some stay for an hour, others remain until late afternoon.

"We order about 26 dozen balsam wreaths each year," the table chairman stated. "And we decorate each one. They're a big seller at the Fair, and we usually sell out by the end of the day."

Sandblom's crew include crafters and stitchers. She laughed as she admitted they 'steal' many of their most beautiful ideas from other crafts fairs and magazines. "The people who work on the Boutique really are talented craftspeople," she said. "And the items we sell are beautiful, quality things."

The Boutique, according to chairman Sawchuk, is one of the more popular activities at the Fair. Handmade decorations, wooden toys and clothing, are among the items found in this area of the Fair.

The Fair, which will be held Saturday, Dec. 6, is also popular among the children. The 'secret room' is especially fun for children under 12 years, who are able to purchase Christmas gifts for Mom and Dad for under $3. No one over the age of 12 is allowed in, Sawchuk said, and all purchases are gift wrapped.

The Fair includes lots of great food and gift ideas.

"It's a tradition here. But people come from miles away because it's also such a good fair. We only sell the best, but we undersell all our items. The quality is tops, but the prices are lower than what you'd find in a store," she added.

Included in this year's festivities, they noted, is the continuation of a previous Fair tradition. The night of the Fair, there will be a supper at Rogers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. Two hundred tickets are available for the catered dinner which will be held at 6 p.m.

"The public is invited," the organizers emphasized. "It's really a great way to end the day's festivities."

Tickets may be purchased from church members of the Village Fair central committee.

Sgt. Noonan enjoys his job . . .

police officer. "It's just a fact," he said. "I like working with people. And in this job you have a lot of opportunity to help people every-day. There are different predicaments everyday - good and bad. But an officer helps people much more than he's out arresting people."

Working in his hometown, according to Noonan, has its advantages and disadvantages. But it was almost coincidental he was selected to work in Cohasset. At the time Noonan took the Civil Service exam, a candidate could select only three potential departments. His name was listed only under the Cohasset department, and local preference was granted.

"Actually, I'm glad I work in my hometown," he noted. "It's good for an officer to know the people in town. It creates a better atmosphere in the community if people know their police officers. Some people put police officers in a different perspective. But it's important to know they're the guy next door. Officers have a lot of authority in their grasp, but the average officer uses it properly."

Sgt. Noonan has been the department's court prosecutor since 1978. As the daytime sergeant, he still retains that position.

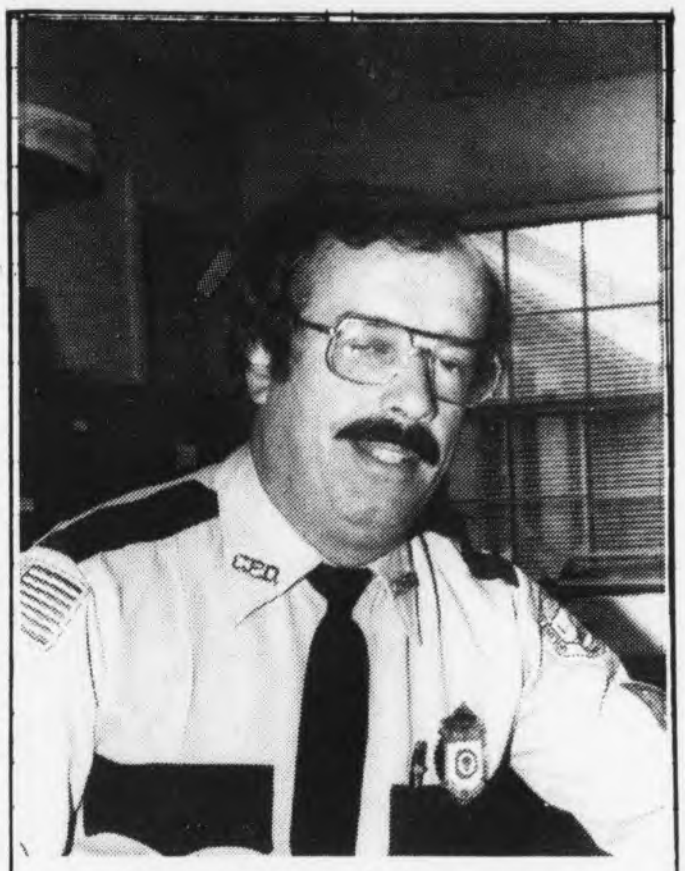
"I got the job when the current chief, Joseph Kealey, wanted to leave the position. I was asked and I took it. I've always been interested in law. I love the job. It's another way I get to work with people."

As prosecutor, Sgt. Noonan travels to Quincy District Court for arraignments on arrests. He will "conference" a case along with the defendant and his attorney. If the conference concludes with a disposition, the case is not brought to trial. If there is no disposition, the trial will be handled by the district attorney's office.

"I think I do a good job for the town," Noonan stated, "I'm level-headed enough to represent the town. There's been no complaints yet."

Sgt. Noonan also serves as the department's juvenile officer. By his own admission, Noonan is a believer in giving a kid a second chance.

"I frequently use the Juvenile Diversion Program which is sponsored by the district attorney. Rather than making a juvenile arrest and bringing it right to court, I'll let the youth go through this program. They will attend six to 14 weeks of classroom instruction and lectures. It's all done by highly-qualified people. If the kid completes the course successfully, no complaint will be issued. So there's no record. If the kid fails, he'll have to go through the court system."



Sgt. Brian Noonan

Most days, if Sgt. Noonan is not in court, he will be found behind the desk in the Elm Street station.

"I don't see as many kids as I'd like, being behind this desk," he explained. "We see them mostly on the 4 to midnight shift.

"I'd have to say, Cohasset doesn't have a big juvenile problem. Sure, they hang out in the square and in the summer we've had vandalism problems. But that's not unusual for any town."

Noonan has been involved in many drug and alcohol seminars at the schools and in the community. "We usually have a pretty lively discussion," he admitted.

"Kids," according to the police sergeant," seem to grow up faster now than when I was a kid. There's more put in front of them. Drugs are everywhere. On any given day, any kid in Cohasset would not have

Activist retires from his Rte. 3A business

ity and the state.

He never contemplated retirement until last spring. "I was approached by a man who's had 25 years in the automotive business," he recalls. "He said he'd like to locate in Cohasset and asked if I was interested in retiring. After thinking about it for three months, I decided 37 years in the auto business was enough. The average automotive dealer stays for 26 years, so I had overstayed by 11 years. I made myself a good deal. The offer was obviously substantial."

Highway Motors was an International Harvester dealership. For 20 of those years, Pearson sold Plymouth-Chrysler and in 1976 he limited it to Plymouth vehicles.

The Route 3A business "specialized in selling corporate executive and current model leased vehicles," Pearson explains. They were one or two-year old cars previously leased by corporations to its executives. "By selling these cars which were once used as fringe benefits for executives, I could offer my customers a $3-$4,000 savings," he notes.

Aside from his business concerns, Pearson has been an active member of the community. He is a past president of the Rotary Club and the American Field Service (AFS) program. He was an original member of the town's first personnel committee and is a past president of the Republican Town Committee.

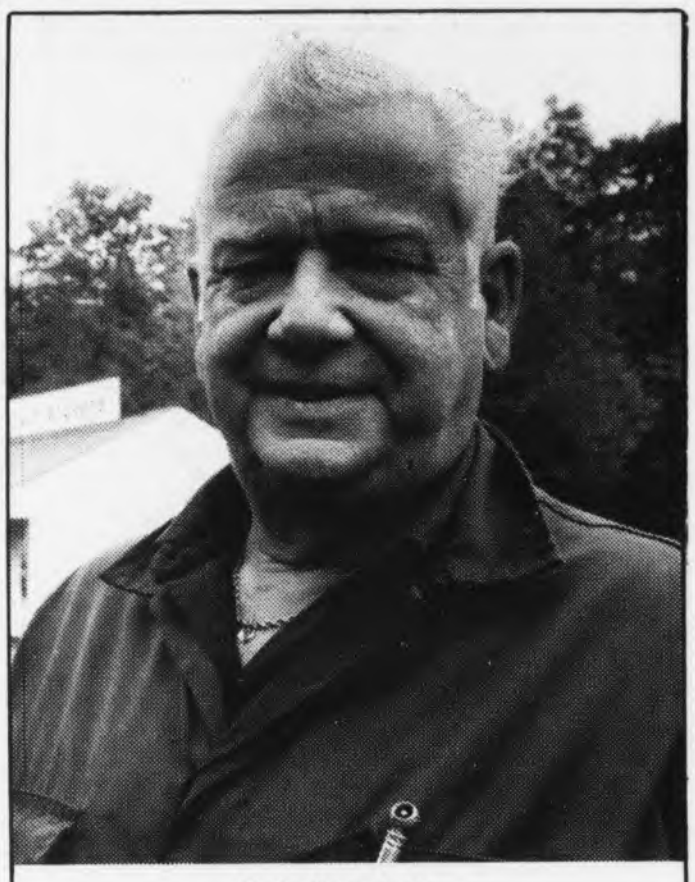
"I'm still informed," he insists, although not active in local issues and debates. He is a member of the World Affairs Council and proudly claims affiliation with the Republican Party.

Pearson calls himself an "objective conservative." Although fiscally prudent, he likes to bend far enough to view all sides of an issue.

In the 1970's Pearson devoted about six months to help enact Chapter 93B, state legislation designed to protect consumers and auto dealers against fraudulent manufacturers.

"Along with the Massachusetts State Auto Dealers, Atty. Harold Brown of Boston, and Rep. George 'Chet' Young of Scituate, we enacted a law that allows consumers to sue an unethical auto dealer, using the attorney general's office and not requiring the engagment of an attorney at the consumer's expense," he explains.

Another provision of the law, according to Pearson, allows a dealer to file suit againt a manufacturer for any unfair practice. Because, Pearson contends, "The majority of serious problems with an auto usually lie with the manufacturer, not the dealer. And the dealer ends up in the middle with a problem not of his causing.



Eric Pearson

"The consumer can only address his problem to the dealer, although the dealer may not have caused the problem. And if the manufacturer chooses to ignore the dealer, who ends up holding the bag? The consumer. This law gave the consumer a direct pipeline against the manufacturer through the dealer and the attorney general's office."

That important piece of legislation, Pearson adds, was initiated at the onset of the consumer movement in the early 1970's.

On a local level, Pearson was long active in issues concerning education. He was at the forefront of the fight to stop construction of additional schools in the 1970's. "It was totally unnessary and would have added a tax burden that was completely unncessary," he says.

Pearson now recalls "it took the community about four years in total to remove the incompentents who were in office at that time."

It was in the 1970's that Pearson personally uncovered "many irregularities in the payment of service fees by the school system.

"We came within a hair's breadth of being decertified," he claims. "And that was absolutely unheard of in Cohasset. As the town became more involved, it took about four years at the polls to put people in who would address the problems of the school system."

It was during this time, he notes, that a movement by the "ultra liberal minority" was underway to construct a new junior high school building. "This," he says, "despite the fact that federal figures showed a future declining enrollment that was beginning then."

Pearson describes himself as a conservative moderate in politics and fiscal matters, a course he sees more young people following. "They have to understand," he says, "that you can't spend money until you've earned it."

Pearson is nothing if not opininated. He is informed and does not offer answers without long deliberations.

The business climate in Cohasset, he says, is not dissimilar to other "bedroom communities."

Like other suburban towns, Cohasset "attracts people who are personally successful and less in need of addressing the current and future tax burdens of the average citizen. As a result, many of the town boards in this area are more and more attracting people who do not have an objective fiscal understanding of how a town should operate in total.

"As a result," he continues, "more and more restrictions are being placed on the business people, making it very difficult in some cases to maintain a strong profitable position."

Pearson cited a recent attempt by a group of residents to restrict the hours of businesses operating in Cohasset. "That particular town meeting article was thrown out by the attorney general," he recalls, "who was more intelligent in the area of business than most people here. How can any one group forget that the business community in any town is the largest single taxpayer and employer in that town?"

Route 3A was designed, he explains, in the 1930's to accomodate the business tax base for the residential community. "If you completely destroy the viability of businesses to exist, you will destroy the tax base itself. Citizens in these bedroom communities tend to be very transient. After years, the only permanence in the town is the tax base and the businesses that create it."

Women's health forum planned

Until recently, health care for most women meant a visit to the doctor when there was a medical problem and finding a "good" doctor who would make the right medical decision.

Today, this concept is being challenged by women who wish to know more about their bodies and their health.

Studies have shown that there are certain actions individuals can take to promote good health and to live longer, more productive lives with greater freedom from disease. The intention is not to replace medical care with self-help but to shift some responsibility for maintaining good health from the medical professional to the individual.

To help meet these needs, the Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a forum, "Women and Health: Choices for Life," Thursday, October 30 at 12:30 p.m. at Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church, for all South Shore women, free of charge.

Three female physicians will each speak for 20 minutes and answer questions.

Dr. Susan Emmer of Cohasset, a nutritionist and private practitioner in chiropractic and family wellness, will speak about the importance of nutrition and exercise in preventive medicine. Dr. Emmer conducts a class in nutritional awareness each Tuesday at the Cohasset Community Center. She completed graduate studies in nutrition at Columbia University and received her chiropractic degree from New York Chiropractic College.

Dr. Susan Emmer

Dr. Jeanine A. Carlson, chief of internal medicine at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women, Boston, will give an overview of women's health issues, focusing on stress-related diseases and osteoporosis, a preventable disease.

"For the first time in history, the number of deaths due to lung cancer in women exceeds the number of deaths due to breast cancer," according to Dr. Carlson. "This increase in lung cancer is associated with an increasing number of women who smoke. There has also been a significant increase in other stress-related diseases in women: hypertension, heart and ulcer disease."

Osteoporosis, to the surprise of many people, is not only a concern for the elderly. "It is only in the elderly that we see the manifestations of the disease in terms of bone thinning, weakness and markedly increased susceptibility to fractures," Dr. Carlson said. "But the degree to which an individual will be affected, and the age at which it is clinically apparent, is actually determined by the time that person is 25-35 years-old."

Dr. Carlson received her medical degree from University of Chicago, and completed her residency in internal medicine at Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center, New York, in 1981.

The third physician, Dr. Lisa Fusaro, a psychotherapist from the Neponset Health Center, will discuss women and stress. More women than ever before are employed outside the home and must fill multiple roles as workers, homemakers, wives and mothers. Stresses arise because of family life, work, children, death, divorce, separation and even retirement. Dr. Fusaro will discuss how to relieve stress and avoid destructive reactions, like overeating.

Babysitting is available by calling 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Eric Pearson retires . . .

Council, Pearson is a longtime conservationist who has fought to retain the park and its natural resources.

A resident of Beechwood for 35 years, Pearson has seen his $7,800 investment surrounded by homes now being purchased for $300,000. "It's very strange," he laughs.

He still loves the town, and the magnificent ocean that borders it.

He will be 58 this month, too early to retire from an active life.

But another turn at town politics is not contemplated. "Viable people with background and experience do not want to be part of a town board that is without responsible, objective attitudes. There is a dearth of candidates because most people don't consider elected office worth the amount of time they will give. Their time is better spent on other things in other areas.

"A successful businessman can't afford to waste his time," he pronounces. "You can hardly expect someone to serve on a committee that is a waste of time because it is non objective."

Pearson may be departing his familiar Route 3A location, but he has left an undeniable impression.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

ARRANGING YOUR MOVE

Finding a good moving company is the first step toward an easy move. The Yellow Pages are a good place to begin, but a word of mouth recommendation from a friend or neighbor is the best advertising any mover can have.

Talk to friends about their experiences, and ask your Realtor if he or she can recommend one or more reputable companies. Then call around to check weights and charges. You can save a lot of money by packing yourself, but doing it yourself may affect the mover's liability if anything is broken. Like other service organizations, moving companies offer a range of services and charges. Some charge by the hour for local and/or long distance moves. The rates may also vary depending on the weight of your furniture and other belongings. Once you narrow down your choices of moving companies, you can ask a representative from each company to visit your home and give you specific information about price and service options.

back in 1957; that's when we went undefeated."

Chatterton added, "Eight or 10 of the guys from that team still live in Cohasset and have been going to all of the games. In fact one of the guys from that team, Bernard Mulcahy has a son who starts at wide receiver. So, that makes it interesting.

"But I think without a doubt, this team has more depth than we had," Chatterton said. "And the kids today are so much bigger and stronger.

"I'd hate to even imagine what would happen to us if we'd played this team here 30 years ago."

The team captains have set their sites on going undefeated and winning a Super Bowl. "We want to win it for Coach Sullivan, because it's his last year coaching," they said. "And we want to win it for ourselves, because it's our last year playing, too."

But the captains tempered their visions of victory with Pisano philosophy. "One game at a time has been our theme all year," they said.

What makes this team so good? "Our line," Pisano replied without hesitation. "Offensively, the line has done a very good job in creating holes for the backs in our running attack.

"They are experienced players," he explained. "Four of them have played with each other since sophomore year. When you get the combination of experience and very positive attitude these kids display, it works.

"They've worked very hard in the off-season to get bigger and stronger," he added. "They're going to create some problems against teams in our league; they have done a great job firing off the football and making our offense go."

In the line, Jeff Lloyd, Pat O'Connor, Jeff Soltesz and Jeff Lydon are stalwarts.

When those lads on the line bust open a hole in the opposing defense, there's almost always an explosion; they call it Bob Durkin.

"In the backfield, we've had the good fortune of having Bobby Durkin," Pisano understated. "He has great running ability - not only power, but quickness as well. He's a tough kid to bring down and he's always moving forward, which is a good sign for any kind of back."

Chatterton noted, Durkin passed the 100-point scoring mark for the season against Weston.

"Another fellow on that 1957 team," he added, "was Walter Sweeney; you know, he played professional football for 14 years with the San Diego Chargers and Washington Redskins.

"Well, Walter was at the game," Chatterton said. "Walter holds the school record for most points in a season at 134. So, I had Bobby meet Walter last week and now Walter's rooting for Bobby to break it more than anyone.

"He probably will break that record in the next game, or the game after that," he added. "Bobby's leading the state now in scoring."

Durkin is one reason why the smallest school in the small school division has been leveling opponents two, three and four times its size.

"Our next opponent is Duxbury," Pisano said. "They're one of the biggest teams in the large school division; they have very good numbers and a very strong football tradition. It's going to be a great game."

What makes this team so special? "Togetherness," was the word the team captains echoed in unison. "Everybody seems to get along with everybody else; it's kind of like a family unit."

Pisano agreed, the closeness of the team is another winning aspect here.

"They're great kids," he said. "and they're great to work with. They'll do anything we ask them to do. They believe in hard work, and it has paid off."

The character of the Cohasset Skippers has shown through as they overcame severe injuries to key players, and kept winning.

The injury bug first bit Derek Lacks, the team's starting nose guard and second-string fullback.

Lacks was hurt away from the gridiron, in gym class.

In the bout against Scituate, the Skippers lost their starting quarterback Sean Corkery with a broken tibia.

Corkery, a senior, had been starting since about the middle of his sophomore season.

Peter Sanblom, the Skippers' starting fullback took over for Corkery and Pisano said, "We're very pleased with his progress. He's had to play under the gun and has delivered well."

Pisano called Sanblom "a student of the game, a good competitor and a good leader."

As coach, Pisano has had to worry about moving players around and creating weaknesses along the line due to the squad's limited depth.

"We've got to hope and pray that nobody goes boom-boom anymore for a while," he said. "The name of our game right now is to stay healthy for the rest of the season."

The captains agreed the injuries to Lacks and Corkery were tough losses, but they added, "We'll be able to bounce back, definitely."

"Nothing succeeds like success," Pisano said. "They've had a taste of it, they've experienced it, and they want it. They're hungry and they're going to go after it too."

A local angle

This was the week for an historic pre-summit conference between two world leaders. Media from every country, large and small, was there to capture the latest development from Iceland. It was the top story of our week.

Back home on the local front, we too are concerned with the topics discussed and rejected during that weekend meeting. The results, or non results, would affect the entire globe and sprinkle down into our small community. For certainly, whether the two super powers of the world decide to continue nuclear armament is of concern to every citizen of this planet.

But the media being the overpowering, overbearing messenger that it is, is once again saturating us with this story from every vantage point. And in the end, do we really care what Senator Kerry thinks about star wars? Isn't afterall, a matter of partisan politics for him and every other potential presidential candidate?

So enough of Iceland for the moment. Enough of Mr. Reagan and the chairman of the Russian state party whose name has never been pronounced the same in succession. And enough of a country's capital city that no one can correctly spell, nevermind pronounce.

Back on the home front, we have far less serious topics to ponder. But they are far more fun. Let's not talk of sewers this week. Commercial landfills can wait for another time. Let the lawsuits stand aside. This week, let's talk about football. Cohasset High School football.

It's been a while, you must admit, since we've been this enthused about the high school varsity football squad. There simply wasn't need to be. But this year is different, far different, We have an exciting, and talented team that looks like championship material.

As the local newspaper, we have given publicity to our championship basketball team. (Allright, some say too much.) But this is the fall, and this notoriety belongs solely to the football team.

To coach Phil Pisano, who has waited long and worked hard to build this dream team, we say congratulations! And to his tireless athletes who are concenrating on bringing sole possession of a title to Cohasset, we offer our appreciation and support for your efforts.

We hope the entire town will attend Saturday's Homecoming game. These boys deserve all the attention we can give them.

The Cohasset High School football team, at least in this hometown, is our top news story of the week. President Reagan, Mikhail Gorbachev and the pre-summit conference must take a back seat to the more substantive issues of our town.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Selectmen seek way to spend 'pennies from Hollywood.' The front area of the town hall will soon receive a facelift, funded by a portion of the $25,000 Warner Brothers gift to the town in appreciation of its access in filming the Witches of Eastwick. Ideas are sought for a major portion of the $25K still to be spent.

"...Most appropriate...a real show-biz touch in the tradition of the Lunts, Bea Lillie, Gertrude Lawrence and such Broadway luminaries who trod the straw-hat circuit here in days of yore..."

Warner money could help Milliken Field

(This letter was submitted to the Board of Selectmen. Ed.)

To the Editor:

We are pleased to note that the board is soliciting input from residents for the best use of the $25,000 Warner Brothers' gift to the Town. Our committee is convinced that allotting the funds to the field improvement project will best satisfy your requirement that the money be used "for something the whole town can enjoy." Not only will our often neglected youth be able to better participate in interscholastic events but all residents will be able to enjoy watching these activities as well. This project will not only serve our youth now but for many future generations as well. We feel as you that this gift should be spent on an enduring project. The thousands of youth who will participate upon these facilities over the years will be the real recipients of this gift.

We wish to expend the $25,000 as follows:

1. $16,700 for completion of architectural/engineering and bid documentation work which will give Town Meeting in April the actual project cost.
2. The remaining $8,300 would be applied to the construction cost.

We hope that you believe as we that the best use for this gift is the long term investment in our youth represented by this project.

Student wants soccer to stay at Milliken

(This letter was written by an eighth grade student to the Superintendent of the Tree and Park Department. —Ed.)

Dear Mr. Laugelle,

I read the article in the Mariner in which you mentioned the over use of Milliken Field. I agree, but I believe your solution to move the soccer goals is wrong. I think you should take into account that more than twice as many kids play soccer than play football. I also feel that the rubbish around the field is due to the Saturday football games, not the soccer teams.

You should take into account that soccer is a growing sport for both boys and girls. I wish you would think these things over before making your final decision of the fields.

Sincerely yours,
Billy Baird

Mass. interest rates lower than in 1985

A survey released this week shows that for nearly 70 percent of Massachusetts banks, credit card interest rates are lower now than they were one year ago.

The number of Bay State banks charging 18 percent has been cut in half over the past year, the survey found, from 43 to 22.

The average interest rate at Massachusetts banks is currently 16.1 percent, with a low of 11.75 percent.

The survey, conducted by the Office of Consumer Affairs and the banking commission, determined that 69 percent of banks in the Commonwealth have met or gone below last year's bottom rate of 16.5 percent.

In 1983, when interest rates were considerably higher and there was a movement to lift the 18 percent cap on credit card rates offered by Massachusetts banks, Republicans filed legislation to control the deregulation process. In 1984, the statute was changed to provide deregulation in certain circumstances, based on an inflation index, while otherwise retaining the 18 percent ceiling.

The banking commissioner determines an index rate on a quarterly basis by doubling the average rates of 91-day treasury bills for the preceding quarter. If the index rate exceeds 18 percent, banks can then exceed the 18 percent ceiling. To date, this has not occurred.

Fierce competition, especially in the last year, among Massachusetts banks eager to increase their share of this lucrative market has yielded a bonus for consumers.

It is important, however, to exercise caution in choosing a credit card because not all cards available in Massachusetts are governed by state law. Out-of-state banks seeking business here and local banks acting as agents for out-of-state banks are not bound to Massachusetts interest regulating statutes and therefore often charge above 18 percent. Citibank for example, is based in South Dakota, where there is no limit on interest rates.

Another difference between Massachusetts-based banks and their out-of-state counterparts is that Massachusetts prevents its banks from charging a late fee of any kind. Other states have no restrictions on these charges.

John Missett returns to Boston to clear his name

(This is the second part of a two-part article published last week.—Ed.)

He waited until they were returned to court and then turned himself in to Quincy District Court.

"They had expected to find an abused, neglected child.

"Instead they found a handsome, popular, robust, well-adjusted teenager, who was the president of his class.

"Then they started to zero in on John Missett.

"They found he had no criminal record.

"They found he never even had a speeding ticket.

"They found a honorably discharged Vietnam veteran, who had spent the last 13 years bringing up his son," John said.

"The attitude of law enforcement officers and the courts changed.

"They were saying we don't want this guy to go to jail.

"But they sure as hell did when they sent two cops to Washington to find me.

"On April 26, 1984, though no media people ever asked, my case was continued without a finding for two years," John said.

His lawyer advised that he make no contact with his son. Any contact could be misrepresented as custodial interference and he could face five years in federal prison, the lawyer said.

The Missett family moved into a rented home in Norwood.

"Life was in turmoil. My two younger sons missed Eric very much. It was very hard to concentrate in work. People would say to me — John Missett, aren't you the guy that abducted your son," he said.

Though he wanted to move back to Washington, John was determined to stay in the area.

"Though I couldn't contact him and he didn't know where I was, I just wanted to be here if he needed me," John said.

"Linda had abandoned him once. And I knew she would abandon him again," he said.

Eric lived with Linda and her boyfriend in an apartment in Framingham for 18 months.

"Things went fairly well for him for him at first.

"The saddest part of the whole thing was Eric wanted to believe that Linda loved him. That's why he came to live with her," John said.

But as soon as the court case was settled in April, things changed for Eric, according to John.

Linda told Eric he could not contact his father, according to John.

And life seemed to disintegrate for the young teenager from that time on.

Eric described life with Linda in a letter to his father:

'I came back to clear my name. There is no greater insult than to be called a child abductor.'

—John Missett

"Over the past 18 months since I was taken, which is is how I see it now, since I really had no choice, there have been drastic changes.

"When I first got there, things were good between Linda and I.

"I was shocked to find them (Linda and her boyfriend) using marijuana on a regular basis...

"I was caught up in the rush and excitment of seeing everyone and tried to put it in the back of my mind.

"I quickly got a job, earning $4 dollars an hour. Immediately after that I had to pay for almost everything except the rent, food and bills...

"The situation changed for the worst when Linda got a restraining order to stop any communication at all with my family for two years.

"To live with a family who has supported me and provided me with a loving family environment, it was all I needed for someone to just tell me I could not talk to them for two years. (It) was absurd," Eric wrote.

"Until then I had not known her real intention was to cause pain and suffering to my father and stepmother regardless of the toll it would take on my family.

"The situation got ridiculous. I was basically on my own. There never really was any family interaction in the first place, but I was now isolated.

"They stayed in their own room and came out only to check how much milk I was drinking. I could do what I wanted, stay out all night, goof off in school and I had no guidance from Linda who just didn't care enough to talk to me about it," Eric wrote in his letter to his father.

During this time, Eric telephoned Det. Gerald Currie of the Braintree police to tell him he wanted to get in touch with his father.

"But within a half hour, Linda had called me and said things were all-right," Currie said.

In early May, Eric contacted both his aunt and his stepmother. He said he was very unhappy and wanted to return to his family.

In mid-May Eric told Linda that he wanted to move back with his father and stepmother.

According to John, an argument ensued. Linda's boyfriend took the keys away from him and told him to leave the apartment.

Eric lived in the pool shed in the apartment complex for the next week, until his boss, the manager of a shop on the premises, put him up in a motel, then urged Linda to give custody back to his father.

First Linda only gave a letter allowing Eric to visit his father, stepmother and stepbrothers.

But on July 18, she signed temporary papers which were filed in Dedham Probate court which give John Missett temporary custody of his son.

She also signed an agreement for permanent custody which is presently going through the court system.

As soon as the legal proceedings were complete, on August 21, the Missett family took the train back to their home in Benton City, Washington, from which Eric had been taken 18 months ago.

"Eric is great. He's happy. He has a B-plus average. He's the quarterback on the junior varsity football team and third string on the varsity team at Kiona-Benton High School.

"And I wish I had a many pretty girls parading through the door when I was his age," John said.

After he got his family settled, John Missett returned to the Boston area with one thing on his mind.

"I came back to clear my name. No greater insult can be laid on any human being than to be called a kidnapper and a child abductor."

"I came back to ask where were all the people who cared so much about Eric when he needed them.

"Detective DiNatale assured Nancy that a lot of people would be watching to ensure Eric's safety.

"With the exception of Braintree Detective Gerald Currie, those people were blinded to Eric's plight.

"They are the press, the reporters who exploited Eric for their own gain.

"They are Child Find who are so obsessed with their self appointed duty they failed to check the facts.

"They are the school nurses who run to the telephone to report a kidnapped child.

"They are the courts who endlessly talk of the best interest of the child but who ignore the facts and continually show a bias towards mothers and contempt for fathers.

"Where were they when Eric had to support himself?.

"Where were they when Eric was staying out all night?.

"Where were they when Eric was forced from his home, keys stripped from hishandand could only shelter himself in a pool shack for over a week?, John Missett said.

Thinking back on '67

Commentary

As I write this, the fate of the Red Sox is undetermined. But that is not important. For whether the Sox make it to the Series or not, this has been for me a year of beginnings and a time for memories.

It was more than 20 years ago that my father and I walked into the dull green stadium off Kenmore Square. I loved every minute of that forgettable game. As I recall, one Red Sox player later said when looked into the stands, he thought he was standing in front of a mirror. I, for one, think he must have been exaggerating. For this was a weekday afternoon game in the late summer. The Sox, as usual, were in tenth place, playing the only team in contention for the cellar. It was a lonely place, Fenway Park. But it belonged to me.

For reasons I did not comprehend, the Sox got better. Yaz was one reason, Tony C. was another. An outfielder named Reggie Smith had a lot to do with the burgeoning of this team, along with a new short stop, Rico Petrocelli, and a handsome pitcher named Jim Lonborg.

The stands now were filled with fans. I didn't mind sharing my space with them, because success wouldn't be as fun without someone to scream, laugh, shout and cry with.

And I did my share. My summers were spent at Fenway, where my friends and I could sit in right field and stare at Tony C. for $1.50. Or we could climb into the bleachers and talk with reliever Sparky Lyle for a reasonable 75 cents an afternoon.

And along came 1967. Along with the screams of encouragement, came the depths of despair. The night Tony was hit by a screaming fastball was a terror I had never known. Yet the team and the fans carried on.

I was there for the season's end in 1967, pushed far back into the bleachers by new and more vocal fans. But I didn't really mind, it was the year of the Impossible Dream and it was happening in my ballpark.

My father searched and somehow gathered one ticket for the World Series which he graciously gave to me. Not only did I get out of school early, but for the first time in my life I sat in the box seats. Next to corporate types and office bigwigs, I didn't much care for the new accomodations. Besides, the Sox lost.

I was in the very last row of the bleachers for the last game of the '67 Series. As I grasped the sides of the bleachers, paralyzed by my fear of heights, I watched in silent disbelief as the Sox couldn't quite hang onto that Impossible goal. And these were the seats I stood in line for eight hours to get? I cried a little, but I was happy too. History was made that year in my backyard.

Well, I grew up and had many more responsibilities other than observing the Red Sox. I moved for a while to another state, and watched on television as the '75 Sox entered a new World Series. I was mildly amused.

This year, my son came of age. I took him to Fenway for his first game. It was a breezy day in April, we, so unknowing of the fate that would follow this team.

But I saw it in my son's eyes. No matter that we were restricted to the bleachers, where I was later told by my father, no self-respecting mother would seat her seven year-old son at his first game.

He was transfixed. It was my ballpark no longer. I let go of his hand as we sat behind the bullpen, I realized the circle was indeed complete. Now it was his time to know the happiness of a winning team. To scream as Rice belts a homer into centerfield, to holler when Boggs annihilates an easy play to first. And to continue to believe when there is no hope.

As I rationally explained the prognosis for Sunday's predicted demise, I clearly understood I was talking to no avail. My son had hope, that feeling that had long passed from me.

Ellery Clark of Cohasset threw out the first pitch of the Aug. 5 Red Sox game. He says it was a split-finger fastball. Ellery promises to be back in Cohasset in time for the World Series.

And so it was that evening, as he bounded downstairs from the room where he and his grandfather had huddled all afternoon.

"Ma," he said firmly but without any undue enthusiasm. "The Red Sox have won."

I screamed with an emotion that had surfaced after 19 years of self-induced exile. I turned and saw my son's face, slightly embarassed at his mother's antics.

I asked him, "What's the matter, don't you understand the undeniable significance of this moment?"

He answered, yes. And then in that high-pitched whine only my son is secure in reaching, he complained, "But they keep interruptin' about something in Iceland. The Red Sox, then Iceland, the Red Sox, then Iceland."

And I thought. Surely in the world there is nothing more.

VoTech will seek budget increase

South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School Superintendent Clifford Easton told the school committee last week he will present a 1987-88 budget at least seven percent larger than this year's $3.4 million budget.

Improving services to the students, upgrading the business office and addressing new state requirements for special needs students are budget priorities, Easton said.

"We want to focus on service to the students," Easton said, "and that usually translates into people and processes.

"Service to the kids is the number one priority," he said, "and you improve that through personnel and programs."

Easton said staff changes including raising a physical education aide position to a teaching position and other changes could be recommended.

Also, Easton said improving the ability to process business and student records would be looked at.

Another area of concern is special education. Easton said that special needs students make up 9 to 11 percent of the student body at most high schools, but approxiamtely 22 percent of the 535 students at South Shore VoTech are special needs students.

Easton said that new state regulations, including a rule requiring state evaluations for students who fail more than two courses and a rule requiring teacher supervision of special needs students on in-house suspension, will cost the school money.

"We're probably going to need a 50/50 person to split time between the special education and guidance departments," said Easton. "The new special education laws have added a whole new layer of paperwork."

Easton will present the preliminary budget to the school committee Nov. 12. He had planned to present a budget with an increase larger than 7 percent to the committee, but members suggested that Easton limit the increase to 7 percent and submit a list of priorities not addressed in the proposed budget.

This year's $3.4 million budget increased by 5.4 percent from the 1985-86 budget.

Teachers at South Shore VoTech will receive their Blue Cross/Blue Shield refunds in one lump sum rather than through reductions in premiums.

The school committee voted 5-3 to allow the lump payments, reversing a May vote to reduce deductions for the insurance premiums from employee paychecks to distribute the refund.

Boys soccer continues on winning streak

Two weeks ago Tuesday, the boys crushed a weak Whitman/Hanson team 6-1. The Skippers established an early lead and dominated the entire game. Coach Dan Magner was very happy with the way his team played and felt they really began to click offensively in this game.

Jim Reidy led the team offensively with two goals followed by David Shultz, Todd Fitzpatrick, Jim Gallagher, and Jason Marsac who each had one. Magner cited Jim Gallagher's 35-yard bullet which went into the right hand corner of the net as one of the nicest goals he has seen all season.

John Reidy and Ned Chase both played well for Cohasset. Goalie Joel Reidy had a great day in net and made a spectacular save off a penalty kick. Ian Smart also turned in a good effort and created many scoring opportunities for the Skippers.

Saturday, the boys defied all odds by beating the undefeated, number one team in Division II, Scituate, 1-0. Magner felt the key to this victory was the fact that his team played so well together and pressured the ball continuously throughout the game. Magner also said, "we created our offense from good strong defense."

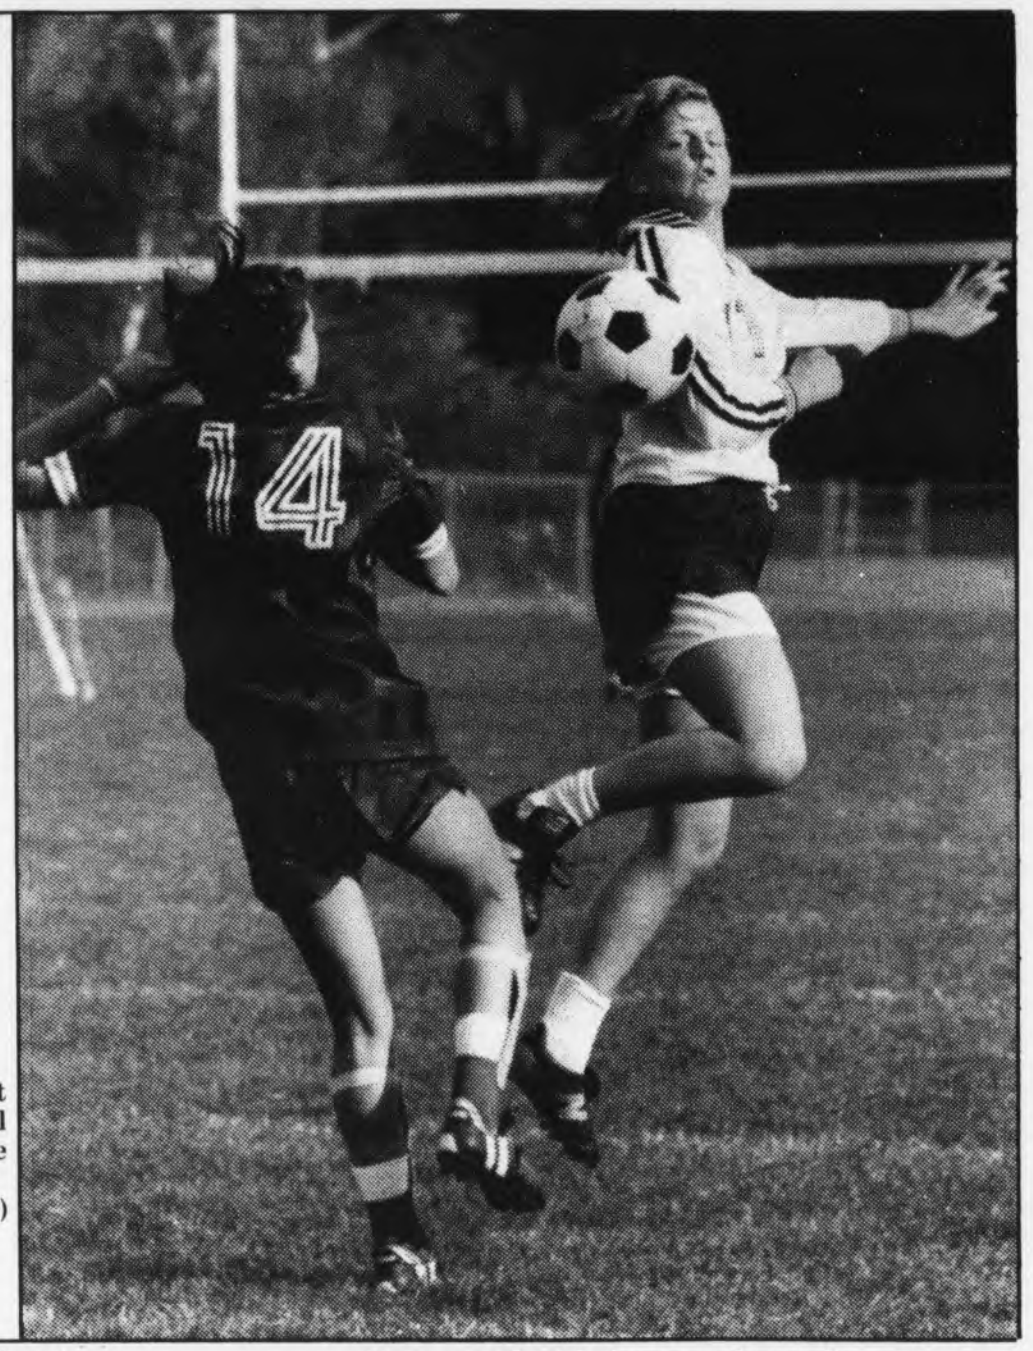
Cohasset dominated the first half by beating Scituate to the ball and by far outhustling the Sailors on both ends of the field. It was only a matter of time before Todd Fitzpatrick would finally score for Cohasset off an awesome penalty kick which put the Skippers ahead for good 1-0.

The second half Scituate began to pressure Cohasset on defense, however, the boys maintained their poise, stuck to their game plan and finally pulled out the victory.

Magner felt his entire defense had a great game Saturday. Magner mentioned John Linsley, Todd Fitzpatrick, and David Shultz as playing well. Ned Chase did a fantastic job defensively shutting down Scituate's top scorer. Goalie Joel Reidy played an excellent game in net, and Steven Myers made a game saving play by heading a sure ball out of Cohasset's net.

Monday, the boys refused to let up and beat an extremely talented Rockland team, 3-2. The Skippers surprised all by dominating at the beginning of the game and leading 3-0 by half time. Rockland came back to score twice in the second half, but Cohasset hung on and pulled at the upset victory. Magner felt his team's success resulted from the fact that the boys played unselfishly as a unit and that they were able to show composure when Rockland started to apply some pressure.

David Shultz scored within the first 1:30 minutes of the game off a pass from Jim Reidy. About four minutes later Ian Smart rammed Jim Reidy's pass into the net to give Cohasset a 2-0 lead. Finally, Jimmy Reidy scored the winning goal for Cohasset and was assisted by Ian Smart.



Jen Coley of Cohasset lunges for the ball against an aggressive Norwell opponent.
(Kathy Perlow)

John Reidy, Jim Gallagher, Steve Myers, John Linsley and Todd Fitzpatrick, all played well for the Skippers. Joel Reidy had a great game in net and stopped 9 shots.

Wednesday, the boys continued their winning break by crushing Middleboro, 7-1. Cohasset was up only 2-0 at half time but came alive in the second half, and pleased Magner with its explosive offense.

Todd Fitzpatrick led all scorers with three goals. Adam Durant, David Shultz, Tim Reidy, and Jason Marsac each picked up a goal as well.

Ned Chase turned in a good effort for Cohasset in net. Both Todd Fitzpatrick and John Reidy played well on both ends of the field.

Friday, the boys lost a tough game to Hingham, 4-2. The scoring was even until Hingham went ahead for good, 3-2 just before half time. Magner was pleased with the way his team played especially since many players were playing positions they had never played before. Magner also felt the boys worked well together as a team and passed the ball superbly.

Ian Smart and Jim Reidy both scored for Cohasset. Jason Marsac had a good game in net making 12 saves. Both Todd Fitzpatrick and Danny Pompeo played very well defensively. John Reidy, Jim Reidy, and Scott Fitzsimmons were also cited by Magner as turning in outstanding efforts for Cohasset.

Tuesday the boys face Duxbury, a team which Cohasset has never beaten before. Hopefully, Tuesday will be the day the boys break this much too long losing streak.

Football

Saturday, the boys destroyed Weston 21-0. Coach Phil Pisano felt his team's quickness was no match for the bigger but slower Weston team. Pisano was especially pleased with Cohasset's defense which held Weston to a mere three first downs and never let Weston get its offense going. Pisano cited this game as Cohasset's best defensive performance of the season.

Offensively, Bobby Durkin scored all of Cohasset's points and gained over 240 yards behind the excellent blocking of Patrick O'Conner, Jeff Soltesz, Jeff Lydon, and Jeff Lloyd.

Defensively, Liam Stanford, Glen Froio, Matt Maloney and Jeff Soltesz all played well. Pisano also cited Chris Conant and Todd Henry as turning in excellent efforts for Cohasset.

The boys now stand with an impressive 5-0 record overall as they go into one of their toughest games of the year Saturday against a talented Duxbury team. Pisano feels Duxbury will be a challenge for Cohasset, but a challenge which the Skippers are ready to accept.

Girls' Soccer

Monday, the girls started off the week with a loss to Silver Lake 2-1. Cohasset outshot Silver Lake by a huge margin, but unfortunately was unable to put the ball in the net.

Kerri Kirkendall scored with 10 minutes left in the game off a pass from Vicky Kelley. Coach Kennan Startzell felt that Susan Riley, Vicky Kelley, and Jen Coley all played well for Cohasset.

Girls field hockey to face Scituate on Friday

The girls bounced back from the loss and tranced Hanover Wednesday, 3-1. Startzell was very pleased with his team's performance in this game especially on defense.

Karin Anglin scored all three goals for the Skippers and did an excellent job of being in the right place at the right time. Kristen Contis, Mary Leonard, and Kerri Kirkendall all had great games against Hanover. In their first varsity appearances this year, Kristen Ellinger, Katie Ryan and Cindy Dormer all impressed Startzell.

Friday, the girls came from behind to tie Norwell 1-1 late in the game. Startzell felt Cohasset dominated the game and showed excellent control over the play. Unfortunately, the girls were unable to capitalize on many scoring opportunities.

Caitlin Staunton drove home Liz O'Leary's pass to tie the game at one apiece. Maureen O'Leary did a very good job on defense and contained Norwell's most talented offensive player.

Wednesday, the girls face an always, tough Rockland team. Friday, the Skippers face another tough challenge as they play Whitman/Hanson.

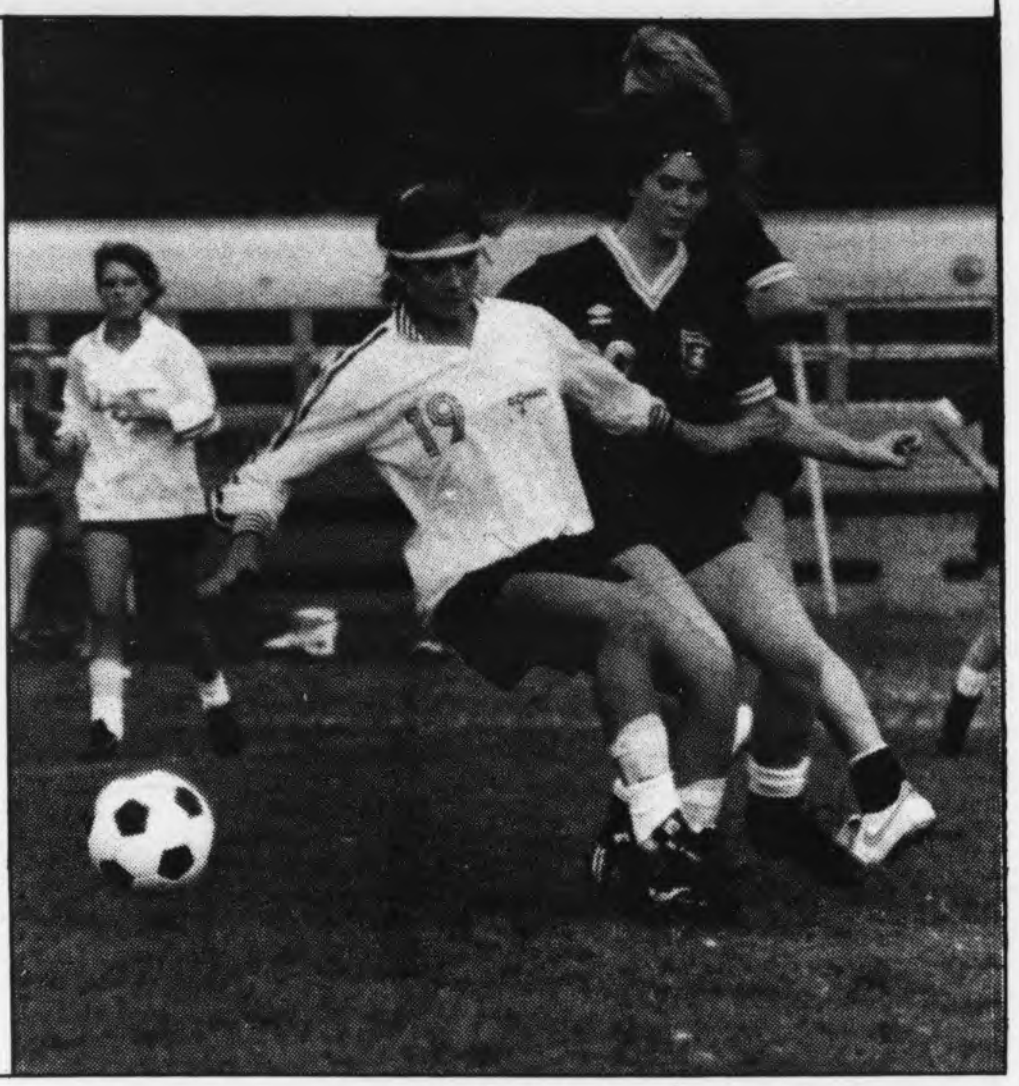
Field Hockey

The girls had a great week adding three more victories to their growing list. Tuesday, the Skippers blew past a weak Middleboro team, 5-0. Cohasset came out quickly and scored early, establishing its dominance within the opening minutes of the game. Middleboro had no chance of making a comeback for Cohasset far outplayed and outhustled them.

Cohasset's entire offense had an outstanding game. Maureen Farren, Maria Cahill, and Kerri Cullinane all turned in good efforts for the Skippers in this game.

Wednesday, Cohasset crushed Abington 4-0. Practically the entire team contributed equally in this win, and the Skippers played well on both ends of the field.

Maureen Farren got her fiftieth career goal in this game, an achievement which has not been reached by many at Cohasset. Sarah Hamilton got her first varsity goal when she drove in a beautiful shot from about 15 yards out.



Cohasset's Kaitlin Staunton (19) has her work cut out for her as she tries to retain possession of the ball.

Carolan Hurley played a great game coming off the bench. Julie Bowdin, Debbie Hartley, and Sarah Dickerman all had good games as well.

After getting off to a slow start, Cohasset finally up and beat Scituate, 4-1 Friday. Cohasset was just too talented for this weaker Scituate team to handle.

Cindy Spoener led the team with two goals followed by Michele Cassolaro and Jan Peters who each had one. Sarah Dickerman, Heather St. Onge, and Julie Bowdin all had outstanding games for Cohasset.

This week the girls travel to East Bridgewater Wednesday. Friday, they face Scituate at home. The Skippers must win both games in order to keep their league championship hopes alive.

Figueiredo case still afloat

As a result of a court hearing last week, William Figueiredo of Parker Avenue and Harbormaster Harry Ritter have decided to have a separate dispute settled in superior court.

The town filed a contempt of court complaint against Figueiredo and the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) that was scheduled to be heard in Wrentham District Court Oct. 9. The complaint was filed last month after the DEQE superceded the town's previous order, and allowed Figueiredo to place floats within Bailey's Creek. On Feb. 24, 1984, a superior court judge issued an order prohibiting Figueiredo from placing any floats below the mean low water level.

Janiak appealed that decision to the DEQE, which in turn approved placement of the floats in the creek, and issued a precise configuration of where those floats should be located.

The town filed a contempt complaint against Figueiredo and DEQE in Norfolk Probate Court, charging they were in contempt of the 1984 superior court decision.

Figueiredo, the DEQE and Harbormaster Ritter met in district court last week. At that time, according to Janiak, they reached an agreement to dismiss the contempt charge.

But they will continue to litigate the issue of whether Figueiredo can maintain the Bailey Creek floats as allowed by DEQE. The case will be heard in superior court, and will "hopefully be concluded by the spring," Janiak stated.

Because it is near the end of the boating season, Figueiredo has agreed to remove the floats by Oct. 20.

"The court case before us now," he explained, "is whether the DEQE ruling was correct. The town is challenging the validity of the Sept. 4 decision in which the DEQE said Mr. Figueiredo could keep the floats in Bailey's Creek."

The original court case involving the town and Figueiredo began in 1979 when a preliminary injunction was issued by the probate court, preventing Figueiredo from placing moorings or floats in Cohasset Harbor. Harbormaster Ritter had determined private moorings along Bailey's Creek at Parker Avenue would take up valuable town-owned mooring space and reduce navigation within the harbor.

The case was brought to trial in October, 1983 in a two-day hearing. After viewing the harbor, the judge issued a preliminary injunction against Figueiredo, prohibiting him from placing the floats below mean water level.

The floats, which can accommodate 37 boats in Bailey's Creek, remained. On June 16, the harbormaster requested that Figueiredo make a formal application to install the floats. He rejected those plans June 26 with an order to remove them within 30 days.

That's when the appeal to DEQE began, with a decision made in September. The town has repeatedly stated the harbormaster's only concern in the matter is the loss of valuable mooring spaces in the harbor if the floats are allowed to remain in Bailey's Creek.

"The main issue now," according to Atty. Janiak, " is whether the DEQE decision was correct and whether Mr. Figueiredo can maintain the floats. For now, the floats will be out of the water, but it's the end of the boating season anyway. Hopefully, there will be a decision in superior court by the spring when the floats should be put back in the water."

Female golfers win right to play on weekends

By Valerie Kroon
Mariner Correspondent

Female golfers at Pembroke Country Club will have no restrictions placed on their weekend tee-off times when the 1987 season opens March 1.

The change in policy was announced by club owner Russell Graubau last week following a complaint filed with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

The club policy change will, however, increase women's membership fees to those of their male counterparts. Currently, women pay $200 less per year than the male members.

The rule keeping females off the course before 11 a.m. on weekends and holidays was in place when Grabau purchased the club in January 1984. It was not disputed until this summer when long-time club member, Rose Cordeiro of Weymouth asked to be allowed to tee-off during men's hours.

Cordeiro offered to pay the higher men's membership fee for equal access, but was refused. She and 11 other female club members then took their case to MCAD, asking for equal rights on the course. None of the petitioners were Pembroke residents.

Graubau agreed with MCAD that the law should be changed so that every golf club will have to comply with non-discriminatory tee-off times.

"The law should be written to say that men and women are equal on every golf course," Grabau's wife Marion reported.

One-third of Pembroke's membership is female, and Grabau added the majority of the women did not want the rule changed; that many prefer to golf on weekdays when there are no restrictions.

Two completely private area clubs, Cohasset and Marshfield, both restrict female members to late tee-off times on weekends. At Marshfield, women members must wait until noon to tee-off.

But assistant manager Les Ruckeeschel said that there have been "no complaints" on the restrictions.

"During the week they (women) can tee-off any time," Ruckeeschel reported. "They appear to be happy with that."

At Cohasset Golf Club, however, a source who wished to remain unidentified acknowledged that some female members often complain about the men golfers who "get top priority." Women are not allowed to tee-off until after the male membership on weekends, usually in late afternoon.

Treasures from the attics and basements of Cohasset homes are gathering in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street.

To facilitate delivery and storage of the many donated items, members of the Bazaar Committee are at the Rectory Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12 noon to accept the articles.

"We've had a good response to date, but we're still in the market for any useful and usable articles," says Gail Bell, committee chairperson. "Here is a wonderful chance to find a good home for something you have outgrown or no longer need but which may be the very tool, gadget, small appliance, toy, sports gear—whatever—that someone else has been

Cohasset charters a new post for wartime veterans

know if I'm going to be successful, but I'm trying awfully hard."

Emilio Conte, Chairman of the Charter Committee said, Post 9146 will just serve Cohasset.

"But we have some members from Hull, Hingham and Scituate," he said, though those towns have their own posts.

Perroncello noted, many Cohasset veterans have belonged to neighboring posts, particularly Scituate.

"I know they started the post in Hingham in 1946," he said, "because I was an original member over there in Hingham."

He added, "They didn't do so well and most of the members were absorbed by the Hull VFW post.

"I just forgot about it," he said. "I didn't even bother to join the Scituate post or the Hull post; then this thing came up. And I said, 'Well hey, let's give it a try and see what happens. I think a lot of them didn't figure we'd get as many members as we've gotten."

Conte said the VFW will be most active in charitable endeavors.

"We take care of veterans who can't take care of themselves," he said. "And we visit Veterans Administration hospitals to assist in programs they have."

"Once we really get rolling," Perroncello added, "we want to start a Ladies Auxiliary and we want to have a youth activities program."

Conte mentioned another goal. "Right now, we're using the American Legion Hall, because we have no home of our own yet.

"Hopefully we will," he added, "I think it's going to take a while before we do anything like that; but we're trying to get the money together to find a home of our own."

Even though they don't have a permanent place for their post yet, Cohasset's Veterans of Foreign Wars are excited.

On Sunday, their Post 9146 will be official.

Cohasset Church news . . .

St. Anthony's

The Religious Education Committee is looking for someone to take on direction of the Youth Group, because Jane McGuinness is no longer involved as Youth Group Advisor. There is a group of terrific high-school age young people who are enthusiastic and enjoy their Sunday evening fellowship activities.

If there is anyone — an individual or a couple — who is interested in becoming Youth Group Advisor(s), please call JoAnne Chittick, R.E. Chairman (383-9220) or the church office. This program is very important and the church would like it to continue to be a successful one. (There is a small salary available in the budget for this position.) They need you now!

PERSPECTIVES: A Program for Women.

If the long weekend has preempted your schedule, do join in the second discussion Saturday, October 25, from noon to 2 p.m. at the Parish House. The topic: "Men".

LAST CHANCE: Sign up for circle dinners Saturday, October 18 by calling the church office 383-1100 or signing the list in church Sunday.

VILLAGE FAIR: Christmas Wreaths. Don't forget to gather pine cones, pods, etc. You may drop them off at Jean Manganaro's barn, 67 South Main Street anytime or call 383-9337.

The Bargain Bazaar Committee is accepting saleable donations of everything but clothing. The hours are 10:00 a.m. — 12 noon only, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. Please leave donations at the rear basement entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory, 129 South Main Street. Committee members will assist you.

Second Congregational

CHURCH SCHOOL : Someone (?) donated a television set to the church and the Jenkins' were kind enough to have it fixed for the Sunday School to use. Now all we need is a VCR. If there is anyone who would like to donate one, it would be greatly appreciated! Please contact Gail Whitehouse at 383-0350. Children, this Sunday attend church and then go to your classes. Have a fun-filled Columbus Day weekend!

VILLAGE FAIR: Don't forget to gather pinecones, pods, etc. You may drop them off at Jean Manganaro's barn, 67 No. Main St. anytime or call 383-9337. These will be used for the Christmas wreaths.

CHILDREN'S TABLE: The Children's Table for the Village Fair will be holding workshops at the Second Congregational Church each Wednesday afternoon from noon to 2:30 p.m. For information, call Claudia Story, 383-6976, or Jane Bishop, 383-6772. Lots of hands are needed — no experience necessary!

FLOWER COMMITTEE: The flowers given each Sunday by members and friends of our church beautify the sanctuary and are appreciated by all those attending the service. Some people have standing dates on which they give flowers every year. However, there are some open dates available and flowers in the vestibule extend a warm welcome on entering the sanctuary. The Flower Committee donates the flowers and palms for Palm Sunday, and Memorial Funds are used to provide the decorations at Christmas and the Easter Flowers, so these dates are not available. Donations or bequests may be made to these Memorial Funds to honor or remember your family or friends.

Those wishing to donate flowers may call our chairman, Fran Walton at 383-1798. Flowers may be ordered from the Flower Committee or from your florist.

The committee would appreciate being informed of anyone that is ill, homebound or has had a recent death in the family that would be cheered by a gift of these flowers after the service. We do ask that the containers belonging to the church be returned to the church or to a member of the committee. Frannie Walton, chairman; Mary Campbell, Jean Simonds, Tish Grinnell.

A THANK YOU: The Clark Young Family expresses their appreciation for the church's note of sympathy on the death of Clark's father, Clark Young, Sr.

Beechwood Congregational

The Beechwood Congregational Church welcomes everyone for worship at 10:45 a.m. Child care will be provided. Please join us at the coffee hour following the service.

Sunday School for grades K-8 meets from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Remember to bring canned items for our ingathering box.

Wednesday morning mixer will be held at 10 a.m. Bring the kids, work on projects or just join us for coffee. Everyone is welcome.

A speedy recovery is wished for Marion Ellis of Scituate. She has been at South Shore Hospital.

We are glad Dorothy Litchfield of Norwell is home and well.

The Harvest Supper and Auction will be Thursday Oct. 23 at 6:30 p.m. For ticket information, call 383-0211.

Plans are finishing up for the 10th Annual Antique show and sale at the Deer Hill School Sat. Nov. 8 from 9-5. There will be 25 dealers with a fine assortment of antiques from jewelry, to linen, to that hutch you've always wanted! A great place to start your Christmas shopping.

Bloodmobile at First Parish raises 95 pints

One hundred five donors contributed 95 pints of blood at last month's community bloodmobile at the First Parish Church.

Promoters included residents who contacted potential donors to sign up. They were: Vi Tuthill, Second Congregational Church; Pamela Earle, St. Stephen's; Angie Kelley and Pat Conland, St. Anthony's; and Lisa Koed, Unitarian First Parish.

Organizational promoters included Wayne Robbins, Rotary; Don Harrold, Masons; and Commander Sousa, Legion Post. Other bloodmobile promoters included Carol Riley, teachers; Cindy Bell, high school students; Mary Brennock and Al Odermatt, independents.

Two local businesses, Seavey Engineering and Webb-Norfolk deserve special recognition, according to bloodmobile chairman Odermatt. About half of all Seavey employees donated blood, which is the percentage of employees who regularly donate to the community bloodmobile. Thirteen pints were donated by the Seavey employees. Webb-Norfolk conducted a special drive, according to Odermatt, and increased their number of donors to 19. That is a 300 percent increase over previous donations.

Corinne Cahill again served as bloodmobile chairman. She was assisted by the Red Cross staff under the direction of head nurse Ruth Grimshaw, R.N.

Among the 25 volunteers who worked throughout the day were: receptionists Jeff Steele and Grace Joyce; and supervisors Barbara Dillon, canteen; Ozzie Ingram, typists; Carol Ciciotte, high school student escorts and temperatures; and Pamela Haase, Girl Scout babysitters.

Chairman Odermatt thanked the Unitarian First Parish for its use of the Parish House for all community bloodmobiles; Steve Wigmore, who once again raised the banner across the center of town, and all the merchants who displayed the bloodmobile posters.

"There are certain problems that are a part of every bloodmobile," Odermatt stated. "These are the even scheduling of appointments, the number of appointments that are not kept, the number of walk-ins and the uneveness of arrivals during the day."

The goal of the bloodmobile is to accept all donors regardless of the time of their arrival and to process them as quickly as possible.

The percentage of appointments that have not been kept has been a concern of some of the donor promoters, he added. That number ranges from 20 to 100 percent.

A special drive is being planned to promote additional potential donors, not only in the present, but additional groups.

If you want your group to become part of the Cohasset Tri-annual Community Bloodmobile, or wish to promote the drive by making telephone calls, contact Mr. Odermatt at 383-1283 or write him at 2 Todd Lane.

The next Community Bloodmobile will be held Tuesday, January 27.

Senior center news . . .

Chapter 324 of the Acts of 1985, National Health Referendum, passed by the Massachusetts Legislature and signed by Governor Dukakis in September of 1985, will be on the November 4, state ballot as Question #7. Question #7 asks:

"Shall the Commonwealth of Massachusetts urge the United States Congress to enact a national health program which:
-provides high quality comprehensive personal health care including preventive, curative and occupational health services; is universal in coverage, community controlled, rationally organized, equitably financed, with no out-of-pocket charges, is sensitive to the particular health needs of all, and is efficient in containing its cost; and whose yearly expenditure does not excced the proportion of the gross National Product spend on health care in the immediately preceding fiscal year?"

Although this is a non-binding referendum, it is important that it is approved by the voters of the Commonwealth on election day. We wish to send a message to the Congress of the United States that Massachusetts strongly supports a national health program.

Alert your friends and all members of the elderly network in your community to this important referendum on the November 4th, state ballot, and urge the seniors of the Commonwealth to vote "YES" on Question #7.

Noonan serves Cohasset . . .

to go far for some cocaine. It's tough for kids to make the decision not to try something. I don't use the term 'peer pressure.' Some kids simply have a harder time making up their minds not to try something."

Sgt. Noonan would like to see more drug and alcohol educational programs begin in the earlier grades. "By the time these kids reach the tenth and eleventh grades, it's too late. We should be starting to talk about these things as early as the third grade. And when the time comes, they will have the knowledge and the background to make the correct decision."

Noonan is the father of four, ranging in age from 16 to 8 years old. "And they're just as much trouble as every other kid in town," he said with a smile.

It takes a special woman, he said, to be married to a police officer. "I try not to take the job home with me," he said, "but people will stop you on the street and ask you why you issued this ticket, or wonder how this particular court case is going.

"And if I've just come home after a bad day, if I've seen a couple of bad accidents or something, I like to talk to my wife, Jackie."

A police officer in a small town such as Cohasset has to work a lot of overtime and details to compensate for the low salary. "It's a fact," Noonan stated. "You have to work a lot in order to raise a family on a police officer's salary. I worked my whole vacation - 12 to 14 hours a day. Most officers earn about $10,000 to $12,000 extra each year with all the overtime and details.

"We don't have summers," he continued. "For us, summer is triple time with the Music Circus, construction and detail overtime. It makes officers irritable and tired. And that's not good."

Regarding a solution, Sgt. Noonan said the ideal would be to have a 25-man department. Cohasset is currently down to a working crew of 15 uniformed officers.

"In other words," he explained, "there are two officers out on the street at night. And they're not guaranteed any backup. With six or seven gin mills in town, we have our share of problems to handle. We have rapes, murders, all the crimes you hear about in the city, but we don't have the manpower. Believe me, it's an uncomfortable position to answer a domestic call, knowing that ninety percent of the time, you'll have to go by yourself. That's very uncomfortable. You have to be a planner. Responding to a situation is a lot tougher when you are alone, and that frequently makes our job tougher than in a big city."

Sgt. Noonan admitted he would not want his children to follow in his professional footsteps.

"I really would want them to do something more financially lucrative," he answered.

Despite that admission, Noonan is "definitely" pleased with his career selection.

"It's all I've ever wanted to be. I must have really wanted it," he added. "I took that $5,000 pay cut to get here."

Joan Benoit dedicates new NDA track

By Jean Heaney
Special to the Mariner

Thursday, October 9, there was a gala celebration at Notre Dame Academy for the dedication of the much awaited track.

Present at the ceremony were Joan Benoit, winner of the Olympic Marathon and numerous Boston Marathoners — Will McDonough, well known Boston Globe columnist, and Father Michael Steele from the Archdiocesan office.

The dedication began with Notre Dame's Instrumental Ensemble, directed by Miss Jamie Bartlett, head of the Music Department, playing "Star Spangled Banner." This and countless blue helium-filled balloons everywhere added to the festive atmosphere of the occasion.

Will McDonough and Mrs. Anne Ridge were presented plaques by Sister Anne Monica Ruane, the principal of Notre Dame in recognition for all their hard work organizing for the track to be built.

Introduced as "Our angel here at NDA," Will McDonough rose and after giving a short speech introduced "A wonderful gal," Joan Benoit. Ms. Benoit, after receiving a standing ovation, went on to say, "I wish you God's speed and many fast times on the new track." Father Michael Steele then said a blessing for the success of the new track.

Joan Benoit cut the ribbon to open the new track.

At the track there was a relay race, which was run by some of the top runners at the school, such as Suzanne Jones, co-captain of the track team; Karen Keough of Weymouth, Eileen Malone of Scituate and Judi Marcelonis of Hanover.

This eight-lane track is one of the best in the area. It is 400 meters with a separate area for field events and two jumping pits. The field in the center, with underground sprinkler system is to be used for soccer and various other sports.

The money for this track was primarily raised at the "Evening of Stars" held last spring at the school. Organized by Mrs. Marie Hoy, Mrs. Ridge and Will McDonough, this gala evening included such stars as Doug Flutie, John Kennedy, Jr., Bob Lobel, Joan Benoit and K.C. Jones.

Jean Heaney is a junior at Notre Dame Academy.

New ad club formed for South Shore media

The newly formed South Shore Ad Club (SSAC) offers professionals from advertising agencies, media, printing and marketing directors an opportunity to meet and exchange ideas.

"A group of us got together to organize a club that will be good for networking, learning and should also be entertaining," suggested Steven V. Dubin, president of the newly formed club and marketing director for the 11 Mariner Newspapers.

More than 350 firms from Quincy to Plymouth and west to the Bridgewaters have been invited to participate. The first gathering of the SSAC is Oct. 29, 5:30-8 p.m.., at the Barnside Restaurant, located on Route 53, one mile north of the Hanover Mall, exit 13 off Route 3. Senior Citizens news. . .

From the Director: Medicare "DRG'S" - A New Medicare Reibursement Systems comes to Massachusetts.

Older consumers with Medicare insurance and those approaching the eligibility age for Medicare need to understand new changes in Medicare's hospital coverage. Medicare's system of "DRGs" which means Diagnosis Related Groups went into effect fall of 1985.

The classification system is aimed at reducing the cost of Medicare by eliminating unnecessary prolonged hospital stays. You are entitled to remain in the hospital for as long as you need hospital care. You cannot be forced to leave the hospital because "your Medicare coverage ran out." If you and your doctor should disagree on your date of discharge, you have the legal right to appeal the decision to discharge you. However, a denied appeal results in you paying the hospital charges after the discharge date established by the hospital.

Come and ask your questions of the experts October 23, at 1 p.m. in the Cohasset Senior Center, 3 North Main Street.

The speaker will be John Burke - Assistant Controller/Patient Accounts, M. Clare Delaney - Medical Records Service Director, and Ruth LeBlanc-Director of Social Services.

Seminar on "Safe Money"

Because of recent changes in the tax laws, many investors have been asking how these changes will effect their "safe money" investments. Dean Witter in conjunction with the Hingham and Cohasset Councils on Aging invites you to a "Safe Money" seminar for those who are interested in:

...Safety of principal and interest
...Reduction or elimination of federal, state and local taxes
...Reduction or eliminating of taxes on social security
...Guaranteed high yields
...Access to your funds

If you are paying more than your fair share of income tax on your savings, the time spent at this seminar should prove invaluable to you.

Place: Cohasset Council on Aging Senior Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, Ma 02025
Date & Time: October 30, 1986 at 1 p.m.
Quest Speaker: Jack Sharry, Vice President/ Regional Coordinator

Seating is limited, for reservations please call Kathy Bryanton in Cohasset at 383-9112 or call Sandy Kent in Hingham at 749-0582. Interested friends and family are welcome.

Monthly Blood Pressure Check-Up - sponsored by the Social Service League will be held Thursday, October 16, at the First Parish House 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

2. Thursday, October 23rd, at 60 Elm Street (Housing) 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.
3. Thursday, November 13th, at the Senior Center 11:30 to 12:30 p.m.
4. Thursday, November 20th, at the First Parish House 11 a.m.

Glaucoma Screening - There will be a free Glaucoma & Cataract Screening at the Eye Cushing Care Assn. on Thursday, November 13, at 1 to 3 p.m. Call the Senior Center for an appointment & transportation- 383-9112.

Walking Club News - The Cohasset Council on Aging Walking Club - "Cohasset Strutters" have a very exciting Fall schedule! October & November walks include - Wompatuck, Nantasket, Bare Cove, South Shore Natural Science Center. Cheers for Jane Tilden, Ann Leonard, Shirley Laidlaw & Lillian Lincoln for being GREAT LEADERS!

What a fine job you all do ... The walking club meets Tuesdays through Fridays at 9 a.m. in the Senior Center. New people can join on any of those days.

Tax bills due Nov. 1

The tax bills are in the mail and are due by Nov. 1.

The state department of revenue authorized the assessors to issue estimated tax bills for the first half of fiscal 1987.

When the revaluation of all properties is completed, actual tax bills will be issued in the spring which will reflect any necessary adjustments.

The estimated tax is not an estimate of one half of the fiscal 1987 actual tax. It relates to fiscal year 1986.

Exemptions that were granted last year are deducted on the estimated bills for veterans (clause 22), widows (17c), blind (37), over 70 (41b) and tax deferrals (41a).

Abatements which were granted in fiscal year 1986 will also be reflected. Bills are based on the abated amount.

There will be no applications for abatement for overvaluation accepted on estimated bills.

A variety of topics at South Shore Art Center

Enjoy an evening at the South Shore Art Center, beginning with the opening of an exhibit of watercolors by artist Dassie Abelson.

October 19 is the evening for the annual meeting for the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road. The Abelson opening on that Sunday is from 5 to 7 p.m. and the annual meeting/pot luck supper will begin immediately following the opening. Reservations may be made by calling the Center, 383-9548.

The annual meeting offers a pleasant atmosphere to meet and talk with fellow members and the board of directors. During the meeting a slide presentation of past year's activities and a report on the progress of the Center's new building will be presented

The past year has witnessed many changes at the Center. As a new year approaches the members can look forward to the opening of a new, grander facility designed specifically for the Center. The new facility is expected to be completed sometime in 1987.

Other changes have occurred in the Center's instructional program for young artists. By scheduling its young artist courses in other communities, the Center has brought art out to the communities and has facilitated the ease with which students can get to the classes.

The physical growth of the Center has paralleled its growth as a major vehicle for the expressio of the visual arts on the South Shore. It has become recognized as a major force in the expansion of the arts to the South Shore Communities. Its influence is quite visible in the quality of the art created by its member artists and by the exhibits hung in the invitational gallery.

The annual meeting offers the chance to view the growth of the Center. Members are invited to bring guests to the meeting; however only current members are permitted to vote on Center business.

Explore the Treasures of the Holy Land at Metropolitan Museum of Art on a tour sponsored by the South Shore Art Center.

The New York City weekend, Nov. 15-16, will take the group to the Metropolitan to view the Treasures of the Holy Land from the Isreal Museum, the first major exhibit of ancient art to travel abroad. The exhibit includes a Dead Sea scroll and the Bethsheba to see "In Pursuit of Beauty", a 200-work collection reflecting Americans and the Aesthetic Movement.

The two-day tour including transportation by motorcoach, accomodations at the St. Moritz Hotel on Central Park South, evening theater reservations for "Social Security", a Mike Nichols comedy and museum admissions is $224 per person based on double occupancy. The cost also includes a tax-deductible donation to the Center.

Visitors will also have an opportunity to spend time at the Guggenheim Museum viewing the Masters of the Modern Art and a special Exxon international exhibit of "10 Modern French Painters" and sculpture by British artist Richard Long.

Reservations may be called into Cerel's Travel Center, 653-2400.

Israel artist exhibit

Born and educated in Israel and now a successful artist, Dassie Abelson will have a one-person exhibit at the South Shore Art Center.

Her watercolors will hang in the Center's invitational gallery, 103 Ripley Road, from October 14 through November 10. An opening reception will be held Sunday, October 19 from 5 to 7 p.m., with the Center's annual meeting scheduled to begin immediately following the reception.

Abelson is most noted for her colorful expressive watercolors painted primarily out-of-doors. Her subjects include landscapes, cityscapes and flowers.

Her exhibit is open to the public Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Two October workshops

Two special workshops are on tap for the month of October at the South Shore Art Center.

The workshops, at the Center, 103 Ripley Road offers participants an intensive time period to develop skills.

Artist Rosalind Farbush will teach a painting workshop Saturday, Oct. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and again Saturday, October 25.

Photographer John Droege will conduct a two-session photo field trip and critique Saturday, October 18 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Saturday, October 25 from 2 to 4 p.m. Both workshops require advanced registration.

In Farbush's workshop participants will concentrate on developing painting skills in a free-flowing atmosphere. If the weather permits participants will meet outside otherwise the group will work in the studio. The workshop is designed for intermediate or advanced students.

Both of these workshops offer a chance to spend a day developing a skill. For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

The Unification Church: Some tactics exposed

Throughout its short history, the Unification Church has aroused strong emotions both among its adherents and among its detractors. Founded by a Korean businessman named Sun Ming Moon (hence the sobriquet "Moonie"), the church gained notoriety in the 1970's when large numbers of young Americans, their spiritual needs unmet in a troubled time, joined Moon's flock—usually then forsaking family, friends, conventional religion, and conventional work. Whatever value membership in the Unification Church may entail, it has also entailed a great deal of pain for a great many families.

Since Moon's imprisonment on federal tax charges in the early 1980's (Moon asserts a conspiracy against him) the Church has maintained a low profile. But it is still very much around, and while there may be fewer kids peddling flowers in airports, the economic power and political influence of the church are, according to my sources, stronger than ever.

As we move into the late eighties, the plan of the Unification Church seems to be to infiltrate mainstream America, particularly mainstream conservatism in America, using a variety of clandestine tactics. A strong word "clandestine," and in using it I mean that as the Church creates fronts and subsidiaries, and as it associates with groups that previously had no Unification connection, it deliberately conceals its identity, and that of its operatives, from outsiders. This is the same tactic of deceit that the Communists and many other unpopular fringe groups have used over the years.

A recent episode, one which except for a single Associated Press dispatch was entirely missed by the media, will illustrate the modus operandi I am talking about. On September 26 an organization called the "International Clergy and Laity United in Shared Action" or "ICUSA" held an awards banquet at the Marriott Inn in Burlington. Listed as sponsors of that event were 37 obscure but legitimate-sounding organizations with names such as the "Haitian Association of Rhode Island" and "Harvest Time Chapel, Inc." of Connecticut.

Honorees at the September 26 event were Joseph P. Kennedy, II; James Roosevelt, Jr.; Dr. Ralph Abernathy; Liz Walker and Jack Williams of WBZ-T.V.; and 35 lesser known individuals. The purpose of the event, as explained to me by Job Matuzow, who doubled as a sponsor and an award recipient, was to honor the public service of unknown individuals side by side that of more celebrated people such as Kennedy, Roosevelt, Abernathy, Walker, and Williams. That is a purpose most fair-minded people would consider noble.

But a closer look reveals some serious deception, First, there is nothing "international" about the "International Clergy and Laity United in Shared Action." It is an arm of the Unification Church in Boston; calling its listed telephone number puts one through to Rev. Richard Buessing who is the current head of the Unification Church in New England. The assertion, then, that ICUSA is some sort of ecumenical organization is false.

Secondly, of the approximately half of the 37 organizations sponsoring the September 26 banquet that my sources and I have been able to identify, all are somehow linked to the Unification Church. Several are either direct Unification Church subsidiaries, or they are run by Church members, or they are run by people in the employ of the Church. The rest that we have been able to identify are small, storefront black churches who accept the charity of the Unification Church. The assertion, then, that the sponsors of the September 26 banquet are independent of the Unification Church is false.

Thirdly, and here we arrive at the heart of the matter, the names of Jim Roosevelt, Jack Williams, and Liz Walker were used without their permission and without their being informed that the Unification Church was the real sponsor of the September 26 banquet. Jim Roosevelt was invited to be an honoree not by the Unification Church or by its subsidiary ICUSA, but by the minister of a Roxbury church who unbeknownst to Roosevelt is in the employ of the Unification Church. Roosevelt, who is one of the brighter politicians you will ever meet, had already begun to suspect the "Moonies" of trying to use his name before I called to ask him about the matter. He had therefore given no definite answer to his invitation. Despite this, ICUSA printed a banquet announcement listing him not only as an award recipient but as an award presenter.

Joe Kennedy's people had no idea of ICUSA's "Moonie" connection until I brought it to the attention of a member of the Kennedy family. When he learned the truth, Kennedy, who had accepted the invitation in good faith, developed a "scheduling conflict," and did not attend the banquet.

Liz Walker and Jack Williams also did not attend. Nevertheless, their names were featured prominently in the evening's program as award recipients. Ralph Abernathy did attend and presented a number of the awards. At this writing I have not been able to learn if he had prior knowledge of the Unification connection. Since none of the others did, I presume he did not.

What appears to be going on here is an attempt by the Unification Church to polish up its public image by associating itself with mainline celebrities. That's something plenty of beer companies, politicians, and some churches do all the time. Where it must here be judged unethical is, first, in the unauthorized use of the names and reputations of people like Jim Roosevelt, Liz Walker, and Jack Williams. Secondly, it is obviously unethical when potential award recipients are not informed that the Unification Church is behind the giving of the awards.

Finally, and rather more profoundly, the Unification Church exploits the small black churches that in effect are used as fronts. With donations of food and clothing the Unification Church ingratiates itself with these struggling churches and poor congregations. When the pastor of such a church, one who has accepted the charity of the Unification Church, is then asked to approach a celebrity on behalf of the Unification Church, his status is both beholden and unequal. He is probably not going to say no to the benefactor of his congregation.

The larger picture is a Unification Church that economically is a far cry from young dropouts selling flowers at airports. The Church now has a number of lucrative operations — its fishing operation in Gloucester is one — that depends on volunteer labor. The gains gotten from these operations (they are not profits in a legal sense) are now being invested in a variety of moderate to extreme right-wing and anti-communist organizations. Some of these organizations are both moderate and legitimate, but as they come to depend on the Unification Church for financial support they run the same risk of co-optation as the poor black churches alluded to above. (The "Moonie" infiltration of conservative organizations will be detailed in another column.)

One Unification-connected organization worth mentioning here is the "East Coast Conservative Political Action Committee," which operates under the aegis of one Ted Temple out of a post office box in Marlborough, and has as one of its "special projects" the defeat of the above-named Joe Kennedy. While the Unification Church cannot be directly linked to Temple's efforts to raise funds to defeat Kennedy, the name of Ted Temple appears on a number of Unification Church documents in my possession. The possibility thus is raised that the use of Kennedy's name in connection with the September 26 awards banquet was a rather two-faced attempt by the Unification Church to sidle up to a celebrity — Kennedy — whose politics it really despises.

"Two-faced" is how I would characterize today's Unification Church as I have come to understand it from sources who understand it better than I do. There is on the one hand some genuine charitable work being done by some genuinely charitable church members and associates. It is work — food for the homeless, clothing for the poor — that you and I may find ourselves too busy to do. The Unification Church deserves praise for this good work.

But nearly always there is the concealed agenda. There is the use of charity recipients as fronts and go-betweens. There is the dissembling approach to celebrities and the unauthorized use of their names. There is the use of willing but troubled souls who join the Church and who end up producing material wealth the return of which they will never see. There is the infiltration of the conservative movement which, like the approach to celebrities, is undertaken clandestinely and with part of the truth always withheld.

This reporter is not personally hostile to alternative religions, in fact he tends to be sympathetic to them, remembering as he does that nearly all orthodox religions were once oppressed "alternatives." But in the case of the Unification Church he must report that he sees more to be concerned about than to praise.

FROM THE GARDEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Summer is gone and here comes the Hunters Moon

Now comes the Hunter's Moon, the full moon of October. Autumn's messages are written in a frosted spider web at dawn, the milkweed floss drifting along in the early morning mist and the departing geese, honking their way South.

The woodchucks are so fat they waddle, the squirrels are out in greater numbers than ever and acorns in great supply, one theory being that the gypsy moths of a few years ago ruined so many oaks that Mother Nature is compensating this fall.

Even though the acorns are so bountiful, it doesn't seem to satisfy the squirrels, for they greedily forage in the bird feeders the minute they are hung out. What with them and the blue jays, it seems wise to delay feeding the birds for a few more weeks.

Another early sign of winter usually appears on a cool October morning when the temperature dips below freezing. Plants are blackened and the farmer and gardener is willing to put away his hoe and call it quits until May. But before you put away your trowel, spring bulbs should be planted. Tulips and jonquils must grow roots before they can bloom in the spring and to do this, need a cool period of at least 10 weeks. Botanists have learned that a chemical change must be induced by chilling, just as winter buds must form on trees.

There are those who blush with shame at the very thought that someone other than family might dare to peek inside their refrigerator. Quite some time ago I visited Franey Way to view her plants growing under lights in her basement and she told me how her family has grown accustomed to finding flower pots hidden amongst the leftovers. I, for one, can't wait to get to the nearest garden center to get some hyacinth bulbs to try her way of growing these fragrant pastel blossoms, Franey advised getting the largest bulbs you can find at this time of year, planting them in four or five inch pots, with moist, not soggy, soil. Wrap loosely in a plastic bag and set in the back of your fridge for six to eight weeks. Check and if you can see roots at the bottom of the pot, bring it out into good light in an east or west window. What a wonderful holiday gift!

The Indians named it the Hunter's Moon because the light of this full moon allowed for night hunting of the various creatures—foxes, pheasants and others that were lured into the freshly cut fields to feed on grain missed by the gleaners. At dusk and midnight, or when the sun goes down, the owls can be heard and what an eerie noise the screech owls make. The great-horned owls mate in January and Helen and George Keeler had the unusual experience of seeing two of them fly off their roof one dark night.

Formidable and powerful, these owls are most active at dusk and on moonlit nights, but may be heard hooting at times at midnight in the "dark of the moon." Spooky indeed, in keeping with this season of Halloween.

Warm, west winds returned last week to say goodbye 'til next summer and many of us gloried in the little respite from the chill northeast winds that taunted us all this summer, but for a group of birders led by Beverly Litchfield, the weather was all wrong.

Few birds were out on such a windy day as the women toured the Glades in North Scituate and the beaches. The birds they did see included a few warblers sheltered in a hollow, a common loon and two yellow-bellied sapsuckers. The latter is not seen very often along the migration route, but Bev pointed out on some of the trees the holes left as sapsuckers hunt for insects. It is said that one of their favorite pastimes is to tap on telephone wires and then apparently listen to the sound of the vibration.

One of the glories of fall is Indian Summer, so called by the Indians who are said to have observed of these pleasant days that "they always had a second summer of nine days just after the first frost and before winter set in." October is the time to rescue your geraniums before the frost destroys them. There are different ways of overwintering these plants Some take cuttings, some keep them growing indoors on a sunny window sill. You can also dig up the geraniums and store them in their pots if you have a cool, humid storage area such as a basement.

In the spring, prune back to the main stem and replant. Some clever gardners like Clare Ashley casually hang them by their stems from a rafter in the cellar and tho they look dead as the proverbial doornail, come back to life when repotted in the spring.

Also trekking through the Glades and along the shores during this migratory season, were birders led by John Hassett. A hobby he began when he was a boy, Hassett knows the favorite haunts of the birds he has grown to know so well. A bald eagle was seen in North Scituate at Mushqueschicut Pond and a large flock of Snow Geese obligingly flew right over the Audubon headquarters in Marshfield Hills as they flew South.

Greater Snow Geese are rarely seen in New England, as they apparently fly over in their migrations without stopping between the St. Lawrence River in Canada and Cheasapeake Bay, flying silently and very high, perhaps at night. Only occasionally do flocks come down, usually in stormy or foggy weather (which it was the last week in Sept.) on our lakes or seashore. Hassett also tells of other migrants not often seen in this area: two Caspian terns in Humarock. Reported at Scituate Harbor were three peregrine falcons.

Our houseplants need less water now that the days are growning shorter. Slower growth means less photosynthesis, so let up on feeding, except those flowering plants such as African violets and begonias. Give plants that need the most light as much sun as possible. Even shade lovers can tolerate weak fall sunshine.

Supplement with artifical light, for plants are in a state of shock, after having spent the summer and fall in the garden or on the porch, thriving on warm days, cool nights, sun and shade. They sang in the rain and enjoyed a gently daily morning dew, while the earth below provided plenty of drainage. Cold drafts, hot radiators and sunlight magnified through windows dry out plants used to summer and greenhouse humidity.

FOLIAGE TRIP TO STONE ESTATE

When the sky is an azure blue and the leaves red and gold, steal away for a day in the country.

Though tourists come from far and wide to view our fall foliage spectacle, all too often in our daily flurry we tend to settle for a quick glance out the car window as we hurry on our way.

The day chosen by the Seaside Gardners for their day trip began with thunder, lightning and a quick flick of a tornado along our shorefront as members of the Marshfield group, undaunted, left at 9 a.m. in driving rains.

Our destination for the first program of the season was Great Hill Farm, the Stone family estate in Marion. We shed our raingear and turned off the windshield wipers, for as we headed west, the skies cleared.

For some of us, the country we drove through as we turned on to Rte. 44 in Plymouth was alien territory. Cranberry bogs where crimson berries were being harvested, alternated with scrub pines, goldenrod and sandy lanes. Antique capes and weathered barns dotted the wayside and sometimes, through the autumn trees, ponds ringed with boarded-up summer cottages were glimpsed. Marge Clark, the club's program director, had spent hours planning our jaunt and, having summered in Wareham since early childhood, knew every turn and twist of the road.

She pointed out the Ansel Gurney House, a restaurant and gift shop in an old colonial setting, complete with herb gardens. Also, the former iron foundry in Carver, now remodelled by Mary Cunningham, the owner, into a popular restaurant called the Crane Brook Tea Room. We browsed through the Gurney House and lunched at the tea room on our way home.

As Buzzards Bay came into view, we drove past the massive gate and stone pillars onto the grounds of the Stone Estate sprawled over a thousand acres and known as Great Hill Farm. Overlooking the Bay and Cape Cod Canal jutting out on a secluded point of land was the manor house of the Stone family. The paved road leading through the vast lawns carefully tended by Ed. Brown, manager of the estate since 1960, were posted with signs pointing to the greenhouses open to the public from 8 to 4 p.m. daily, except weekends.

Outside the 15 greenhouses were beds of bright yellow marigolds bordered by fragrant verbena and after leaving the nearby parking lot, we entered the office where Chip Brown (no relation to Ed), was waiting to show us around.

Assisting in caring for the myriad plants was Kelly Ferreira, kept busy at the cash register when many club members bought plants in the retail greenhouse.

Anyone who has sseen the golden Acacia trees on loan to the annual New England Flower Show, knows of their beauty. The collection is in bloom from February to May in this, their home.

The ribbons, medals and silver trophies and bowls on display in a large cabinet in the office are for the Acacias and orchids grown in one of the greenhouses. There is a wide variety of house plants, from the common ivy to an assortment of gesneriads.

Chip has only been at the Farm for six weeks, is self-taught and had his first garden when he was three. He is president of the Southern New England Chapter of the Fern Society and a member of the Wildflower Society.

Only 37, he never flinched at the barrage of questions directed his way by the fascinated Seaside Gardeners.

He is initiating a new program, starting unusual perennials from seed such as the columbine called "Music", delphiniums so low that they need not be staked and from the Minaret series, Russell's lupine.

Greenhouses originally planned as a private collection, now provide an opportunity for plant lovers to view an exciting array and to add unusual plants to their own.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

Constitutional amendment won't resolve issues

When I started looking through the "Massachusetts Information for Voters" booklet I received by mail last week, I envied Pat Robertson for the first time in my life. Mr. Robertson has studied law as well as religion.

Such a dual education could help when considering the two proposed amendments to the state constitution that will appear as ballot questions Nov. 4.

Question one asks for "Regulating or prohibiting abortion." A yes vote would allow the state legislature to regulate or prohibit abortion or the funding of abortion, to the extent permitted by the U.S. Constitution.

If the U.S. Supreme Court reversed itself, for instance, a yes vote would give the Massachusetts legislature the option to prohibit abortions.

Regardless of what the U.S. government decides, a yes vote will give the Massachusetts legislature immediate power to eliminate public funding for abortion, prohibit private insurance coverage and regulate abortion facilities and services.

In summary, a yes vote is "pro-life;" a no vote is "pro-choice."

Question two asks for "government aid to non-public schools and students." A yes vote would change the state constitution to allow governments to aid non-public schools and students to the extent allowed by the U.S. Constitution.

A no vote would keep the current restrictions.

With questions like this before the voters, clergy of all varieties must sometimes long for legal training. And perhaps law-makers could benefit from a little theological background.

I am troubled by the business of amending constitutions. I feel that constitutions should be relatively inviolate, that changes should be made with the utmost care, and only then when there is overwhelming need and overwhelming support.

I can think of few questions over which there is less consensus than abortion and aid to private schools.

Moreover, we do ourselves injustice when personal decisions are forced into the political arena.

It's easy to say, for instance, that the "Catholic position" is to be against abortion and for aid to private schools.

Likewise, Unitarian-Universalist General Assemblies have several times gone on record as supporting freedom of choice and opposing aid to private schools. Other religious organizations have also taken positions on one side or the other.

But when you talk to the people, you hear another story.

I know many Catholics who are pro-choice. Unfortunately few of them express themselves openly.

I also know many from my church who are disturbed about the increasing number of abortions, and some who are zealously anti-abortion.

Recently an organization called "Unitarian-Universalists Seeking Alternatives to Abortion" has been formed. Though I remain strongly pro-choice, I have supported them and written for them, because I support their right to their opinion and to be heard within my church.

Anyhow, things just aren't as black and white as yes or no votes. It is a sad commentary on the current state of society that we force ourselves, increasingly, to make political decisions on virtually every aspect of life.

I devoted a column recently to Aleksandr Sozhenitsyn's address to Harvard in 1978. In it he said, "Whenever the tissue of life is woven of legalistic relationships, this creates an atmosphere of spiritual mediocrity that paralyzes man's noblest impulses."

Whether these constitutional amendments pass or fail will do little to invigorate those noblest impulses.

They also do nothing to initiate a dialogue wherein people of different views might come together in a spirit of compassion. We need to listen and understand, not just defend long-held positions.

So many religious questions seem to be heading toward political resolution. Doesn't this point to a failure of religious institutions to fill their members with love as well as doctrine, humility as well as conviction?

While I have my own beliefs, and have gone over them again and again, the substance here is not how I shall vote. Nor am I particularly interested in changing the votes of others.

But I am concerned that people be allowed to live their lives by the dictates of their own consciences without having to break the law to do it.

The fact that these questions have so many implications and subtleties demonstrates why deciding them by constitutional amendment is both bad ethics and bad politics.

Constitutional amendments are a blunt and dangerous way of making social policy, and ultimately why I shall vote no on both issues.

Reader responds to drug article

To the Editor:

In regards to the article "What I know about Drugs" by Rev. Darrell Berger (Forum, Sept. 28, Nearly Native column), I must respond especially to his paragraph written about hallucinogenic drugs.

He said these drugs could actually "help civilization" if people would "respect" them. Then he suggests how ...

"There should be retreats where people can take them under spiritual discipline."

Does he really believe that LSD, mescaline and peyote can be used in a controlled, safe manner as opposed to his classmate who jumped out the window?

I seriously question his rationalization and authority on drugs. Perhaps he could explain what he means by "helpful to civilization" and "spiritual discipline," a direct contradiction to his previous examples.

Perhaps we should reflect on the tragic death of the daughter of Art Linkletter, who also committed suicide while experiencing an unexpected flashback from a dose of LSD.

Perhaps I can reflect on the painful memory of a niece who spent several unnecessary years in Hell, when someone thoughtless distributed the mind-altering LSD into the punch at her office Christmas party.

This tragedy not only destroyed her, but deeply affected her grandmother, mother, husband, daughter and her unborn child.

It was a nightmare we all had to live with unpleasantly.

In these dreary days of deaths due to drugs, I hardly feel that we need our spiritual leaders condoning and suggesting the use of drugs under the guise of "spiritual discipline" ... whatever that suggests.

Again, I wonder, is he serious, or is this a "spoof" written as a teenager thinks.

Personally, I find it difficult to joke about drugs. Previously I've read Rev. Berger's columns and enjoyed them; however, this one really bothered me and he owes us an explanation, please.

Sincerely seeking understanding.

Help is available in the area for abused women

By Valérie Kroon
Mariner Correpondent

Why do women remain in abusive environments? Although reasons may vary, usually it is a combination of intimidation, fear, and hope for change — hope for a better tomorrow.

But a better tomorrow will probably never come for as long as the victim remains with the abuser, stated Marilyn Lowrey, LICSW, at last week's Women to Women talk at Plimoth Plantation.

Sponsored by the Jordan Hospital Health Institute, the evening featured three speakers from the South Shore Women's Center in Plymouth.

Lowrey spoke on the dynamics involved in adult female abuse, while advocate counselor Joan Stiles talked about the support systems available to victims. Rape crisis counselor Pat Ollinger discussed the rape victim, services offered, and the difficulties involved in prosecution of the perpetrator.

The most alarming messages of the evening were the statistics. One act of domestic violence occurs every 18 seconds in the United States, Lowrey said. And more of our nation's police are injured or killed when responding to domestic violence calls.

Traditionally, abuse of a partner was viewed as a private matter and was culturally condoned by looking the other way. "Our accepted views were that it was man's nature to take and women's nature to submit," Lowrey stated.

But after the 209A Abuse Prevention Act passed in 1978, victims could go to court and obtain a restraining order against the abuser. No attorney is needed and there is no fee.

Last year, 19,000 victims filed 209A abuse prevention petitions in Massachusetts, Joan Stiles said. A restraining order is granted for five days. During that time, the abuser must appear before the court. The process, however, is not a criminal procedure and there is no charge of a criminal offense.

Violation of the order to appear in court is a criminal offense, Stiles continued. Often, women filing 209A are in more danger before the orders are served, she said, and this is when the center's Safe Home Program is utilized.

Safe Home provides crisis shelter when the woman and her family require a safe environment. The homes are provided by a network of volunteers in the community.

Referring to the recent Somerville death of a battered wife who was told by Judge Heffernan to stop wasting the taxpayers' money, Stiles said: "Unfortunately, that case is almost typical—much more than any one of us would like to believe."

Always available to assist battered women, the South Shore Women's Center has a 24-hour hot line. It is staffed by volunteers when the office is closed, with a staff person on Back-up for crisis situation. The staff will enlist the services of police to get the women and her children out of the home, and they'll assist her through court proceedings to obtain a 209A restraining order.

Also offered are short-term "practical" counseling, and housing and welfare advocacy. There is a support group for women victims and an anger control group for male abusers.

But "the most important piece" are the volunteer community educators, Stiles said, "To change community attitudes towards the victims."

The center trains volunteers to provide community educators in the schools. A new program this year will train volunteers for court advocacy for victims. The staff also instructs police recruits at the police academy.

"Female abuse will continue so long as society turns its head; but there is now a movement to end violence against women," Stiles said,

Rape is also "a crime of violence — not of passion," rape counselor Pat Ollinger reported.

Ollinger said that the common belief is, "Rape doesn't happen in my town." Yet, in the 18 months Ollinger has been on staff, she has serviced 72 rape victims from the south half of Plymouth County.

Ollinger said that 60 to 75 percent of rape cases are those of "acquaintance rape," and that most are planned and indoors in a safe environment.

Although one woman in the U.S. is raped every three minutes, Ollinger acknowledged that prosecuting the perpetrator "can be a long and emotionally draining process. Of every 100 rape occurences, only ten get reported, only three of those ten go to trial, and there will be only one conviction.

Locally, there are two rape crisis centers in Brockton and Plymouth which offer counseling, advocacy, and support groups. The Department of Social Services offices offer groups for incest victims, perpetrators, and families.

It is difficult to stop female abuse when "violence is culturally condoned," Marilyn Lowrey said. "Violence is a means to deal with frustration and stress."

The abuser usually has low self-esteem, sets unrealistic goals and expectations, has difficutly expressing personal needs, is dependent on the relationship, and exhibits extreme jealousy and a need for complete control, Lowrey reported.

"Battering is a controlling act."

The victim is usually frustrated and depressed, feels alone and powerless, is very dependent on her mate, and has low self-esteem. She comes to accept the battering as "normal," Lowrey said, and she tends to withdraw into isolation which leaves her with no special supports.

The crux of the problem lies in the woman's feeling powerless to leave and her living with the hope that her mate will change.

Community education is the key to solving the problem of female abuse, Lowrey said — "An awareness and knowing you don't have to put up with it."

Although only a small percentage of battered women seek help, Lowrey said that an abused women is not weak. "It takes a lot of strength to stay in an abusive situation."

The Jordan Hospital's Women to Women Series is held Tuesday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m. in the Orientation Theatre at Pilgrim Plantation. The talks are open to anyone in the community, and information on speaker and topics can be obtained calling Rosemary Carroll or Kate Putney at 746-2000.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Some pumpkins are greater than others

"According to Edmund Burke," the Dragon mused, "superstition is the religion of feeble minds."

"Oh, I don't know," Skid countered. "I've always considered it bad luck to fall out of a window on Friday the Thirteenth."

"Ignore Daddy," Breida sniffed. "He's just annoyed because Ralph and I want to go to New Hampshire to buy a pumpkin."

"And with good reason," the Dragon roared. "Massachusetts agriculture is the finest in the nation. And you can buy perfectly good pumpkins right here on the South Shore."

Breida shook her head. "Perfectly good won't cut it. I want the quintessential pumpkin. The pumpkin without peer or parallel. I want the Great Pumpkin."

Skip looked shocked. "That's blasphemy. Everybody knows that there's only one Great Pumpkin and Charlie Brown has him. And you can't buy the Great Pumpkin, because he has to be in a pumpkin patch on Halloween. Looking sincere."

"It's not blasphemy," the Dragon objected. "It's superstition. Worse than that, it's downright unpatriotic. If there was such a thing as a Great Pumpkin he certainly wouldn't grow in New Hampshire. you'd find him right here participating in the Massachusetts success story. And he wouldn't even be the Great Pumpkin. He'd be the Spirit of Massachusetts."

Breida sighed. "Oh, Daddy. It's really touching that you're so loyal. But since you like quotations so much, I think I'll paraphrase George Bernard Shaw and remind you that patriotism is the belief that this state is superior to all other states because you were born in it."

"Not at all," the Dragon objected. "I would be loyal to my native state whether I was born in it or not."

We pondered this remark in silence.

"I'm not going to touch that one," Breida finally stated. "But I do feel I have an inalienable right to seek out the perfect pumpkin and to travel however far it may take to find it.

"Just because Daddy thinks nothing is any good unless it comes from Massachusetts I shouldn't be limited in my quest. If he'd been around during King Arthur's day, he probably would have told Sir Galahad that he could buy a perfectly good Grail at Woolworth's in Cohasset. Or at the Hanover Mall."

"And he could," the Dragon agreed. "And with a lot less difficulty."

A few days later Breida rode home in triumph with the perfect pumpkin.

"This," she proclaimed, "is the Great Pumpkin. We found him in a pumpkin patch in New Hampshire. Looking sincere. We had two flat tires,; we spent a fortune on gas; we got lost three times; we got stopped at a roadblock as soon as we crossed back into Massachusetts—but it was worth it. Is he, or is he not the perfect pumpkin? I'll put him on the front steps and drive all our neighbors made with jealousy. After all, what's the use of having found perfection if you can't use it to make your friends feel rotten?"

She installed the pumpkin on the porch amid general rejoicing, then settled back to wait for compliments.

The first person to mention the pumpkin was her brother Larry.

"Hey," he commented as he entered the front door, "did you know there's a pumpkin on our front porch? All squashed to heck.

Sort of looks like it fell out a window on Friday the Thirteenth."

'Common Ground' author discusses busing climate

By Peggy Beals
FROM THE bookshelf

It has won almost every literary award possible. It received enthusiastic praise from objective critics. This phenomenon is J. Anthony Lukas' Common Ground. Local readers had the pleasure of hearing him discuss it recently, when he and James Carroll shared the platform at the fall's first Third Thursday lecture, sponsored by Westwinds Bookshop in Duxbury.

The ground is Charlestown, during the turbulent 60s and busing. It is still a tender subject. Lukas told of an autograph session in Cambridge, and of his apprehension when he spotted in the line a large, burly man, who was not carrying a copy of the book, for an autograph. He decided it was a furious longshoreman from Charlestown, come to punch him right in the nose. The man came up to the table, and stuck out a huge hand to Lukas.

"Hi, I'm Bob Parker (Spenser's creator). I just want to shake your hand!" In a review, Parker has said of the book, "To say it's about busing in Boston is to say that Moby Dick is about whaling in New Bedford."

Lukas focuses on three families whose lives collide in the cockpit of Charlestown, and how they got there. "Do you have to take everybody back to the 18th century?" asked his editor, dismayed at the pace and length of the book. Lukas' instinct nurtured by years as an actor, and journalist for the N.Y. Times, was right. The result, seven years in the writing, over 600 pages fat, reads like an engrossing novel, the more vivid because some of the characters are so familiar: Kevin White, Ted Kennedy, Louise Day Hicks.

He talked of the suspense as he researched his families, the Divers from Lexington, the McGoffs of Boston and the Twymons, a black family. He struck out with the Twymons, until the mother chanced to mention Magnolia, who lived in the area and might know something. Magnolia could only contribute a story told her by a Fanny Walker, aged 108. It verged on fiction, until Lukas traced this slim lead to Georgia and, he says with an elated grin, in the most exciting event of his lively career, he found the records and the site Magnolia spoke of.

Lukas found, as many authors do, that research is so fascinating he plans to base his next book on history.

In contrast to the intense, enthusiastic Lukas, James Carroll, author of Mortal Friends, Madonna Red, and now Supply of Heroes, spoke softly, diffidently, almost shy, although Robert Hale had introduced him in someone's words as "the most beguiling man" that a person had ever listened to.

Hale, proprietor of Westwinds, first presented Carroll on a platform with May Sarton and Erma Bombeck. Predictably, Erma wiped out the competition, leaving Miss Sarton hissing, "Who is this Erma Bombeck?" Carroll survived the experience, moving from his editor's early description of "a knock-out/young writer" to become an established best seller.

He is a tall, handsome Irish American. "The advantage of being Irish American," he says, "is you always know who your first enemy is, the English." They are in his current book, which Hale says "has two great loves stories, history, suspense, everything!"

Carroll read a portion of the book, a battle scene so deeply moving that one of the audience hoped he would read it himself on tape for those who can't read. Carroll's wife, author Alexandra Marshall, describes him as "a writer of anti-war novels." The son of a general, he has passionate feelings about war, its futility, its unconscionable waste.

It is obvious his first enemy isn't the English, but war. He traces much of the worlds' present troubles, and World War II, right back to the first world war, when, ironically even as the Irish were rebelling on Easter Sunday, 1916, as many as 100,000 Irishmen were in British uniform fighting in France.

Despite the above, he and Hale agree that Supply of Heroes is not totally gloomy, but excellent entertainment.

Carroll told how after the Bombeck talk, a woman berated her: "You call yourself a housewife, but you're not! You're famous, you travel, what do you know about being a housewife?" The audience got very quiet. You could feel the tide turning against Erma. After a long pause, she responded, "I knew I shouldn't have worn the ultrasuede." And Miss Sarton hissed, "What the heck is ultrasuede?"

Third Thursdays are now meeting in the First Parish Church hall in Duxbury at 10:30 a.m. for refreshments, then the speakers. The hall was full for these speakers. Call the bookshop for ticket information.

FROM THE KITCHEN by JOAN PINKHAM

Several historical culinary delights in the making

To our Puritan forefathers, eating was nothing but a necessity. Dawdling at the table was considered time wasted; enjoying one's food was purely self-indulgent.

Like so many of today's busy people, the Pilgrim would have headed for the nearest fast food restaurant if there had been one at Plymouth Rock, munching on a hamburger and hurrying back to resume his chores.

Speed in eating is in the American tradition: in effect, today's generation seems to do everything on the run and that's when recipes such as Peg Bracken's come in handy.

A century later, gluttony reigned supreme in colonial Boston. In 1751 the Boston Evening Post published the earliest-known chowder recipe in America. At a recent press party, Chef Stephen Black of the Mass. Bay Co. Restaurant thought it appropriate to serve this chowder at the reopening of the award-winning restaurant. Chef Black recreated the 18th century version which then began with "First lay fome onions to keep the Pork from burning, Becaufe in Chouder there can be no turning:" (NOTE: Spelling is not mine.)

All summer long people have been flocking to Scituate, not just to join in the celebration of the 350th anniversary of the founding of this sea-coast town, but to visit a gem of a stone—Iannone's. A family venture from the time Joe and his Dad, Tony, drove the first nail in their three-month-task of renovating the former Gates store on Front St. until the finishing touches done by an aunt who is a decorator.

The decor is patterned after the Italian flag—red, white and green. From the gleaming kitchen comes not only authentic Italian cruisine, but such delights as bagels, salads of fresh vegetables purchased at the Chelsea produce market, brownies and cookies. Tony's wife and her three assistants keep the freezer stocked with Esther's traditional Italian recipes such as braciole and typical New England fare including chowders and chicken pot pies. There are appetizers, desserts and entrees, made out back in the kitchen, frozen and packaged in servings that vary in size.

Daily trips by Tony to the North End provide cold cuts, imported cheese and assorted breads for the sandwiches served in the little cafe seating 19 in a section to the right of the canopied entrance. In addition to the salad bar, deli counter and dessert display case, there is a gourmet section just made for browsing. I could go on, but stop by the next time you're in the Harbor—they're open seven days a week. While I was there the other day, I picked up a plastic bag of their dough (homemade, of course,) so that I could try out Esther's recipe for

SPINACH CALZONE

A close bond in METCO program

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

For the past 19 years, the METCO program has successfully integrated the schools systems of Boston and Cohasset. It is a program that has survived, despite the sometimes insurmountable logistical problems that arise.

One of these problems is the need to assist the METCO students who want to participate in after-school activities, or community programs. The host family program was initiated to resolve that dilemma.

This year, with the assistance of a committee headed by Nancy Sandell, all 48 students have been placed with Cohasset host families. These families have consented to provide shelter for a METCO student when that child remains after school long after the late bus and the 6 p.m. van have departed for the city.

This vital portion of the program, according to METCO interim director Sandras Barnes, is only successful because of the blending of student and family. "The host family," she explains, "provides a home away from home for these students. If they want to participate in a game, or stay late for a school activity, then they arrange to stay over with their host family."

The student has a voice in deciding which family will be his host for the school year. Often, she says, the student will be paired with the family of a close friend.

"With a young elementary student," she says, "we wait until alliances are made, friendships are formed. Once that is complete, we ask the parents of the Cohasset student if they would like to serve as a host family. With the high school students, we simply ask them who they would like. Often, by that time, their friendships have been tightly formed and we know who would make the best host family."

Two brothers in the METCO program are now hosted by the same family, although siblings are frequently paired with separate families.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm from the families this year," according to Barnes. "And that's important because we have a lot of new Boston families involved in the program this year. They want to be active, yet they have concerns."

There is no financial gain for the Cohasset host families. "I guess they do it out of the goodness of their hearts," the director explains. "Their children have formed friendships with the METCO students so it's an incentive to continue it on a personal level."

Sandell, who has helped coordinate the pairing of the students with their host family, also participates in the program. "It's been great; wonderful for our entire family," she says of their participation the past two years.

There are 30 new families participating this year, she explains. "I'm really proud of the effort made this year by the program's committee. I think it's been a very supportive year for the METCO program."

This is the fifth year of participation by the Lean family of South Main Street. She credits their particular student, Vanessa, with the success and longevity of the pairing.

"She's had to be very flexible with this family,"

Loyal customers flock to find treasures in Cohasset

They come from everywhere. It's word of mouth about a shop that's become a tradition in Cohasset.

The Consignment Shop of Cohasset is popular. And it's busy. On any given day, hundreds of customers flock to the Cushing Plaza store as if hunting for buried treasure.

And treasures they will find, according to manager Andrea Merrill. From furs to sweaters, from fine china to flatware, there's usually a bargain to be found by everyone.

The Consignment Shop was founded about 33 years ago by a small group of Cohasset women. Members of the Social Service League, they wanted to find a financial resource for that organization.

Lydia Ericsson of Jerusalem Road was one of the shop's founders. "One woman told us how a successful consignment shop was run in Darien, Conneticut. We had never heard of such a shop, but she got us interested in the idea," Ericsson remembered. "We each put in some money to start the shop and we made it back within that year."

The original shop was located in the former railroad depot on Ripley Road. It was a one room setup, Ericsson said, about 15 square feet of space off the old station waiting room.

Once the Cushing Plaza was being constructed, the Consignment ladies figured that would be an ideal spot to relocate. The shop had long outgrown its confined quarters at the train depot.

"There were six or eight of us who started the consignment shop," she recalled. "And although

Community greets Abbott Morcone

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

As the new Abbot at Glastonbury Abbey, Nicholas Morcone is looking to share his life of prayer with the public.

Since Morcone was elected to the haven's helm, he has worked to keep the abbey's program on a steady course.

"I think part of our vision for the future revolves around developing the things we're already doing."

He explained, "We see our apostolic witness as an outgrowth of our own community life. And that's our first priority.

"We are first of all," he said, "a benedictine community committed to the benedictine way of life and to the development of our relationship with God.

Morcone explained, prayer, both public and private is a primary part of benedictine life."We try to share that with people in numerous ways," he explained. "Right now, the main ways we do that is through our retreat program, spiritual direction and counseling."

Morcone said, he hopes to expand the abbey's ability to share its spiritual ways with the local communities at large.

"I think one of the things we're looking at," he said, "is some kind of education, though not in the sense of a school because we just don't see ourselves as having either financial or manpower resources to do that.

Morcone added, those hopes will have to wait for Businesses cry for more employees

Local employers are desperate; the holiday rush is coming and it's impossible to find help.

Help Wanted signs are decorating the doorways of all sorts of South Shore businesses these days, and proprietors are battening down to face the brunt of the heaviest shopping season of the year, shorthanded.

Daniel Leahy runs Kimball's by the Sea in Cohasset.

"I have been hiring and employing in this immediate area since 1982," he said. "In this hospitality industry, it has never been any worse than it is now, from the standpoint of availability of help.

Leahy added, "It's to the point where the pool is so thin, the employees are using employers as if it were a ping pong game, bouncing their offers off everyone.

"You're so anxious to have the position filled," he said, "and filled with somebody who has some competence, that you're forced at times to pay a higher rate than you ever conceived the job would pay."

Cohasset's week . . .

Fuel assistance

Cohasset residents may apply for participation in the South Shore Community Action's Fuel Assistance Program by appointment (call the Cohasset Senior Center, 383-9112), or at the Scituate Senior Center Tuesdays, starting Oct. 21, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Eligibility is based on gross annual income and the number of persons in the family.

CCC annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Cohasset Community Center will be held Thursday, Nov. 6, at the Community Center. The meeting will start at 8 p.m. with committee reports of the year's progress, election of officers and a building update will also be on the agenda. The meeting will end with light refreshments and an opportunity to view the new plans for expansion.

Tax payments due

Incorrect information regarding the town's real estate tax rate was published in last week's Mariner.

On Oct. 2, the state approved the real estate tax rate for Cohasset at $12.74 per one thousand dollars valuation. That, according to Board of Assessors Chairman Thomas Duggan, is the earliest date the tax rate has been approved in 11 years.

"That's pretty good," he added, "considering we also went through revaluation this year. But because the tax rate is out in October, the town won't need to borrow money in anticipation of revenue."

The tax bills were mailed to all residents Oct. 16, according to tax collector Elizabeth Ripley. The first half payments must be received in the collector's office at town hall by the close of business on Monday, Nov. 17. For any payments received after Nov. 17, with no exceptions, interest will be computed at 14 percent from Oct. 14.

Ripley said a number of tax bills have been returned to the collector's office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the collector's office immediately.

Assessor Duggan noted that Cohasset was the first of about nine area towns to receive approval of its tax rate. "We had a lot of cooperation from other town departments, including accountant Joanne Whittemore. We're doing very well compared to some other towns," he added.

This is the second year, according to Duggan, that it has not been necessary for the town to borrow money in anticipation of tax revenue.

Collector Ripley stated that failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date. New property owners should also contact our office to obtain copies of their tax bills.

Residents may come to the collector's office to pay their bills every Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday evenings, 5:30 to 8 p.m.; Fridays, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

On the due date, Monday, November 17, the tax collector's office will be open until 8 p.m.

Art center groundbreaking

The groundbreaking ceremony for the construction of a new South Shore Art Center will be held Sunday, Nov. 2 at 3:30 p.m. at the site of the new building.

According to building committee member Chris Rifkin, the new art center will be located at 119 Ripley Road, the current location of Tantillo's Auto Body shop at the corner of Pleasant Street.

Construction of the new building, which will replace the smaller building at 103 Ripley Road, will begin this month. Additional art classes and gallery shows willbe accommodated at the new center. The center is expected to be completed and occupied by the spring of 1987.

Currently, Rifkin noted, the center is undergoing a large capital campaign to raise funds for the construction and renovation work.

Harbor mooring request

The manager of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant has requested selectmen's assistance in correcting a mooring which has damaged the boat dock attached to his restaurant.

Gary Elsmore asked selectmen to help after he repeatedly requested the harbormaster's assistance, to no avail. Elsmore explained that the boat dock has been damaged because of a nearby mooring which moved from its original placement.

"I have personally spoken to the harbormaster numerous times about this situation, as well as showing him the dock and what needs to be done," Elsmore stated in a letter to selectmen.

"I did make it an issue that I would not expect this to be a free service and that any charge is to be submitted to Hugo's for immediate payment," he added.

The manager noted, "after a summer of waiting patiently, at the mercy of the harbormaster, I am now at a threshold of total frustration. I am pleading with the Board to take action to help rectify the situation. With the storm-like weather coming upon us, I really do not have much time left before more extensive damage is done to my property."

Peek at the Past

The photo published two weeks ago was correctly named by A.J. Antoine and Betty Maree. It was Mr. Stoddard with his Konahasset barge on the way to Hull in the 1890's.

A conversation with Abbot Nicholas Morcone

fulfillment.

"We're pretty much operating at capacity," he commented."

Maintaining the traditions of hospitality and spiritual sharing, he said, is always a challenge.

"The Christian life isn't selfish," he explained, "I think the challenge for us is finding the way to express and to share our community experience with those who aren't members of our benedictine community."

Morcone explained, the abbey has done some training of people for the lay apostlate on "a very limited basis. It was almost in the nature of an experiment," he said, "a six-week program here and a four-week program there."

Space, Morcone said, is the problem; there's simply not enough room at the abbey now for added outreach programs.

The new Abbot is not new to Glastonbury Abbey.

Morcone said he has lived here for about 20 years, and has served as a prior and as a treasurer.

"Most of my life here," he said, "has been spent more in dealing with the internal workings of the monastery.

A quiet and reserved man, Morcone said the public relations part of his new job is the aspect he finds most uncomfortable.

However, the structured lifestyle of prayer keeps him happy.

"I originally came here," he said, "because prayer is a very important part of my life and the structure of the life here is conducive to a life of prayer.

"We pray publicly five times per day," he commented, "and then we have two periods for private prayer built into our daily schedule."

Morcone explained, "It tells me something about myself. I think it's not easy to be self-reflective; the temptation is to be living outside of yourself.

"If you're going to pray," he said, "and pray honestly, you can't be afraid of yourself and what you're going to see of yourself. There's a certain honesty that has to come out of prayer."

He added, "I think another thing it does, is make you tolerant of others; I don't think prayer is strictly a me-God situation.

"I think if all you get out of prayer is kind of a warm feeling that you're alone and comfortable with God, then something is wrong," Morcone commented. "Prayer has to lead you to be able to share."

He agreed, "It's difficult to articulate about your own prayer experience, because it touches on a lot that's very personal and very deep; it goes deep into who you are and what your relationship is to God and to the rest of the world."

Morcone said he believes he can perform the duties of Abbot adequately and that he brings to the job, "hopefully, the grace of God."

He added, "I think I accept being elected Abbot in faith. I trust the people who elected me, and I trust the God, who inspired them to elect me.

Morcone said he is happy with the community he now heads.

"I think we have a good community here, he said, a fine group of men. I think we've contributed a lot to the spiritual life of this area of the archdiocese of the church.

"I think we've touched a lot of lives," he concluded, "and I hope we can keep on doing that."

No. Main Street housing plan on hold

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk is preparing to take his plan for a North Main Street moderate income elderly housing project "off the back burner."

Sawchuk said he had put the plan aside after it was turned down by the zoning board of appeals in May.

He commented, "I still have to sift out what the new watershed protection district will mean, and how it relates to cluster zoning."

Sawchuk was also pondering going non-profit with his project.

Sawchuk said he is considering revising his plan by scaling down the size of the lot actually covered by buildings from 36 acres to 10 acres.

He explained, this move would result in less of an impact on the surrounding neighborhood.

The reason for building the project, he said, is to offer elderly people in Cohasset "an alternative to living in a huge $400,000 house."

Shop's success created by loyal customers

we were board members of the Social Service League, we were autonomous. We decided, however, all the proceeds from the shop would go to the League."

The shop was successful "right from the start," she said. "We never had any trouble paying our bills. But now it's more crowded than ever. But we'll never move from there."

There is no typical shopper at the Consignment Shop. Customers include "young married couples looking for household items, young working girls, retired couples, middle-income and low income couples. They come from everywhere - from Carver, Sandwich, Malden and Holbrook. We have a lot of new consigners this year," Merrill explained. "People from Quincy and Randolph and Brookline."

She recalled a day this past summer when a large black limousine pulled up to the parking space near the shop's front display window. "I thought the woman in the limousine was going into King's Jewelers (next door). But the chauffeur walked in here with an armful of clothes that this woman was dropping off. She had heard about our lovely shop and wanted to bring her clothes here," Merrill remembered.

Among the items a shopper will find in this corner store at Cushing Plaza is a variety of fur coats. Merrill will not accept any damaged coats, or ones with brittle fur or tears. "These coats are marvelous. And it gives the woman who can't afford to shop on Newbury Street, the chance to own a lovely fur coat," she explained, noting that prices range from $600 for a jacket, to $2,300 for a full length coat. "Women can find some beautiful coats here, including a Lunarene mink, which I just sold last week. We have full lengths and jackets in fox, Persian lamb, and beaver. Everything is in good condition.

There are often designer labels seen among the Consignment Shop racks. Creations by Nippon, Gucci, Liz Claiborne, Evan Picone and Breckinridge, are frequently purchased in the Cohasset shop.

"We also have non designer clothes," Merrill added. "We have children's clothing and we have men's clothing."

In fact, the manager recalled that one man, about 28 years old "and climbing the corporate ladder," comes into the shop regularly to purchase his suits.

"We have some fantastic men's suits. You can pick up a current-style suit from $25 to $60. It's great for the man who doesn't want to spend a lot on a suit he won't wear frequently. I really like to see men in here," Merrill stated.

The store manager has been in the retailing business for 22 years, first as a fashion buyer. "This is second nature to me," she said. "I love retailing. It's fun. I love working with the public. I have a really good time working with the ladies here. We're all different temperments, and there's a different group each day. That's what makes it so much fun."

There are 62 regular volunteers who staff the shop, and a total of 105. "But I could always use more," the manager stated. "Some of the volunteers go on summer vacations, and some winter in Florida. I'm always in need of more people."

Although the store would likely benefit from a modern bookkeeping system, Merrill said the purchase of a computer is highly improbable. "It's such an expense," she noted. "And then I think about all the people who would be replaced. I don't think I want to see that. The people here enjoy what they do, it gives them something to do. I wouldn't want them not to come around, just because we got some new machine."

The customers who crowd into the tidy shop are another reason this store is successful, Merrill said.

"They are very loyal," she noted. "They're almost like family. You get to know their children and their grandchildren. Once and a while, I haven't seen someone around here and I let them know.

"Then last Saturday, an older man and his daughter came into the shop. He hadn't been here for quite a while and I remembered his wife had been ill. His daughter came over to me and apologized for taking so long to come into the shop. She said it was difficult because this had been her mother's favorite place. She thanked us for being so kind to her mother. "

It is the volunteers at the consignment shop who make the store a "friendly and informal place to shop," according to the manager.

Ten items of clothing are accepted from a customer every two weeks. Twenty items of bric-a-brac are allowed each day. The consigners receive 60 percent of the selling price. "The going rate is 50 percent," Merrill said. "But I see no reason to change our rate."

The Cohasset shop is one of the largest in this area, she noted. Despite the lack of advertising, it is also one of the more popular.

"We really don't have to advertise," she explained. "We're a tradition now that has spread by word of mouth. When you're good, everybody finds out about it."

Consignment hours at the Cushing Plaza store are from 10 to 11:30 every Monday through Friday morning. The shop is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Church group sends a message

For a dozen or more teenage girls of Hingham and the surrounding towns, Oct. 11 was a day they sent messages of hope and cheer to the world—via helium-filled balloons.

Cheered by their families and friends, they met at the home of their Young Women leader, Jenna Leth, beside the sea wall on Atlantic Ave. in Hull. The time was day break.

"Our balloons signify a rising generation of young people who want to encourage hope in the world and positive values," said Mrs. Leth. "Our girls are participating with some 300,000 teenage girls worldwide on the same day. They are all members of the Young Women organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Each girl had written a message to the world the week before the launching, then attached her message to her balloon just before it was launched.

President of the Hingham Church's group, Mrs. LouAnn Thompson of Marshfield, explained the purpose of the event was to "give our young people the opportunity to feel the strength and influence they have in the world and to let them express their commitment to bettering the world.

"The girls have already committed to a set of seven values in their own lives," Thompson explained. "These Young Women Values teach them that they are of great worth and that they have good potential. Too often the world sends girls the message that their worth is simply in the way they look. We want them to know that their worth goes far beyond that."

The values the girls hold as a creed of sorts include faith in God, acknowledgment of their individual worth, the responsibility of making wise choices, seeking opportunities for learning and growth, having the moral courage to do what they know is right, and helping others.

Host family program continues success. . .

Marybeth Lean explains. "With me going to school at night this year, and my husband traveling, everyone has had to be flexible."

The situation began several years ago, she says, when Vanessa wanted to participate in the Brownies in Cohasset. "The program didn't have a late bus then," she says, "and I was a co-leader of the Brownie troop. Someone called and asked if we could become her host family. Vanessa is in the same grade as my daughter Susie, and they are very close. We accepted and it's been delightful."

The two girls, now high school sophomores, remain good friends. Although Brownies is but a memory, their friendship has continued. "Vanessa still stays over our house, often once a week. On those nights, I know the homework's going to be a little light because Susie and Vanessa do a lot of serious talking," Lean comments.

In the summer, Vanessa often stays at the Lean home for a week. "She's become a part of our family," Lean admits. "And that's a tribute to her. My husband travels quite a bit, I'm in school and we all have crazy schedules. But through it all, Van ssa's been very flexible. Whether it's coming along while I do errands, or whatever, Vanessa is ready."

The two families have met several times during past five years, and have socialized on occasion. Vanessa, in turn, has brought her Cohasset friends into Boston for shopping excursions and to meet her friends in the city.

"It's been one of the most enriching things for my family," Lean states. "Even the most simple things — seeing Vanessa's reactions and responses about the black culture. For instance, Kool and the Gang was in Cohasset and she knew all about them. Not just as rock stars but as cultural heroes. She even saw them while she and Susie were watching the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick." She went over to the lead singer and introduced Susie to him. Vanessa has a very special view of life."

The benefits to the Cohasset host family, according to Lean, include "seeing another person's view of Cohasset. Vanessa has some very candid comments — about being a METCO student, and seeing the town from her perspective. I think our kids have had a real enriching experience because of her."

It has been a positive situation for the Lean family, knowing Vanessa relies on them while in Cohasset.

"The host family program has created the opportunity to know this person whom we truly love. That has been the true benefit of this program," she adds.

The McNamara family of Fairoaks Lane has participated in the program for the past five years.

"We moved here from a racially and religiously-mixed town. As I was driving through Cohasset one day I saw some black children playing in the school playground and assumed the same was true of Cohasset. It wasn't until we moved here that I discovered the situation was far different. Participating in the METCO host family program seemed to be the way to enable my kids to have contact with the city and with someone from a different race. That's my selfish reason. And what I knew about the program, I realized it was good," Sue McNamara says.

She has maintained a close relationship, not only with the METCO student her family hosts, but with the student's mother in Dorchester. Just this week the two shared a soul food luncheon at a Dorchester restaurant. "She brings a totally different perspective to me," McNamara explains. "She is a survivor, a strong woman and I'm very pleased I've had this opportunity to know her. Carrie is a part of our family, and her mother is also."

The METCO host family program has provided the McNamara's with "an invaluable, permanent way for a child from a different culture to blend with our family. The differences between us are broad, yet educational for my family."

Carrie spends a night each week with the McNamaras and often stays for a week's vacation in the summer. "Cohasset is where she has learned to swim and to ride a bike. In turn, she has taught my daughter how to double-dutch," McNamara adds.

The host family has been able to intervene in the Cohasset school system for their METCO child. "I think we've been an advocate for her here in this school system, where it might have been difficult for her mother who is not so familiar with the system. I intervene on her behalf, but Carrie must achieve academically. That's our agreement," she notes.

Not only has the METCO student benefited from the program. But relationships have been built between the students and the parents of two communities. "My life has been enriched," McNamara says, "through my association with Carrie's mother. I've shared a lot of experiences with her. When I was in the hospital last year, she spent the money on a long distance call. She cares about me, and it's a two-way street. That's an essential part of this program for me."

The holiday employee rush is fast approaching

"We are the victims of our own success," he noted. "We've created a situation where housing costs have gone sky-high, and this affects the moderate income job market.

"If you can't afford to live anywhere around here," Noble said, "how can you afford to work here?"

Noble concurred with Leahy, "Retailers are between a rock and a hard place," he said. "How much can you pay in relation to the prices you charge?" he said.

"The retailer has to deal with the price squeeze in a competetive market, but still wants to retain his competent staff."

The Bergson Ice Cream Shop in Cohasset has been hard hit by the drought of available workers.

According to manager Marco Cercio, Bergson is down to 15 employees from the summer's squad of 52.

Bergson had to discontinue a popular breakfast operation at its old restaurant and close the place, because they couldn't hire anybody.

The restaurant also has reduced the number of seats available in its new store from 96 to 50, Cercio said.

The manager anticipates picking up four or five college kids to work during the holiday season, but said even with that help, he won't be able to open up the whole store.

"We're really struggling," he said.

Arthur Roebuck, a Hingham caterer predicted, "You're going to find places that are going to close, because the problem is almost insurmountable."

He added, "I envy the small businessman who can get by with only one or two people. I need 60 to 70 people to operate my business.

"Look around," he said. "It's astounding!"

Roebuck agreed with Noble about the contribution that the lack of affordable housing has made to this dilemma.

"Around this area, you can't find anyone to fill the middle-of-the-road paying jobs," he said, "because there's no housing available for young couples just starting out.

"Here, they can't afford to take a job that pays only $200 to $300 per week," he added.

Noble noted, "It's awfully hard to hire somebody at a moderate wage, when McDonald's is paying $7 per hour. If you're offering $12,000 to $14,000 per year, and McDonald's is paying $7 per hour, mathematics tell you you're not competetive."

Leahy added, the McDonald's situation "ultimately is going to have an impact on our retail pricing structure.

"You can't avoid it," he said.

"This year's Christmas shopping season is going to be Earth-shattering," Leahy said. "I don't know how the stores are going to cover their needs."

To try to combat the situation, Noble said the South Shore Chamber of Commerce will be pushing the formation of a consortium betweeen banks and builders, to address the need for construction of moderate income housing in the area.

"It can't be a charity," Noble added, "because the builders would need to make a profit and the banks would want a return on their loans."

The other businessmen have resorted to advertising blitzes, meanwhile paying a shorthanded staff wads of money in overtime pay.

Both overtime and advertising are eating into profits, making the cost of doing business too high in some cases.

And Roebuck predicts, "You're going to see people go out of business."

The charter for the Cohasset VFW Post was presented last week at ceremonies at the legion post. Among the charter participants (not in order) Vice Commander William Barnes; Chaplain Louis Longo; VFW State Commander Theodore R. Eaton; Chairman of the Charter Committee, Emilio Conte; VFW Post 9146 Commander, Ralph Perroncello; Adjunct Robert Jackson and Quartermaster Bill Higgins. (Kathy Perlow)

Ketchum appointed editor

Bradford Ketchum, Jr. of Cohasset has been appointed editor of The Walking Magazine. Launched in May and aimed at America's nearly 100 million fitness and recreational walkers, The Walking Magazine already boasts a distribution of more than 365,000, and at its present growth rate, will be 500,000 in 1987.

A founding editor of Inc. Magazine, the nation's fourth largest business magazine, Ketchum was most recently senior editor there, as well as editor of The Inc. Advisor, a monthly newsletter he founded in 1985. Winner of a Jesse H. Neal First Award in Journalism, Ketchum earned national recognition for instituting the Inc. 100 and *Inc.*500, annual rankings of the fastest growing companies in the United States.

In addition, in 1981, Ketchum created a state advisory program, through Inc. to build economic development in various states throughout the United States.

Ketchum lives in Cohasset with his wife Lillian and son Simeon, a third grader at Jos. Osgood School. Among Brad's ambitions: Organize a Cohasset Stride-by-the-Sea, a six or seven-mile non-competitive fitness walk. "While hardly original, it could be a great alternative for us non-joggers," he noted.

☐ The Cohasset Historical Society makes the news with their fantastic gowns again...word has certainly spread as to their beauty, The Greek Orthodox Ladies Philopotohos Society asked that our gowns be shown at a luncheon-fashion show last Sunday. It was for a benefit,they were raising money for the Cathedral of New England. The fashion show was put on by Bloomingdales, and the Historical House's Victorian gowns were the finale. The models were the children of Board members, and Margie Erickson was in charge of dressing and commentator for the event. There were ten models dressed! The event was extremely successful; once again hats off to Connie Parker and all of her efforts!

☐ How about Maureen Farren! She has gone over the 50 goal mark in field hockey, certainly a newsworthy effort! Keep it up, Maureen.

☐ In case you missed it, the King and Queen of Homecoming were a handsome sight last Saturday! Pat O'Connor made a handsome King and Melissa Shea was "simply gorgeous". The Gridiron Club should also be mentioned, as they do such a good job of making the event a success. The dance that night was a grand one, and the rally that was held on Friday was the best one ever! How great to see everyone participating in all of the above... spirit certainly has hit our town, and its a grand sight to see.

☐ Happy retirement to Eric Pearson. Sure will seem funny not to see him up at Highway Motors, where he has become a fixture. Here's hoping he remains active on the Cohasset scene, what would we do without him?

☐ Its nice to see our CHS artists make the news... Heath Larson, Kirsten Founder, Elizabeth Zadel and Marlissa Clapp have been accepted into Boston University's Talent High School Students Art Class, an honor indeed.

☐ Starting this weekend and continuing for the next two after, there is a way for you to truly relax! Just hire an AFS student to do your work for you and watch everyone benefit. This is the way the AFS raises its funds for its yearly expenses, and you can get the windows cleaned so that you can see the first frost...they will do any fall cleaning for you, so give them a call at 383-6818 (from 9-3) or 383-0842 (from 3-8)

☐ As the Red Sox continue their winning ways, we will see many cars leaving Cohasset this week...their destination, Fenway park! Their goal, to watch the Red Sox win the World Series. Here's hoping...

☐ Congratulations to Dr. Edward F. Woods, who was honored recently for his 35 years of association with the Department of Oral Surgery at Boston University Hospital.

☐ Don't forget the order your ticket for the Village Fair's wonderful supper, to be held at St. Stephen's Church the night of the Fair. Its always super, and is to be a catered affair this year. There are 200 tickets to be sold, and they may be purchased from the Village Fair central committee members. Circle December 6th on your calendar as a banner day...you can do your Christmas shopping at the Fair, then let them cook your sumptious meal while you give your tired body a rest and grand meal.

☐ It sure is nice to see the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Conway get the recognition they deserve. They will be honored November 7th by the Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center for outstanding service toward the special needs students at the school. Hats off to a most deserving couple.

Funding fields

Selectmen are in an unique, but slightly uncomfortable position right now. They have approximately $21,000 in hand to spend in any manner they see fit.

This is the remainder of the money given to the town from Warner Brothers in return for their unlimited access to the town during the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick." Now that the bulk of the filming is complete and the crowds have vanished, selectmen have only this dilemma to resolve - how to spend the money. That's not as simple as it sounds.

Two weeks ago the board voted to expend about $3,500 in order to tear out the asphalt from the front of town hall and replace it with landscaping. This is one of those post-Proposition 2 1/2 projects that must be deemed frivolous." It's worthwhile and a definite benefit to the town, but it's a project that could remain on that financial backburner while more serious and immediate concerns are addressed in the annual budget.

Landscaping the front of town hall, in a passive manner, will benefit the entire town for generations. That small square of asphalt in front of the town office building looks inappropriate and out of place. It would certainly improve the historic aesthetics of the building if the frontage was improved.

This is a worthy project for the Warner Brothers money. And what better way to spend this gift, this unplanned for money, than on a "frivolous" project.

But the dilemma comes now as the town still has abut $21,500 left in its pocket. It's not that there's a lack of projects to fund or causes to support.

But selectmen decided they would spend the money in a way that would benefit the entire town. One large project where the townspeople could see this money put to use.

Cohasset may be small, but we're not uninteresting. There are plenty of activities taking place, lots of projects being completed.

But rather than giving one organization a thousand dollars and the next group $2,000, selectmen really want to give this sum to a single cause.

Although there may be many worthy causes in town, we can't think of one more needed than new athletic fields at the high school.

Right now, this project is in limbo as the town's advisory committee denied a $16,700 appropriation to complete the initial engineering plans. Without those final plans, the renovation project can't be brought to town meeting for construction appropriations.

Here is a project that will benefit the present and future generations of our town. Everyone agrees it is a worthy project, although the costs which have yet to be estimated, may be out-of-sight.

But this $21,500 can be used as an impetus to get things going. We could have the final plans drawn, including an estimated total construction cost.

Town meeting will be entitled from there to decide whether the field renovations are necessary or whether it's a frivolous expenditure without any financial support.

We'd hate to see this project die in mid-air. We'd like to see the plans completed and residents given a chance to see if this is a worthy project for our school children.

Yes, there are many other worthy events and organizations in town. But there isn't a wiser method of spending our money - helping to enhance the athletic fields of the town - getting kids off the street and onto the turf.

Support cleaning of hazardous dump

Letters

To the Editor:

If you care about your environment, if you care about the quality of the world your children will inherit, you should know:

--43 Massachusetts communities have lost once-pure water supplies to contamination, due primarily to dumping of hazardous waste.

--The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) estimates there are nearly 1,500 probable dump sites in this state; of these 345 have been confirmed.

--Question #4, on the Nov. 4 ballot gives you an opportunity to speed up the searching out and cleaning up of these hazardous waste dump sites. Vote YES on #4 and you favor starting this process now, not next year or 20 years from now when it will be too late.

--Of the 200 Representatives and Senators in Massachusetts 103 have endorsed the Hazard Waste Cleanup Initiative, yet at the current funding and staffing levels the government won't clean up our dumpsites for over 50 years.

--More than 200 Massachusetts organizations have endorsed this Hazardous Waste Petition, among them: the Massachusetts Association of Conservation Commissions, Clean Water Action Project, Norwell Conservation Commission, Greenpeace and Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG). (Facts and figures from MASSPIRG, Temple Place, Boston, as of September 30, 1986).

If you care, vote YES on Question #4 on Nov. 4.

Coalition to hold press conference

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The South Shore Coalition will hold a press conference early next year to educate residents on critical issues such as transportation, solid-waste disposal and growth management.

The coalition, which marks its first anniversary this month, was formed to address these and other issues affecting the region.

At a meeting in Marshfield Thursday, coalition representatives agreed that many people are unaware of the urgency of these regional issues.

"The public has no real knowledge of growth issues facing the South Shore," said Kenneth Moll, Hingham representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

Hingham residents' comments at meetings concerning restoration of the Old Colony Railroad and other issues are "shockingly parochial," Moll said.

"Citizens act as if Hingham is a little town that has always had 22,000 residents and will always have 22,000 residents. They act as if the town is not growing and won't grow in the future."

Other officials agreed that attitudes were similar in their towns.

"Our message to residents is that they must start getting involved or at least informed," said Marshfield Selectman James Finucane, "because they'll soon be making big decisions that will affect us for a long time."

Finucane said much information is already available, but most of it does not reach residents.

To address that problem, representatives directed coalition Project Manager Jean Christensen of Marshfield to compile a list of publications by the state and MAPC on issues like solid waste and rail restoration. The materials would be made available through public libraries.

Finucane proposed a press conference which would include Christensen as main speaker and at least one selectman from each of the coalition's nine member communities.

"We need something that dramatic to say, 'we believe that these issues are of critical regional concern, and they are not going to just go away,' " he said. "We have to get away from this 'not in my town' attitude."

The coalition plans to stress the effects of growth on the South Shore, especially if nothing is done to alleviate related problems.

"In solid waste, we're running out of landfill space and it's going to get more expensive soon. We have totell residents what is going to happen if nothing is done to improve transportation, and we have to tell them these things are going to happen before their kids graduate from high school," Finucane said.

In addition to area newspapers, cable and broadcast television news organizations would be urged to cover the conference.

Final plans for the conference will be set at the coalition meeting scheduled for Nov. 20. Representatives last week set a preliminary date of early January for a press conference.

Civil War medalist Levi Gaylord has Cohasset roots

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

In the spring of 1865 General Ulysses S. Grant's Union Army was slowly but surely fighting its way into the state of Virginia, and the end of the American Civil War was only a few months away.

Grant's target s in Virginia were the rebel held cities of Petersburg and Richmond, the latter having been the capitol of the southern Confederacy. Between Grant's force and the cities was the battered remains of Confederate General Robert E. Lee's once formidable army. Now short of men and supplies, the Confederates were fighting a last-ditch and desperate battle to slow and stop the Union advance.

One of the numerous preliminary battles on the road to Petersburg and Richmond was the battle at Fort Steadman, Virginia. The fighting at Fort Steadman produced an act of heroism by a Union soldier today commemorated by a stone marker of white marble in Cohasset's Central Cemetery.

Buried in his family's cemetery lot at the old Burying Ground is Sergeant Levi B. Gaylord of Company A, 29th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, recipient of the nation's highest award, the Medal of Honor, for gallantry in action at Fort Steadman on March 25, 1865.

Cohasset's Civil War Medal of Honor recipient Levi B. Gaylord was born in Boston on September 23, 1840. His parents were Henry Downer Gaylord of Boston and Abigail Bates Gaylord of Cohasset. She was a daughter of Cohasset Master Mariner Daniel and wife Sally (Tower) Bates, and grandaughter of early Cohasset shipowner and shipwright Levi Tower. Of the Gaylord's six children, three were born in Cohasset between 1830 and 1835, the other three, including Levi B. were born in Boston. The young Levi grew up to become a "teamster and expressman". Records describe him as having blue eyes, light hair and light complexion, and 5 feet 5 inches tall. Levi enlisted in the U.S. Army in Boston on May 18, 1861. He was assigned to Capt. Clark's Company of the 4th Massachusetts Infantry, soon to be redesignated as Company A of the Massachusetts 29th Infantry Regiment. From October of 1862 to April of 1863 Gaylord was assigned to the Prisoner of War Returnee Camp at Alexandria, Virginia. Then he returned home to marry in that year Catherine Josephine Shields of Boston. They had three sons, Harry C., Samuel B., and Frank B., born between 1867 and 1880.

Returning to the war, Levi B. Gaylord reenlisted in the Union Army on January 1, 1864 in Tennessee. A year later, the Confederacy, in the early spring of 1865, was nearing exhaustion as Northern armies closed in on its last strongholds. Grant's army, with the 29th Massachusetts Infantry Regiment, was on the move in Virginia.

Historical Society member Edward Tower stands alongside the grave marker of Congressional Medal of Honor recipient Levi Gaylord with Cemetery Supt. Ralph Perroncello.

Confederate General Lee, seeking a way to break through Grant's lines and link up with General Joe Johnson's army in North Carolina, determined to attack the Union forces threatening Petersburg. Guarding Grant's positions were two forts located only a few yards from Confederate lines, Fort Steadman itself was a low, earthwork wall already severely damaged by previous fighting and now occupied by Northern soldiers. Nearby, Fort Haskell was the site of artillary positions. Both forts must be taken by Lee's infantry if the breakout attempt were to succeed.

On March 25, Lee ordered his forces to attack and take the two forts. Behind the attacking line some 20,000 southern soldiers awaited the outcome of the battle at the two forts. High ground leading to Fort Steadman soon was reached, and the Confederates fought their way into the earthworks of the Fort itself. Then came the second phase of Lee's plan, the infantry attack upon nearby Fort Haskell. It was here that the Southern attack came to a halt, as Union forces regrouped, reinforcements moved into the action, and Fort Haskell's artillary began to sweep the area about captured Fort Steadman.

Soon the attacking Confederates were isolated behind Steadman's low walls, trapped by counter-attacking Union forces. Suffering heavy losses, the confederate survivors soon surrendered. Lee's desperate attempt to break free had failed, and Confederate forces were compelled to continue their retreat toward Petersburg, Richmond and final surrender.

It was during the initial phase of the attack upon Fort Steadman and Haskell, when Lee's men were overrunning Union positions, that Levi B. Gaylord performed the act of bravery for which he later received the Medal of Honor. At the height of the battle, Gaylord and two other volunteers, having seen an abandoned cannon within Fort Haskell, crossed open ground under heavy fire to reach the Fort. Gathering ammunition, the three men turned the gun toward oncoming Confederate infantry, and began a continuous fire that brought the Southern assault to a halt. They were able to maintain the fire until Union reinforcements arrived.

For this act of bravery, all three volunteers, Massachusetts men, were recommended for the Medal of Honor. For reasons not clear, the medal was not awarded at that time, but in June of 1896 the U.S. War Department authorized the presenting of the medal to the Civil War veteran, "for gallantry at Fort Stedman."

Levi B. Gaylord was mustered out of the U.S. Army as a Sergeant in Washington, D.C. on July 29, 1865. Returning home, he resided first at Liberty Square in Boston then in Roxbury. In the year 1898 Gaylord is known to have been severely injured in a fall from a burning building. Levi B. Gaylord died in Boston on December 6, 1900 from, as Cohasset's vital records indicate, "apoplexy", aged 60 years. A few days later he was buried in the Gaylord family lot in Cohasset, near numerous members of his immediate family.

Recently, Raymond L. Collins and Charles MacGillvery of the national Medal of Honor Society contacted Edward E. Tower of Cohasset's Central Cemetery Association with information about Levi Gaylord's war record, and the story of his heroism during the Civil War came to light. From the Veteran's Administration came a white marble marker with gold print to memorialize the Cohasset Medal of Honor recipient.

Though Levi Gaylord himself was not a native of Cohasset, he could trace Cohasset ancestory through the families of Bates and Tower, back in time to the first settling of the town two centuries before. The white marble memorial stone at Central Cemetery is a fitting monument to his singular act of bravery which helped to bring the tragic American Civil War near to its close.

ANIMALS OF THE NIGHT

Sudden movement in the night—a scrabbling through the woods—animals that are active at night have many fascinating adaptations for dealing with a darkened world. Marshall Katler, Naturalist, will share some of his original research on the shorttail shrew and bring out some of our mammal mounts for a close-up view of other night creatures. Then, you'll head outside to listen and look for bats, fox, shrews and signs of these wary creatures. Wear comfortable walking shoes and bring a flashlight. Meet at the Science Center on Wednesday, Oct. 29, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Prepaid registration required (members/$4; non-members/$5). Call 659-2559.

Five local students take a whirlwind tour of China

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner Staff

What has been a dream for tens of thousands ofstudents studying martial arts in America recently became a reality for five individuals who study with Sifu John Loupos of Cohasset.

Jaimie Young of Scituate, Chris Watters, Chris Sheppard and Susan McMackin, all of Cohasset, and Michael Johnson of Lexington, formerly of Marshfield, recently spent two weeks in China.

It was through Loupos' teacher, Grand Master Pui Chan, who now lives in Orlando, Fla., that the local group traveled overseas.

The grand master's wife owns a travel agency, and each year, he returns to his homeland and visits the Shaolin Temple.

"He has established a bond there," said Loupos who explained that that particular temple was popularized when film star David Carradine played the role of a Shaolin monk.

"It was a whirlwind tour — three days in Hong Kong and 11 days in mainland China — to do kung fu training and to present joint performances.

"We worked with wu shu troupes and traditional kung fu stylists."

Said Loupos: "Master Chan, he worked magic. He took remarkably good care of us. It was redcarpet all the way."

It was Master Chan's suggestion to publish a little brochure - in Chinese - of photographs and descriptions of each visitor which would readily identify the tourists.

"It was an outstanding trip," said Watters, a junior at Cohasset High. "I had no preconceived idea about what it was going to be like.

"The Chinese are very different. Their lifestyles seem so primitive. There are no luxuries," he said.

Both Loupos and Watters were horrified at the driving. "There are no road laws," Watters observed. "Every single second horns are blowing."

"The motorists are reckless," added Loupos and described a hair-raising bus trip over narrow roads and near collisions.

"Visiting the Shaolin Temple was very exciting," Watters said. "We performed with a few of the monks for the abbot and had a tour of the place.

"They let us take a lot of pictures," he said.

Young, a junior at Scituate High, has been studying kung fu with Loupos for four years.

"We did a lot of things I never expected to do," said Young. "And we did them so casually, like being able to perform in front of the monks at the temple."

But what was so impressive was that this was the first occasion that westerners had visited the temple.

There are some 200 styles of karate and more than 350 styles of Chinese kung fu, explained Loupos. The kung fu style he teaches is known as the preying mantis style.

"Karate is more linear, while wah lum is more fluid, more graceful," Loupos explained.

"We learned the plum flower preying mantis form," said Young. "The master didn't speak any English, he just came over and molded us like clay.

"It was nice to see some common bonds in practicing martial arts, but you could still tell the people were more dedicated in stying the martial arts.

"It's a very different lifestyle."

It was not uncommon to see men and women of all ages outdoors at 6 a.m. practicing tai ch'i, he said.

"Our tour guides were really nice, and they made us feel at home," he said.

For McMackin, a psychologist, the trip was more spiritual.

"The trip really diminished the boundaries (between the two countries) ... [illegible] ... all acute awareness ... the interdependence of the countries.

"In many ways it increased by flexibility in terms of expanding my priorities with much less focus on materialism and ego and much more awareness of people as the most precious resource.

"This didn't happen overnight, but over time. It was a subtle process," she said.

She too had no expectations of what she would discover in a foreign land.

"We move in such a fast pace. There's such a sense of isolation here. But in China, I couldn't tell which parents belonged to which children. "People treat all children as important people. That probably impressed me most about the country," she said.

"The people were healthy and carried a spontaneous joy with them. They really value one another," she said.

She said the visit also helped her to appreciate the United States. "In developing an international community, we have a lot to offer.

"There is a possibility of balancing our mutual interests," she said.

But she observed that in the school system, it was disciplined, with rigorous academic demands.

"The system doesn't allow for free thought, spontaneity or free thinking, and students don't have access to different kinds of philosophy or political literature like we have.

"But what is provided is with stronger diligence and accountability," McMackin said.

"It was a real honor to go with Master Chan and trace his steps. We went to his village.

"He grew up in an oyster valley, and there were jetties in the harbor made up of oyster shells," she said.

"I have a profound appreciation of him as a man as well as how easy my life in America is.

"In going to the temple and see Master Chan honored and made a disciple, that was incredible.

"I know it was the wah lum system that was honored, for it was he who brought the wah lum system to this country. He was really treated with respect," she said.

Loupos has been studying martial arts for more than 20 years and began teaching several years ago.

For six years he conducted classes afternoons and evenings at the Montessori Community School off Cornet Stetson Road, Route 123, Scituate. For the past two years he has been teaching in quarters at Jonathan Livingston Square, Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A, Cohasset.

Our World of Robotics

The Mobil Ed. Robotics will be presented to grades 6-8 Nov. 4 at the high school auditorium.

Mobil Ed is proud to present Our World of Robotics, showing the latest in state of the art home, educational and industrial robots in use with the microcomputer.

The electronic master of ceremonies for this program is a robot that resembles the Star Wars robot, R2D2. It is fully functional on a remote control, four channel basis, by the presenter out of sight of the audience.

After a general introduction of the program, the presenter gives a background and history of the computer. Vacuum tubes, walls of storage and microprocessor are terms used in this segment.

The next robot introduced is a toy robot, Maxxe Steele, that allows your students an inexpensive way to approach the world of robotics. It can walk, talk, move its arm, grasp and operate a light if the room gets dark.

The last portion of the program demonstrates the home robot, TOPO, from San Jose, California. TOPO does various speed demonstrations, as well as showing off its vocabulary. This robot is also capable of doing mathematical problems and a fascinating card trick.

Books missing

The High School Library is missing the following volumes of our circulating sets of World Book Encyclopedia — 1978 edition: Volumes 4, 8, 13; and 1983 edition, volumes 4, 8, 11, 13 and 18.

Encyclopedias are quite expensive to replace so we would appreciate parents checking at home to see if one belonging to the high school is there. There will be no questions asked if they are returned. We would just like to have them back. Thanks for your help.

Skating competitor Kara Protulis.

Kara wins medals

Who's Kara? Why did she win medals?

Kara Protulis, 11, of Deer Hill School won two medals in the open competition at Cohasset Winter Gardens.

Kara has been skating for only one year and belongs to two clubs, The I.S.I.A. and The U.S.F.A.

Kara originally started skating a few years ago, but suffered a severe knee injury and was forced to stop. Kara's mother started working at the Pro Shop, (a small shop inside of the Cohasset Winter Gardens.) Since then, Kara became interested again and skates everyday after school.

Young girl wins medals

On Monday, October 13, 1986 Kara Protulis, a fifth grade Deer Hill student from Cohasset won two skating medals during a state competition at Cohasset Winter Gardens.

She practices at least two hours every afternoon to perfect her routine. This gives her the courage to compete with other skaters that want to win also. She worked very hard to win the gold and silver medals and was very happy to receive them.

Her mother works for Winter Gardens and this is how she became interested in skating.

CHS senior honored for academic excellence

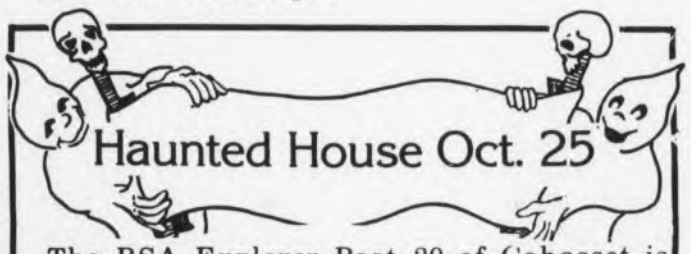
In a surprise presentation Monday night, the school committee presented Lisa Shumaker with a Certificate of Academic Excellence. The award recognizes the student who has worked hard throughout the school years, and is also based on class standings. Lisa is academically the number one student in the senior class.

Shumaker, who is the high school sports reporter for the Cohasset Mariner, did not know she was being presented with the award. She believed she was attending the meeting to discuss her upcoming plans to attend the National Young Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C.

She had received nomination to join the prestigious group, and through a background check by guidance director John Leary, found the Young Leaders visit embassies and talk with members of the diplomatic corps. During their December visit to the nation's capital, the students will also meet with members of Congress.

The students are selected by a process which allows participation by only 1,300 teens. The organization is sponsered by Congress, Lisa told the school committee, noting that no one from the South Shore public schools had ever been invited to attend.

Lisa accepted the Certificate of Excellence from Supt. Stephen Hart, explaining that it will be beneficial when filling out early acceptance applications for colleges.



The BSA Explorer Post 29 of Cohasset is sponsoring a Haunted House, Saturday, Oct. 25.

The Haunted House will be held in the Town Hall from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. The cost is $1.50 for children 6 - 12 yrs., and adults, $2.

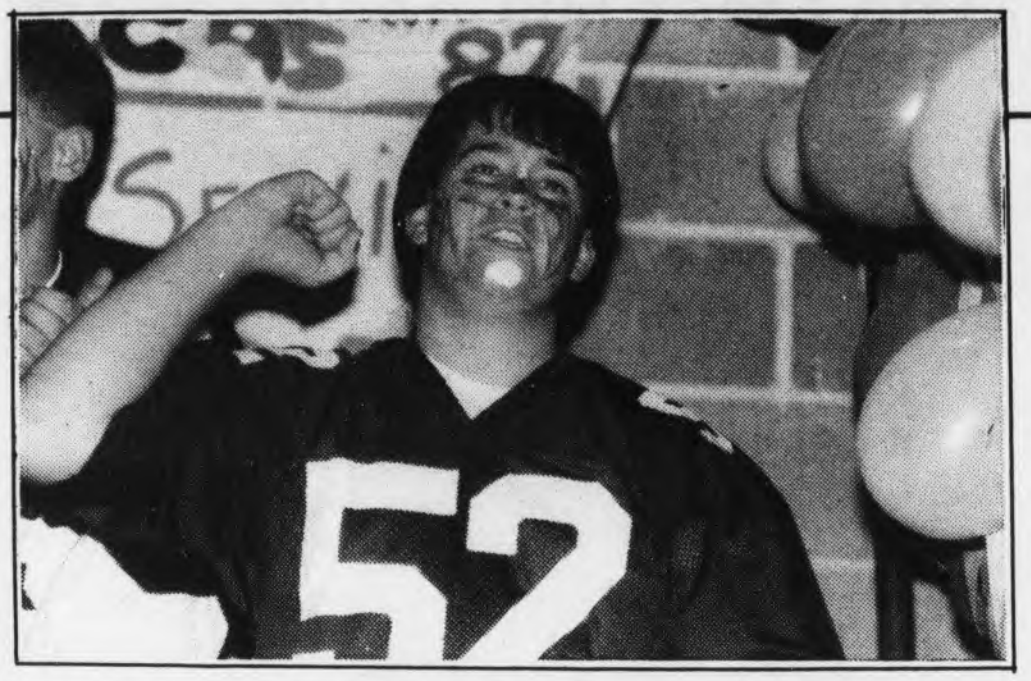
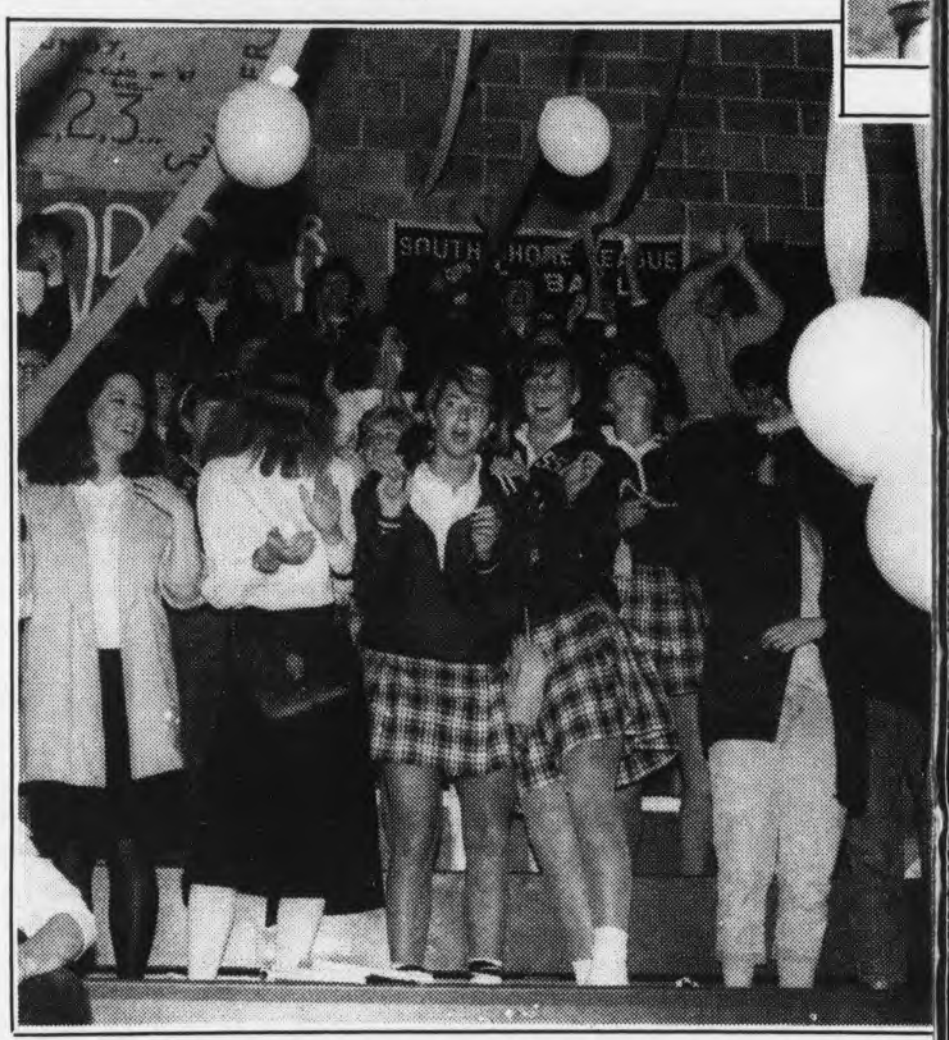
A prophetic sign was hung on the gym wall during the rally before Saturday's big victory.

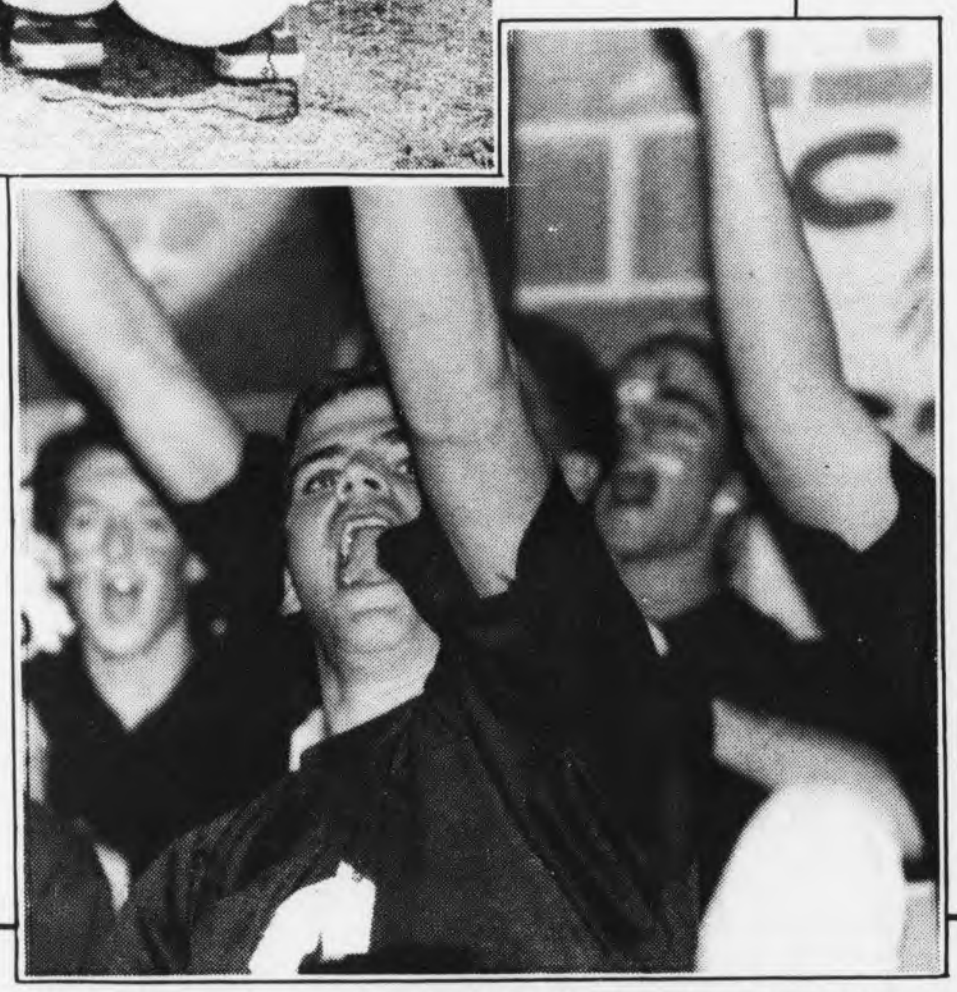


Senior football player John Dockray responds to the crowd's cheers during the CHS homecoming rally.



The energy level ran high last Friday as Spirit Week ended with a enthusiastic rally. Cheerleaders (l to r) Jill Shockman and Maureen O'Leary.

Katie Anslie, 1½, was a proud and colorful cheerleader for the local team.



Philip Mahoney, a senior football player, was as eager as anyone to take on and demolish the Dragons of Duxbury.

There was plenty to cheer about last week as Cohasset doused Duxbury, 26-6.

Football

Saturday, the day of the homecoming for Cohasset, the boys treated its many fans to a 26-6 massacre over a talented Duxbury squad. The key to the victory was Cohasset's tremendous effort on defense led by Liam Stanford (three sacks and seven tackles) and by Jeff Lloyd (two sacks, five tackles, and five fumble recoveries).

The defense dominated the game according to coach Phil Pisano, and gave Cohasset great field position on offense. Bobby Durkin led the team offensively with 25 carries for 111 yards and with two touchdowns. Bobby also surpassed 1,000 career yards in Saturday's game.

Philip Mahoney also scored and Chris Conant ran the ball into the end zone from three yards to give Cohasset its last points of the game.

Duxbury has long been a strong rival for Cohasset, and this year was no different. However, this year the Skippers rose to the occasion and dominated the game both offensively and defensively. Cohasset now stands at an impressive 6-0 and has a well-deserved rest coming up this week before they travel to Abington a week from Saturday.

Field Hockey

The girls opened the week Wednesday by crushing East Bridgewater, 5-0. This victory qualified Cohasset for the state tournament for the third year in a row. Coach Claire Brady was pleased with the way her team played and felt the girls communicated well with each other on the field.

Maria Cahill led the Skippers on offense with two goals and two assists followed by Maureen Farren who also had two goals. Keri Cullinane picked up her first goal of the season, and she had an assist as well.

Liz Williams, Debbie Hartley, Jill Shockman, and Colby Mantz all played well defensively for Cohasset.

Friday, the girls continued their winning streak by blowing by Scituate 5-0. Brady felt her team really showed how much it has improved this game.

Maureen Farren led all scorers with four goals. Sarah Bishop also tipped in a goal for Cohasset as well.

Carolan Hurley, Michele Cassalaro, and Jackie Lydon were all cited by Brady as turning in good efforts.

Tuesday, the girls travel to Hull and take on the always tough Pirates. Saturday, the Skippers face Sandwich away at 10:30 in what should be the game of the season. If Cohasset wins the game, then the Skippers will be tied for first place with Sandwich in the South Shore League.

This should be an excellent game, so try and get down to Sandwich to watch it!

Town moves forward to buy estates

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

The town is moving forward with plans to acquire a 36-acre parcel known as Lily Pond Estates.

According to executive secretary Donald Andrew, The firm of Richard Partridge and Associates is now busy conducting an appraisal of the site.

The $6,000 job should be complete by November 13, when the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering will hold a public hearing at its office in Woburn.

The town decided to go after the property to protect its watershed at the behest of the water commission.

Commissioner Ronald Goodwin said the biggest hurdle is yet to come. The commission will have to go before Town Meeting to ask for the money to purchase the land.

"It's not going to be cheap," he said.

Ignorance kept the town from purchasing this land before a developer got a hold of it, according to Goodwin.

"There's a lot more awareness now, as far as water supplies getting polluted and things that people never thought of before," he said.

"Like, people changing the oil in their cars," he said, "and dumping it down the storm drain... Stuff like that, people don't even think twice about."

Goodwin said the logical time for the town to have acquired the property was 1978, when it built the new treatment plant.

"But for some reason," he said, "they decided to take just the land to build the treatment plant."

If Town Meeting decides against purchasing the parcel, "We'll drive off that bridge when we get to it," Goodwin said.

The developers, Aaron Rosenberg and Edward Britt are tied up in court, Goodwin said, because their plan was rejected by town boards.

"I don't think there's going to be any development right away," he said, "no matter what happens."

Could that land still be developed?

Andrew said, the town would go to an eminent domain procedure, "unless we could come to an agreement beforehand."

If everything works out the developers' way, Goodwin conceded, "We can't lay in front of the bulldozers .

"If they do everything legally. I don't think there's anything we could do to stop them," he said. "But we'll fight it as much as we can, because our water supply is not like it is in most other towns."

Goodwin explained, most other towns subsist on groundwater, rather than open reservoirs.

"Groundwater is purer," he added, "but it's not always better, because if it gets polluted, it's harder to find out where the pollution came from.

"And because it's underground, you can't dig it all up."

Lily Pond faces its own dilemmas, he said.

"The way it is now, the south side is all developed," he explained. "There are houses next to it and there's also the stuff that runs off from the brook which goes through the veterans project. Now, that's not clean water."

Goodwin said all these factors put a strain on the reservoir.

"If we add this (development) to it," he warned, "it might be just the thing to throw it over the top."

Goodwin said he's concerned about nutrient loading in the lake, which "if it gets to a certain point, the water becomes like a big algae tank.

"That development by itself might not be that much of a threat to warrant that kind of money," he added. "But because of the situation we're in, it's important."

He explained, "There are a lot of things people don't think about regarding Lily Pond Estates. There could be an oil truck down there filling up a house with oil and the brakes could let loose and the oil truck could roll into the reservoir.

"That's how close the development would be," he said.

Goodwin said he backs the idea of land banking as a method for the town to procure open land for protection, conservation and recreation purposes.

The Water Commission, he said tried to bring a land bank article before Town Meeting last year, but was turned down by selectmen, who said the article should come from the conservation commission.

This year the conservation commission will be submitting a land banking article, Goodwin said, "with or without our help."

Goodwin said he doesn't believe many people would argue about protecting the water supply.

"No matter what it costs," he said, "it would be a small price compared to replacing the water supply.

"Then," he said, "you'd be talking monumental figures."

LWV Transportation Forum

Are you wondering what impact the proposed Railroad will have on Cohasset? Are you wondering what the residents of Scituate and Hingham are thinking?

Thursday, October 23 at 7:30 p.m., the Cohasset League of Women Voters will host a Transportation Forum at the Unitarian Parish House on Main Street to help answer some of those questions.

Scheduled to speak are Don Graham and/or Pam Wolfe, consultants for the MBTA, who will present proposals for the Greenbush Line overall; Richard Bowen, a Scituate resident on the Restoration Committee, who will give the pros and cons of particulars as it affects Scituate; Bill Grimes, a Hingham resident on the Restoration Committee, who will discuss reasons supporting the project; and Dick Cook, a Hingham resident, also on the Committee, who will discuss reasons for opposing the project.

For those of you who cannot attend the meeting, local cable service has offered to tape the meeting to air at a later date in all three towns involved.

Abend Musik in Norwell

The Abendmusik, or "evening musicale," was a tradition begun by Dietrich Buxtehude in 1673 when he was church musician in Lubeck, Germany. It was to attend one of these famous services of music and readings that J.S. Bach supposedly walked 50 miles.

Whether the story is true or not, First Parish, Norwell has held an Abendmusik for the past five years. This year it will feature bass-baritone Mark St. Laurent and double bassist Lawrence Wolfe, a Norwell resident, who is known for playing both with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. St. Laurent, recently graduated from the School of Music at Indiana University, has been a fellow in the Aspen Chamber Choir for three years and attended the Bach Aria Festival as a fellow this past year. He is currently a soloist at Emmanuel Church in Boston and is a member of Banchetto Musicale.

The music on Sunday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. will include Brahms' beautiful "Four Serious Songs," by English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams, familiar American songs arranged by Aaron Copland, and "Per questa bella mano" by Mozart for double bass and bass voice.

The service will begin in First Parish Meeting House at 8 p.m. Donations will be accepted gladly.

If you do not drive at night or drive at all, we do not want you to have to walk as Bach did; you may leave your name and number at the church office (659-7122) or with Doug Perry (826-9814) and a ride will be arranged for you.

The next program will be Saturday, October 25, from noon to 2 p.m. in the Parish House. Bring a friend if you like and don't forget the bag lunch. The topic: "Men".

Obituary

Peter Anderson

Peter Anderson, Time-Life magazine photographer for 25 years, died July 13, 1986 at McQuister Hospital, Commerce, Texas at age 68.

Mr. Anderson, locally known for his teaching at The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, began his career as an Army photographer in 1941. His far-reaching experiences include an invitation from Life news editor, Gene Farmer, to work with the internationally acclaimed Black Star Picture Agency, and a faculty position at the International Center of Photography, New York.

Mr. Anderson worked on creative assignments in Africa, Singapore, South America, Mexico, Australia, and the South Pacific. Mr. Anderson's excellence reached one of the many high peaks when he was selected as Editor and Consultant for Cornell Capa's famed "Jerusalem, City of Mankind" and "Concerned Photographer II" New York City exhibits in 1973-74.

Mr. Anderson once described himself as a "compassionate creator," with the ability to "see the unusual and striking." When reflecting upon his life's work, Peter once commented that his professional career took on a deeper and more personal meaning in teaching and he enjoyed a "hands on" approach to working with his students at The South Shore Art Center and New England School for Photography.

Mr. Anderson's camaraderie, efferent enthusiasm and clear intellect will be remembered by friends and students and a celebration of his life, work, and friendships will take place October 26, 1 to 3 p.m. in Hull at his studio, 29 Reef Point. R.S.V.P. to: 383-9548 or 731-3299.

Peter Anderson

An exhibition of selected photographs will also be on display at the South Shore Art Center October 19-November 10.

Contributions to the Peter Anderson Photography Award Fund can be made by contacting Margaret Dillon at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Weymouth ponders trash-to-energy plant at incinerator

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The Weymouth Board of Public Works is expected to indicate this week how it will proceed with plans to convert the defunct town incinerator into a trash-to-energy plant.

The decision could have far-reaching impact on how other South Shore towns handle solid-waste disposal in the future.

The Weymouth decision could eliminate the need for further study of regional solid-waste facilities, an official of the South Shore Coalition said Thursday.

Some alternatives may offer solutions to a growing waste-disposal dilemma on the South Shore. Many towns are quickly running out of landfill space; disposal costs for towns already using out-of-town commercial landfills are expected to double or triple within two years as contracts expire.

Public-works commissioners will hear a final presentation from Power Recovery Systems Inc. of Cambridge on a conversion proposal at a special meeting Thursday night. The firm expressed interest in the defunct Wharf Street facility about two years ago.

Negotiations to lease the incinerator to Power Recovery were broken off in May because the firm would not guarantee acceptance of trash if the facility were to be shut down for any reason.

Since that time, four other firms have indicated some interest in leasing the incinerator for conversion into a plant that would burn trash to produce electricity.

Power Recovery is being given "a final opportunity to give a presentation and a firm proposal" to Weymouth, or the process will be widened to include the other firms, said public-works Director Frank S. Lagrotteria.

A coalition subcommittee has been studying future solid-waste needs on the South Shore since late winter. Although it has several sites under preliminary consideration for a regional disposal facility, the committee awaits the Weymouth public-works decision before it continues its work.

The major issue is the trash-handling capacity of the plant. Lagrotteria said alternative plans would produce capacities of 200 to 400 tons per day.

Jean Christensen, coalition project manager, said a 200-ton-per-day plant is enough for Weymouth and perhaps one other community. Weymouth generates nearly 100 tons of residential rubbish each day.

More capacity would allow the plant to accept trash from neighboring communities, eliminating the need for a regional facility.

"Our hottest prospect right now is in Weymouth — they are the closest to a decision on this issue," Christensen said at a meeting of coalition representatives in Marshfield last week.

The coalition plans to urge the public-works board to consider proposals nearest 400 tons per day, which would solve disposal problems for many of the coalition's nine member communities.

Christensen said disposal is becoming a critical issue through a combination of factors. The state is tightening environmental controls over landfills, making them more costly to operate. Dwindling space at municipal andcommercial dumps also forces costs upward.

Transportation of rubbish through congested East Weymouth may be a problem, coalition members said. The incinerator — closed 10 years ago by federal officials because of excessive air pollution — is located on Wharf Street near Weymouth Back River and Jackson Square.

Lagrotteria discounted the concerns, saying a revitalized plant would result in no more than 15 trucks per day through the area.

The town could also establish truck routes requiring haulers to use certain routes to the plant, he added.

"That's making a mountain out of a molehill," Lagrotteria said. "The truck traffic will never reach the same level as when the incinerator was running."

An average of 600 vehicles traveled to the active incinerator on Saturdays, he said.

"And not all that truck traffic will go through Jackson Square. The town will have final say on truck routes."

Along with disposal, coalition towns must begin to institute recycling programs and other measures to reduce the size of the trash stream, Hingham's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council said.

"A very-active recycling program must be initiated right away," or most regional disposal solutions will not be practical, Kenneth Moll of Hingham told coalition representatives.

Kennedy says Star Wars funds better used for ships

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Funds earmarked for research on the Strategic Defense Initiative could better be used building ships in the defunct Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy said Tuesday.

President Reagan's insistence on the so-called "star wars" defensive system will commit taxpayers to greater expense, but will not result in greater security for the world, the senator told 750 people at a conference in Randolph sponsored by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

"We have to put an end to this madness," Kennedy said. "The use of SDI in outer space effectively abrogates the ABM (Anti-Ballistic Missile) Treaty with the Soviets.

"This is something like two people who are waist-deep in gasoline. One has 10 matches and the other has 20. We've spent $1.6 trillion on defense in eight years, but it hasn't made us more secure."

Kennedy told the Chamber he supports a "modest" level of research on SDI, but would oppose its use in outer space.

"I have word that the Soviets are working on their own version of SDI. What we need is a comprehensive test ban," for "star wars" research cannot proceed without nuclear testing at some point in the process.

"We could be building ships for the Rapid Deployment Force at Quincy with that money, instead of spending it on something that won't mean greater security," Kennedy said.

In an interview, the senator also said he is optimistic that Congress will approve a transportation measure that includes funding for a depressed Central Artery and third harbor tunnel in Boston, projects that could ease congestion on the lower Southeast Expressway.

The current session will end in a few days as members prepare final campaign swings. Kennedy said the measure, now in a conference committee, is supported by senators and congressmen who are working on it.

The senator said the bill is being held up as conferees work out a compromise on a bill that would raise the national speed limit on rural superhighways.

"It's got a fair chance this session. There's no opposition from any of the conferees, but it can't be resolved until the speed-limit issue is cleared up."

"I support it, and it ought to go through once that issue is resolved."

Kennedy told the audience that he agrees with changes introduced in the Tax Reform Act, which should ease the burden on lower-income taxpayers.

The lower corporate tax rate should be of benefit to small business on the South Shore, but the bill did not result in simpler tax regulations, he said.

"We didn't do a good job on simplifying the tax code, and I would give that a 'C' grade," Kennedy said.

Coalition supports regional animal control shelter

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Hingham Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy received the support of South Shore Coalition members in his proposal for a regional animal-control shelter in Hingham.

Murphy proposed using the ammunition depot at the former GSA Building off Beal Street for a shelter to house up to 48 dogs and 30 cats on a temporary basis.

No firm cost figures are available because a Hingham study committee is reviewing the proposal. Murphy said the shelter could be fully operational in about three years.

Under state law, the shelter may only house stray pets for 11 days before they must be adopted or destroyed. "A humane society can keep animals indefinitely, but we won't be able to," he said.

Indoor runs would be provided for animals to eliminate noise-pollution problems. In addition to housing strays, the facility would serve as shelter for animals displaced by fire or accident, and would be a quarantine center for animals that have bitten people.

Murphy said towns joining the system could sign a contract or pay a per-capita fee for shelter services, issues which are also under study by the Hingham committee.

The shelter would be established in addition to control efforts in towns that lack such facilities. Coalition representatives expressed some interest in a facility that would assume all animal-control functions.

"Perhaps we could set this up to do it all from the beginning," said Selectman Diane Sullivan of Cohasset. "A few employees of the facility could take over animal control in all the towns."

That setup could be more economical to member communities, which now duplicate services and equipment like vans, said Hanover Selectman Janet O'Brien.

Whatever the agreement between towns, Murphy said the regional shelter will work "if animal-control officers do their number-one job under state law: licensing and vaccination.

"The leash law, barking dogs and other animal issues are all secondary," he said. "This could be self-sustaining if these are done, which doesn't happen in many towns in the state."

Prelude fall concert series scheduled for Saturday

The Prelude Concert series fall performance featuring the Orford String Quartet, with guest artist James Campbell, clarinet, will be presented on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 8 p.m. at the Scituate Town Library, and will include works by Beethoven, Mozart and Dvorak.

This program is made possible with support from the Massachusetts Council on the arts and Humanities, a state agency, and is funded in part by a grant from South Shore Playhouse Associates.

Tickets are $10, and may be reserved in advance by calling 545-0238, or may be purchased at the door the evening of the performance.

Featuring Andrew Dawes (violin), Kenneth Perkins (violin), Robert Levine (viola) and Denis Brott (cello), the Orford Quartet is currently celebrating its 21st season.

Their Scituate performance follows a week of concerts at Expo '86 in Vancouver. Hailed as "an absolutely first-rate group" by the New York Times. The Orford was recently awarded the Canadian Music Council's prestigious "Ensemble of the Year Award" in recognition of 20 years of concert-giving, recording and the commissioning and performance of Canadian compositions.

Their CBC Mozart double album won the 1985 Juno Award (Canada's Grammy) for best album in the solo and chamber category. The Orford is Quartet-in-Residence at the University of Toronto, and its members all serve as associate professors on the faculty of the University's School of Music.

The Orford String Quartet has performed extensively throughout Canada, the United States, Europe and Australia, and the coming year will include its first tour of South America, as well as its debut performance for the renowned 92nd Street Y Chamber series.

Guest artist James Campbell is one of the few classical clarinetists today enjoying an international solo career.

Remembering those college baseball days with Roger

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

When you're a kid, baseball is a magical fantasy, larger than life. Baseball is the stuff of dreams.

One of my favorite childhood memories is of trading baseball cards with my best friend, Jake Perry.

Jake and I would hop on our bikes and ride to the Grand Union shopping mall in Basking Ridge, New Jersey.

There, we would each buy stack of baseball cards and make our way to the Capri Pizzeria. As we chomped on our slices of pizza, with cheese and tomato sauce glopping all over the place, we sorted through the treasure.

The best card I ever got was of Willy Mays. Of course, there was Bob Gibson, Henry Aaron and Tom Seaver, but to me Willy Mays was the coup de grace.

I still have that card somewhere.

Jake still has all his cards; he kept collecting after I moved to Massachusetts in 1976. He has more than 10,000 baseball cards now.

My interest in baseball was fostered by my fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Wiedeman. She was an avid New York Mets fan. And she started me in that direction.

But in that year of the bicentennial and of my transplantation to New England, I pledged allegience to a new team.

A guy who worked for the moving company set me straight; he gave me a Red Sox yearbook. I soon went to Fenway Park and was hooked.

I was a Fenway fanatic, even after Bucky Dent hit that sorry excuse for a home run in the Yankees 1978 sudden death playoff game here.

But, I got side-tracked in the latter years of high school with "more important" stuff. When the baseball strike came along, I completely lost interest.

Commentary

The spring of 1983 was a special season for me, for my interest in baseball was reborn.

As a sophomore at the University of Texas at Austin, I spent many Saturday afternoons stretched out in the stands of Disch-Falk field, chatting with friends and cheering the Longhorns to victory.

College life is somewhat surreal anyway, so a day at Disch-Falk was a real escape.

My friends and I always took seats down the first base line, behind "The Wild Bunch." This was a group of rowdies who perched behind the visitors' duggout and tormented the opposition almost as much as the 'horns did.

In the first game of a double-header against Texas-Arlington, a leftfielder named Julio dropped an easy fly ball. The bunch was merciless.

"Julio! Julio!" they screamed, waving their arms and looking up at the sky. We didn't see Julio in game two.

The Wild Bunch was a lot of fun, if you were rooting for the Longhorns. Customarily, they played the national anthem and "The Eyes of Texas" on their kazoos before each game. They didn't mind that kazoos were forbidden; after all, kazoos are even smaller than flasks.

When the "symphony" wasn't sounding between innings, the radio announcers often played country music; George Strait and Willie Nelson were big favorites. But of course, the main event was baseball.

Perhaps the only things hotter than the jalepeno peppers served up on our nachos, were the fastballs served up to opposing batters by pitchers Roger Clemens and Calvin Schiraldi.

When I saw Clemens in the dorm TV room, he was just another guy spitting tobacco juice into a soda can.

We were never introduced, and I don't think I ever even talked to him; little did I know he would become a Boston sports legend. He looked like an average Texan to me, if there is such a thing.

But on the baseball field, he was no average Texan. He and Schiraldi led the Longhorns to a national championship that year.

As Fenway fans watch the derring-do of my fellow Texas Exes in the World Series this week, perhaps they can sense the spirit and style that was branded on players who practiced the art of "Gusball" that year.

In Austin, "Gusball" is baseball Cliff Gustafson style. "Taking anything you can get" and turning it into victory was the Longhorns' way of playing the game.

In many games, the 'horns sewed things up with more runs than hits. As a Red Sox fan, I always thought that was strange.

Spike Owen, who was the 'horns star shortstop during my freshman year was a "Gusball" kind of guy. He scratched out infield hits, stole bases and played hard-nosed defense.

Owen, Clemens and Schiraldi reflected the get-tough style that through the years, has helped the orange-and-white win more than 80 percent of its games under "Gus."

I saw Gustafson win his 900th game two years later, in 1985. He had been coaching baseball for 18 years at U.T.

That year, I graduated and came home to Red Sox country.

You know, when you're a kid, baseball is a magical fantasy, larger than life. Baseball is the stuff of dreams.

Now, we are all watching Spike Owen, Roger Clemens and Calvin Schiraldi play "Gusball."

On a whim, I went out and bought a stack of baseball cards the other day.

After all, the Red Sox are in the World Series, and I guess I'm still just a kid at heart.

Election Referundum Questions, Part I

(First of a two-part series)

The popular referendum, a form of direct democracy in which the electorate functions as its own legislature in the making and unmaking of law, stems from the Progressive Movement in the Midwest in the early part of this century. In Massachusetts the referendum has played an increasingly important role in the last two decades. For example, Proposition 2½ came to pass in 1980 as a referendum question after being soundly defeated in the legislature.

Despite its role on that occasion in saving the liberal Commonwealth from itself, the referendum in its current proliferated form is not necessarily a good thing. With the manipulation of language, special interests can trick the electorate into voting for the opposite of its true will. Moreover, since people are naturally credulous and tend to vote "Yes" in referenda unless given a formidable reason not to, the special interests that collect the signatures that create referenda have a built-in political advantage. The referendum system, then, is a proper back-up in the event of legislative failure; but it carries with it the risk of bringing about bad law, and what on account of permanence is worse, bad amendments to the state constitution.

The best assurance against the passage of bad referenda is an informed electorate. Herewith, therefore, a synopsis of the first four of this year's eight questions along with my commentary. (I gave some thought to leaving out the commentary; but since the author's prejudices exist whether or not declared, I decided that the reader is more fully informed if the opinions the author holds are openly declared).

Question I: Regulating or Prohibiting Abortion.

Question I is a proposed constitutional amendment that would do two things: It would allow the state to regulate or forbid abortion and it would assure that the state would not be required by the state constitution to fund abortion in public assistance programs. The provisions of this amendment are conditional on their being consistent with the U.S. Constitution, which is not now the case. In other words, unless and until Roe v. Wade, the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court Decision that legalized abortion nationwide, is overturned, this amendment will remain moot.

If you are pro-life you probably favor this amendment; if you are pro-choice you probably oppose it. Either way, if you do not like your tax dollars paying for abortion you probably favor the amendment. On the other hand, there may be a few of you who oppose abortion but who believe that if abortion is legal, it ought to be readily available to the poor. In that case you may want to vote "no" on the amendment.

I approach this question somewhat differently. Although as a matter of public policy I favor legalized abortion, I am very concerned that the courts in the last 25 years have been appropriating powers that previously resided with the people. The question is: on matters of grave public policy do the people rule or does an elite of judges decide for the people? When the matter is a question of constitutional law, it is the judges who decide; in other matters, it would be the people.

In my view, Roe vs. Wade, which manufactured a constitutional "right" to abortion during the first trimester of pregnancy, was terrible constitutional law, a usurpation of a public policy decision that should be made by the people through their elected representatives. For that reason I am going to vote "yes" on Question I.

There . . . now I've offended everyone.

Question II: Government Aid to Non-public Schools and Students

There are two arguments for this proposed amendment. The first is that the prohibition against aid to private and parochial schools was conceived in the last century amid anti-Catholic sentiment and therefore needs to be undone. The second is that families who send their children to private schools make, in effect, a double contribution to the public schools. First, they pay taxes that support the public schools. Secondly, by removing their children from the public schools they reduce the cost of public education to society.

The main argument against Question II (which I find persuasive) is that government support for the private school student would inevitably weaken its commitment to the public school student. Aid to private schools would increse the exodus of the middle class from the public schools, leaving them the dumping ground for the poorest students both economically and educationally.

Therefore, as Avi Nelson has pointed out, aid for private schools might be their undoing. The greatest value of private and parochial schools is their spiritual and intellectual independence. Who can believe that any aid package that would come out of Beacon Hill would not come with serious strings attached?

Question III: Limiting State Tax Revenue Increases

Question III, a proposed law (not constitutional amendment) would do to and for state government what Proposition 2½ did to and for local government: limit spending by limiting taxing. Most of the same people are for and against Question III who were for and against its predecessor in 1980. Barbara Anderson of Citizens for Limited Taxation is backing it; with a few exceptions your liberal luminaries are opposed to it.

The strongest argument in favor of Question III is that at present state government is ga-ga with new spending plans. According to economist Warren Brookes of the Herald, spending in the second Dukakis administration has incresed 46%—far ahead of both personal income growth and inflation. It seems every time you turn around there's the Duke on the tube announcing some swell-soundiung program that will cost $70 to $80 million per annum and will create another bureaucracy to suck up money in 1996 in the administration of let's say Gov. Bill Golden.

The best argument against Question III is that although state spending has increased faster than inflation and personal income during the last four years, much of the increase has gone back to the communities as local aid—aid without which Proposition 2½ would have failed.

Who is right? That's what we will decide November 4. I'm going to vote "yes" because I am convinced that this personally most frugal of governors has indeed gone "ga-ga" over spending in his second term.

Question IV: Cleaning Up Oil & Hazardous Materials

Question IV is a proposed law that would mandate that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) take a specific complex series of actions over the next several years in identifying and cleaning up hazardous ground materials. The argument for it is the argument I have repeatedly made in this space: that the threat to our drinking water is environmental enemy number one. This threat is a matter that deservedly requires a mighty chunk of the present state surplus—for the "constituency" of water drinkers is all of us.

Nevertheless, I do not favor Question IV. It provides no funding—DEQE would have to go to the legislature or dip into funds earmarked for other important programs. Moreover, as written, Question IV has an anti-landowner bias. It would publicize possible hazardous sites before verification, and it would hold the landowner fully liable for contaminated property he presently owns but did not own when contaminated.

This is an issue that should be dealt with by the legislature, not the referendum. The legislature working with the governor and with Regional Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency Michael Deland ought to be able to come up with a much better plan than this one.

Incidentally, Mike Deland is emerging as one of the great public servants of our time. A full account of his remarkable life in a future column. Next week a full account of Questions V-VIII.

Politicus stance on nuclear power applauded

Letters

To the Editor:

David A. Mittell's column on nuclear power displayed a great deal of common sense, and its good to see that more and more journalists are looking askance at the political posturing and the emptyheaded activism.

As Mr. Mittell implies, we have far more serious hazards than nuclear power, and should be paying attention to them.

Nuclear power may be moribund in this country, thanks to needless costs of the regulatory morass and the preferences of our politicians to take advantage of the public's ignorance rather than lead them out of it.

But, it certainly is healthy in Canada, which plans to export nuclear generated electricity and to use nuclear energy for process steam at a distillery. It certainly is not dead in France, which now gets 65 percent of its electricity from the peaceful atom, and probably over 90 percent by the turn of the century. Nor in Japan and other industrialized nations. Nor in the USSSR which already is starting up the undamaged units at Chernobyl—while we wring our hands like aborigines panicked by an eclipse of the sun.

I can't agree with Mr. Mittell that all nuclear plants should be operated by some quasi-military bureaucracy, rather than by the utilities which own them.

Not only do the owners have considerable self-interest to encourage prevention of accidents, but they are under the watchful eyes of not only the NRC but also the industry's own watchdog organization. The canard that the NRC isn't severe is repeated by Mr. Mittell—but it just isn't so. Anyway, I'd like any plant near me to be operated by people whose families also live nearby, not by strangers transferred like soldiers from plant to plant and who need a little time to find the way to the washroom and the fuse boxes.

Mr. Mittell suggests that nuclear proponents haven't paid attention to the history and lessons of science. Just the opposite. I've been involved for 35 years, and even in the earliest days we recognized the necessity to preclude accidents, and to mitigate their consequences, by careful attention to detail and to quality of equipment and construction.

In later years, this became more codified by regulation—in fact, codified beyond the point of diminishing returns, and cursed by the tendency of critics to assume that even a minor departure from an excruciatingly detailed standard was a safety deficiency.

What really makes our plants so safe is the competence and integrity of the engineering and scientific profession—and by our democratic society that frees them from the terrible pressures imposed in an authoritarian society.

Despite this competence and integrity, the public continues to be mislead by all sorts of distorted stories cooked up and disseminated by people with little technical competence and no sense of responsibility, especially some of our most mouthy public officials. David Mittell's column is a refreshingly sensible look at the issue.

Public school basic skills testing to begin soon

During the next few weeks, about 180,000 Massachusetts public school students in grades 3, 6 and 9 will take, for the first time, uniform state-administered basic skills tests in reading, mathematics and writing.

These new tests, required by Chapter 188 of the School Improvement Act of 1985, are aimed at identifying students in need of remedial help. The results of the testing, to be reported in January, are not tied to high school graduation.

Harold Raynolds, Jr., Massachusetts Commissioner of Education, explained the state has an obligation to parents and taxpayers of the Commonwealth to assist schools in identifying and providing remedial help for students who have not mastered basic skills.

"The State Board of Education and I believe that Chapter 188 gives us an important opportunity to fulfill that obligation. Every year we shall report to the schools and the public on the educational progress of Massachusetts students in meeting basic skills standards," Raynolds said. "We shall do it in a way that ensures fairness in testing, accuracy in reporting and usefulness in helping students with basic skills deficiencies," he said.

The Basic Skills Testing Program is the second of two programs mandated under Chapter 188. The results of the first, the Massachusetts Educational Assessment Program administered last spring, will be reported next month. The purpose of the assessment program is to encourage curriculum improvement at both the school building and district levels.

The reading and mathematics tests include between 50 and 60 multiple choice items, while the writing test presents a topic about which students must write. The reading tests cover word recognition skills, vocabulary, comprehension, critical reading skills and study skills. The mathematics tests cover numbers, numeration, operations, variables and relations, measurement, geometry, problem solving skills, and probability and statistics appropriate to each grade level. The writing test will be scored on the basis of how well the student communicates, develops and details ideas, and uses complete sentences and appropriate writing conventions.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'Going back to high school'

There were more speed bumps, but driving into the parking lot of Clay High School in Oregon, Ohio, ten miles east of Toledo, was not very different in the fall of 1986 than it had been twenty years ago, when I performed it in a 1955 Chevrolet.

I returned to my home town for that curious rite-of-passage, the 20th high school reunion. Since I was soon to discover what the years had wrought upon my former classmates, I thought it fitting that I also see what changes it had brought to the school.

Walking up the old sidewalk felt strange. It was such a familiar feeling, yet it was alien. Everything looked the same except for some spray-painted, rock and roll graffitti on the sidewalk; "Doors," it said, and "Nugent lives."

Exiting the building was a stream of young females in shorts and tee shirts, varsity athletes, a phenomenon unknown in my time.

I entered near the gym. The showcases were full of trophies. On the walls were the names of those admitted to the school's athletic Hall of Fame, including three from my class.

The names of those who died in various combats were also listed. Three of my classmates were there, too.

As I walked the corridor toward the principal's office, the place seemed the same. Peeping in the classrooms I saw neat, institutional green areas, which few teachers bothered to try to personalize.

The large study hall had been transformed into offices, a testament to the increase in administrative and support people public education now finds necessary.

To my surprise and pleasure the library had been expanded and made more warm and inviting. There were rooms with forbidding computer-like installations, as well as a great many more books than I remember. "The Nation" and "Baseball Digest" were available from a substantial periodical display.

Henry Spring has been principal for three years. He had been both a teacher and a guidance counselor at the school for nineteen of the past twenty years. We said that we remembered each other and had not changed.

Since I was not bald, nor did I have a grey beard when I attended high school, I understood his compliment to mean that I had not changed in my essentials, while minor changes had come and gone. This was also true of the school, I discovered.

My class contained 293 students. Last year 272 graduated. Now, as in 1966, about 30 percent go on to four-year colleges. The variety of vocational education is much greater today, however, in terms of what is available in high school as well as after graduation.

The racial mix is nearly the same, though the changes are significant. In 1966 there were no blacks. Now there are seven. There is one black person on the faculty. There are also seven Asian pupils and forty-two Hispanics. There have always been a small number of Hispanics, whose families came to pick tomatoes and stayed. One of the blacks is drum major of the marching band.

Mr. Spring said the main difference between pupils now and 20 years ago is that they are now more self-confident and assertive, less impressed by authority. Though this has some negative consequences, he felt most of them were positive.

Other changes had touched this school, as they had elsewhere. While he didn't think there were any pregnant girls in school presently, there certainly had been. He stressed that school policy had always been relatively mute on this issue, that unofficial social policy had been more of a factor. He also felt that while five years ago pregnancy had almost been a kind of status symbol, now it was becoming less acceptable to teenagers themselves.

The same could be said of drug use. In the mid-seventies the rescue squad came to the school regularly to aid kids with drug overdose. While some drugs are still being used at school, it had declined. Cocaine, he addd, doesn't seem to be around, perhaps because the kids can't afford it.

Alcohol has always been more of a problem than any other drug, and continues to be. Parental tolerance of alcohol use by teens, and the many examples of adult alcohol abuse contribute to the problem.

Sports, he said, are still important, but they aren't as intense as they used to be, which he felt is good. Kids have more options, both in school and out.

The school didn't quit saying the Lord's Prayer at the beginning of the day until well into the 1970's. Nobody ever complained about the prayer, though it was used years after the Supreme Court decision. And when they quit saying it nobody much cared, either.

However, two teachers started a Fellowship of Christian Athletes around 1975 and for awhile every inter-scholastic game at the school began with a prayer. Then a mother of a Jewish player on an opposing team said she would sue if a prayer was said. End of prayer before games.

The drama club had won an award for a play about children in a Jewish ghetto in World War II. The plays my class performed were fluffy musicals or comedies.

I suppose every generation views itself as more innocent, more sheltered than kids today. The pupils at my old high school may dress more fashionably They may experiment with sex and drugs more thoroughly than we did. They may have computers and girls' basketball teams and more awareness of the world beyond northwestern Ohio.

But still only a third of them go to college and fewer finish. They still become farmers and electricians and nurses and marry mostly each other. And a very few wander to distant cities, seldom to return.

As I walked to my car the football team and band were practising for the Homecoming game. A couple was making out with relative discretion in the rear of the parking lot. My old school and I had both changed greatly in twenty years, but we were both also the same, at least when it came to the essentials.

Column ignores real threat of drug use

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Darrell Berger's article in the Sept. 24/25 issue of Weymouth News entitled "What I Know About Drugs".

Berger writes, what I believe is, an honest and candid account of his knowledge about drugs and also comments on society's augmented concern with drugs.

Berger's article is dangerous. A young person, naive and unsophisticated about the immense dangers drugs present, could easily be misled by this article.

While Berger does not directly condone drug use, he does seem to make implications diminishing the severity of drug use in America.

He boldly states, "I know drugs are being used in the 1980's the way commmunism was used in the 1950's, as a scapegoat, an excuse for all society's problems." Hardly is this the case, and if it were, so what! Surely, one of the biggest problems, if not the biggest, in America today is the rampant use of drugs by its citizens.

Berger makes several comparisons between drug use in the 1960's (the time when Berger first learned about drugs) and the 1980's. Mr. Berger, let me tell you, there is no comparison.

Drugs are not just an experimental kick the way they were in the 1960's, they are consuming peoples' lives. The people today are not smoking a joint or taking a hit of acid, they are snorting cocaine and injecting heroin into their veins.

They are using strongly addictive drugs; their lives become a battle to find a means to obtain another snort of coke or shot of heroin. Also, the popular drugs of this decade are expensive, short-lasting, and life-threatening' the popular drugs of the sixties were relatively inexpensive, longer-lasting, and less volatile. In no way should one make a comparison between these type of drugs. The only thing that they have in common is that they're illegal and harmful to one's health.

What is really amazing is that Berger actually makes a comparison between the ramifications of pot to those of alcohol, bigotry, or nuclear reactors. First of all, let me respond by reminding him that alcohol is also a drug. Secondly, why compare something bad (pot) with something else which is bad (bigotry, and nuclear reactors). I do not want to dispute Berger's statement that "[pot] is not nearly as harmful to people as alcohol, bigotry, or nuclear reactors", because, indeed, all are harmful to man and society, but does that give justification for using pot? Because something is less bad than something else does that qualify it for legitimate use?

If I hit somebody in the fact with my fist, is that alright because it is less bad than hitting him with a baseball bat?

The biggest problem with Berger's article, though, is that, in an effort to disparage society's hysteria about the drug problem, which he fears may result in an infringement of peoples' rights, he is ignoring the real threat of drug use. He supports this by saying,

"Some people I know who used a lot of drugs are now doctors, lawyers, corporate vice presidents and ministers . . . My conclusion is that a person's future is determined more by their socio-economic circumstances and their personal motivation than by drug use. . . We ought to be able to keep drugs from destroying our society without destroying the Bill of Rights." I will agree that drugs have been on the newsfront for sometime and the President has even given a televised address on the subject, but not without ample justification. I will also agree that ones future is determined by factors other than drug use, but not very often today, for drug users in most cases, socio-economic circumstances and drug use go hand-in-hand. I wonder what kind of drugs these people, Mr. Berger knows, used. Was it cocaine, heroine, or PCP? Probably not.

And what kind of background did they come from to become professionals of society? The lower class? Probably not. Most likely they were upper-middle and upper class people experimenting with small quantities of pot and acid. They certainly were not lower and middle-class kids using cocaine or crack.

See Mr. Berger, the drugs are not the same as they were 20 years ago. I am sure there will be some young people today who may go so far as to experiment with pot or acid and eventually become pillars of the community, just as you say old hippies have.

But there are many more people who will not. I doubt that any crack users will become doctors, lawyers, corporate vice-presidents, ministers, factory workers, pipe-fitters, teachers, or housewives. What they will become, and are becoming, are criminals, welfare recipients, and general nuisances to the community.

Drugs like cocaine, crack, and heroine are so addictive it is difficult to hold a job or run a family; the habit requires complete allegiance, both in time and money. Once an addict's time and money are committed, more problems begin. They wonder, "How will I afford the next fix? Get a job? No. Can't think straight or function physically. Ask a friend for money? No. Have no more friends, the people I know are all addicts too. What should I do? Steal, rob, beat, mug, kill. Kill somebody with money. That's all." Thus, an innocent person is victimized and the next high is assured.

In conclusion, I can assure you, Mr. Berger, that the media's presentations of drug use is not "wildly wrong". On the contrary, it is sadly too accurate. The Heads may have laughed at the media in the sixties, but the only ones laughing today are the dealers, the ones who make tremendous amounts of money with minimal consequences if caught.

The drug situation today is alarming and warrants drastic actions. Those using them need to help themselves and stop, and society must help itself and crack down on the suppliers. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on this national crisis.

Sincerely,
Joseph R. Ganley

Rev. Darrell Berger clarifies drug statement

To the Editor:

Concerning Nancy Mills' desire for me to explain my statements about hallucinogenic drugs:

In a reaction to the wide-spread use of such drugs in the 1960's, they were made illegal for even research or clinical use. I believe this has deprived us of the potential they might have to help people understand themselves better, or to avail themselves of the ecstatic experience that such drugs have induced for centuries.

The abuse or involuntary use of such drugs is of course, deplorable. However, these abuses continue despite their illegality.

Perhaps I should have made this clearer in my column. My point was not that they were harmless, but that, with proper wisdom in their use, they could be, like many other druges, beneficial to humanity.

Some useful recipes for apples, squash & pumpkins

Here we are in the midst of apple country. All over the U.S.A. and abroad we are known for our McIntosh, Cortland, Baldwin, Rome and other delectable fruits. Tart-smooth and flavorful, smooth-skinned and vivid red, apples are being munched, baked, transformed into tempting desserts hot from the oven and if you're lucky, served as one of America's favorite dishes—hot apple pie and ice cream. Small to medium-sized fruits are less likely to be too ripe and mealy and as a general rule, sour apples require less cooking.

Apples that have already mellowed can be refrigerated to prevent their becoming over-ripe, but be sure to put them in the crisper or in a loosely closed plastic bag to maintain proper humidity. Casting all thoughts of dieting to the winds, let's all fill our kitchens with the aroma of Betty Molla's

1/8 tsp. ground cloves
1 c. chopped pecans or walnuts

Peel apples, cut into thick slices. Arrange in buttered pan. Cream butter, add flour and all other ingredients except the nuts. Spread this mixture over apples and bake in 350 oven for 25 min. Sprinkle with nuts and bake 15 min. longer. Serve hot with ice cream. Serves six to eight.

Squash, pumpkins, cucumbers and watermelon are all members or the gourd family and when it comes to the squashes, there are as many ways of preparing the different varieties as there are seeds in a Halloween pumpkin. Glossy, firm summer squash can still be found on our produce counters and can be eaten raw as a snack, as an hors d'oeuvre, or in salads. Broiled, pan-fried, stuffed, scalloped or even curried, it is a fairly good source of Vitamin C and is low in calories. With a baked potato and salad, one could really feast on this

BAKED STUFFED SQUASH

2 (8") summer or Zucchini squash
1 c. bread crumbs
1/2 c. grated Parmesan or Cheddar cheese
2 T chopped onion
1/4 tsp. garlic salt

Boil whole squash for 10 min. Immerse in cold water. Remove ends and slice lengthwise. Scoop out pulp, being careful not to tear shell. Mix pulp with crumbs, cheese, onion and garlic salt. Stuff shells with mixture. Place in baking dish with 1/8" water. Bake at 350 for 15 min. Serves 4 to 6.

Carving out a ghoulish face is about as ambitious as most of us care to get with a fresh pumpkin, opting instead for a can of puree. Capt. John Smith and his followers found the Indians staving off starvation with the hardy pumpkin which survived far into our cold New England winters. He wrote: "Amongst their corne, they also plante pumpeons, a fruit like until a muske million but lesse and worse." We have Rhea Chapman to thank for this recipe she found in the October issue of "Bon Appetit" featuring a full-page ad for Libby's

2 c. flour
1c. quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
1 tsp. ea. baking soda and cinnamon
1/2 tsp. salt
1 c. ea. butter or oleo, softened, firmly packed brown sugar and 1 c. granulated sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1 c. ea. Libby's solid pack pumpkin & semi-sweet chocolate morsels
Assorted icing or peanut butter and candies, raisins or nuts

Preheat oven to 350. Combine first five ingredients. Cream butter; gradually add sugars, beating 'til light and fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; mix well. Alternate additions or dry ingredients and pumpkin, mixing well after each addition. Stir in morsels.

For each cookie, drop 1/4 c. dough onto lightly greased cookie sheet; spread into pumpkin shape, using a thin metal spatula. Add a bit of dough for stem. Cool on racks. Decorate, using icing or peanut butter to affix assorted candies, raisins or nuts. Yields 19 to 20 cookies. One cup of raisins may be substituted for morsels.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

Equal time use for VCR movie requests

"Okay, you guys," I told my family, "listen up."

"From now on the VCR is mine and your father's every Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight. Got it?"

The Dragon looked puzzled. "You're going through another one of your assertive phases, aren't you? You've been reading one of those self-help books about how you should stop being a wimp and make people respect you and win through intimidation, haven't you? You're going to start throwing your weight around, aren't you?"

I nodded. "If it's all right with you."

Breida sighed. "Somehow that last statement was lacking in assertiveness."

I shrugged. "I have to start somewhere. Anyway, I'm serious about wanting the VCR on Saturdays. We spent over $300 for it, and we never get to use it. You kids must rent a dozen films a week and every time I walk through the living room either some machismo military type with an I.Q. to match his hat size is wiping out most of the Orient or someone with green hair is singing to someone with a safety pin through her nose or someone's family pet is being possessed by demons.

"So I go to my bedroom and shut the door and read while your father watches somebody named The Missing Link try to unscrew the head from somebody named The Adorable Adrian.

"Well, okay. That's fine six nights a week. But from now on Saturday is mine. I'm going to rent some good adult films, and pop some corn, and reclaim my own living room."

Larry looked up. "What kind of adult films?"

"Real grown up stuff," I told him. "Things like "1776" and "The Lion in Winter". Maybe that old Olivier black and white "Hamlet".

Some of the musicals I used to love like "Annie Get Your Gun" and "The King and I" and "South Pacific" and "Oliver". Movies that were part of my adolescence like "Casablanca" and "Joan of Arc" and "The Maltese Falcon" and "The Witness."

Larry nodded. "Just as I thought. By 'adult" you mean very old."

"Old movies," I retorted, "are a lot better than some of the trash they're making today. There was some substance; some plot; some character delineation."

The Dragon cleared his throat. "Since the Saturday night VCR is supposed to be community property, do you suppose we could rent "The Adventures of Fu Manchu?"

"Not as long as I'm being assertive you can't," I told him. "But I'm willing to compromise on "High Noon."

"Okay," he agreed. "If you promise not to sing along with the theme song."

"Deal. Whaddaya say I pick up an oldie but a goodie and you warm up the old VCR?"

He smiled. "Pick up a pizza, too. Hey, where is the VCR?"

Breida looked uneasy. "I know Skip loaned it to one of his friends but I think he got it back. It might be at Maureen's house. She has a Betamax and she could only get "Back to the Future" in a VCR film. Or it could be in Connecticut. Eileen wanted to tape "Emo."

I glared at her. "Fine. Just fine. But maybe we can salvage something for tonight. Are there any decent movies on network television?"

The Dragon consulted the t.v. listings. "We have a choice of three. Do you want to watch Sylvester Stallone wipe out Asia, catch Prince in "Purple Rain" or see "Lassie Meets the Exorcist?"

I sighed. "Let's go to our bedroom. Maybe with a little luck this'll be the night "The Missing Link unscrews Adrian's head."

Hull says okay to conditional sewer agreement

Sewer commissioners in Cohasset and Hingham are hailing a resolution passed by Hull Town Meeting October 16, as "a step in the right direction."

By voting in favor of the resolution, Hull residents told their sewer commission to continue to pursue intermunicipal agreements which would allow Cohasset and Hingham to dispose of their wastewater at Hull treatment facilities.

While Charles DeSantis, chairman of the Cohasset sewer commission and John Brandt, chairman of the Hingham sewer commission greeted the resolution as a positive sign, they took differing views of conditions attached to the resolution.

In the resolution, the Hull sewer commission stipulated, six conditions must be met before any intermunicipal agreement is reached.

"There are a few hurdles," DeSantis said, "but we feel those are all surmountable and we feel we'll be moving along now."

Brandt commented, "How far along the process is moved by this resolution, I'm unable to determine."

The conditions specified by Hull require first, sufficient capacity is available to handle out-of-town flows. The capacity will be determined when Hull is allowed to complete its Infiltration and Inflow study.

DeSantis explained, the sewer commissioners, along with the Tri-Town Committee, expect to meet soon with state senator Bill Golden. They hope to enlist his help in freeing funds for the study, which have been held up by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE).

Hull said it will expect no changes to be made with regard to facility operation, and of course Cohasset and Hingham would be called upon to "stabilize the costs of operation and maintainance."

Sergeant likes duty in a small town

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Being a police officer is every child's fantasy. Sgt. David Pomarico was no different.

"Sure," he answered, "I was no different than anyone else. Later, I liked the security of the job, and the independence, too. Most of the time you're in a cruiser by yourself, making the decisions by yourself. You're not always stuck behind a desk. You get out, you talk to people. It's not boring by a longshot."

"Police work is as busy as you make it. Even in a small town, there's lots of action," he added.

Pomarico was raised in East Weymouth. After two tours of duty as a U.S. Navy Seabee, Pomarico decided to give police work a try.

"A close friend of mine was a lieutenant in the Weymouth department. He told me to give it more thought. He said police departments were changing, and he didn't particularly like that," he recalled. "That man should have been a priest. He was so compassionate. He just didn't like the way the police departments were going. I stayed away for a while, but eventually I took the police exam.

Sgt. Pomarico was 30 years old when he was called from the Civil Service list to the Cohasset Police Department. "I knew it was what I wanted to

Kids learning to cope with divorce

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Edward Leonard is helping troubled kids of Cohasset cope with the pain of divorce.

As the new adjustment counselor at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, Leonard is forming a divorced kids' group for children whose parents are separated or divorced.

The group, he said, will be an offshoot from the groundwork of trust and compassion he has been laying since September.

While life in Cohasset seems calm and carefree, Leonard said he finds Cohasset children are like children everywhere.

"I find that kids are kids," he said, "and kids are going to have problems no matter where they live or where they go to school."

He explained, "Part of being a child is that their perception of what is, may not be the same as an adult's.

"What I try to do," he said, "is help the kids to see things in a different way than what they had before, and a lot of times, just to be able to express what's going on and how they feel about things."

A bewitching supply of some scary tales

These Halloween stories were written by the sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School. They are goulishly good!

A Ghostly Adventure

One dark, rainy, thundery night, this frightening ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he set off into the world, scaring a few cats on the way out. He had an idea that a graveyard was a good place to start, because some ghost-friends of his had told him about another ghost going to find a spooky adventure, and he had started out in a graveyard.

He floated past some stores with lights on. Just to keep in practice, he went in and scared one of the shopkeepers almost out of his wits! Then he floated from store to store, doing the same thing to all the other shopkeepers and a few late-night customers. When he came out he had a very pleased look on his face. "Still haven't lost the old touch!" he thought.

Without any more interruptions, the ghost reached the graveyard. He went a little more slowly as he got there, so as not to miss anything exciting. He had almost passed through the whole graveyard when he noticed a movement behind a big tombstone. He went to investigate. All of a sudden, an enormous white figure loomed out of the shadows, making horrible noises! He ran and ran (ghost-style). After a while he thought, "This is silly! I'm the ghost and I'm getting scared!" So he went cautiously back. He noticed another ghost floating around. He went up to this ghost. But before he could say a word, the other ghost said, "I say, old chap, I didn't mean to scare you that way!" Why, it was the ghost's older brother, Cecil, who hadn't been seen for years!

"Cecil!" yelled the ghost.

"Barney!" yelled Cecil. They embraced each other. They then went back to Barney's house, where they ate supper and drank hot chocolate.

Whenever either of them went on an adventure again, he always took the other one.

Gouls, goblins and creepy creatures invaded Cohasset Common last Sunday.

The Graveyard Adventure

One dark, rainy, thundery night this frightening ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he changed his disguise into skeleton mode, picked up his pots and pans, his metal chain and his taxicab driver hat and jumped out the door. Off into the night he raced, banging and crashing and making all sorts of noises until he got to a house. There, at the edge of the yard, he stopped short. After standing at the edge of the yard for a minute or two, there suddenly appeared a light that flicked on and off a few times from an attic window. That apparently was a sign for Mystery Skeleton to approach the house and come in through the door. Inside the door stood a ghost of midget size. Speaking in ancient language they came to an agreement to pay a visit to Rotten Hollow Graveyard where the witches worked.

Cohasset's week . . .

Dump closed, Nov. 11

The Board of Health informed the residents of Cohasset and all town licensed trash haulers that the Cedar Street Municipal Landfill will be closed on Tuesday, November 11 as it is the Veteran's Day holiday.

As the normal days the landfill is closed are Monday and Wednesday, please plan on the three day closure when bringing trash to the landfill for that week.

In addition, the Board wishes to remind everyone that leaving trash at the gates of the landfill is illegal and is punishable by a fine.

Polling hours

The polls for the Tuesday, Nov. 4 election, will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Hall. Town Clerk Frances Marks suggests that all voters study the referendum questions which are in this election ballot, before they enter the polling booth. A thorough knowledge of the questions will prevent delays in the voting booth, she said.

Harbor float design

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said the solution to the damage occurred to the floats at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant would not be to move them, but to take up the slack on the present mooring chains. "There is no way I can allow the floats that are presently moored to extend further out into the harbor," he stated in a letter to selectmen.

Recently, Hugo's general manager Gary Elsmore complained to selectmen that the floats at the restaurant were being damaged and he requested the town's help to move them.

But in his letter to selectmen, Harbormaster Ritter said the only solution to Hugo's problem is to "dredge out under the landing float so that it will not ground out at low tide or cut down the length of the landing float so the runway lands on the end of float." It currently lands in the middle of the float, Ritter noted.

"I do not think that the moving of the mooring is the solution," the harbormaster stated. He said he would meet with Elsmore to explain how taking the slack out would be a feasible solution. "There is no way I can allow the floats that are presently moored to extend further out into the harbor," he added.

This classroom was overtaken this week by a group of "Little Monsters" who paid a pre-Halloween visit to teacher Elizabeth Fink and aide, Mrs. Hodgson.

King Street intersection

Senator William Golden has asked the Department of Public Works to speed up the review of a design to realign the King Street/Rte. 3A intersection.

Sen. Golden, in a letter to Robert Smith, district highway engineer of the DPW, said his office has received numerous phone calls from Cohasset officials and residents regarding the accidents that occurred there in the last six months. Cohasset officials have requested that construction of the street intersection begin before the winter.

"In speaking with the Cohasset Police Department," he continued, "my office was informed that several accidents have occurred since the initial visit by the State Department of Public Works."

The state DPW officials have visited the site and agreed that changes must be made to the dangerous intersection at Rte. 3A and the northern portion of King Street. Resident Dan Cotton outlined for local and state officials the number of serious accidents that have occurred there. The state DPW has worked out a plan to realign the intersection so that cars entering King Street from the state highway will not be traveling at a high rate of speed.

In his letter, Sen. Golden asked for an update on the project currently being designed by the town and the state.

Patrolman appointment next week

Selectmen expect to appoint a patrolman to the Cohasset Police Department at next week's meeting.

At Monday night's meeting, selectmen interviewed one candidate in addition to the three currently under consideration for the single appointment.

Rob Kierce of South Main Street was interviewed during Monday night's session. He was fourth in the list of Civil Service candidates who agreed to accept the position if it is offered. Kierce, a Marine veteran, is currently a night supervisor at WearGuard in Norwell. He attends Northeastern University on a part-time basis and has 67 credits toward a bachelor's degree in law enforcement.

In reply to selectmen's questions, Kierce said he intends to complete his degree requirements but is not considering a career in law. His experience and background in the military police spurred his interest in a career in law enforcement.

During his three-year active duty with the Marines, Kierce said he was involved in search and rescue, quelling civil disturbances and bar fights, and assisting in auto accidents and traffic control.

"I get along well with people in stressful situations," Kierce said when questioned by Selectman Diane Sullivan. He recalled one night when, serving as a military police officer, he responded to a family disturbance. With assistance from his partner, Kierce said he was able to control the tense situation.

When asked why he wanted to become a Cohasset officer, he replied, "I come from a family of eight. My family enjoys this town. It's a very friendly town. The people are considerate and kind. It's a nice place to live."

Kierce explained that he did not write veteran's preference on his application to the Cohasset department. Although he did put it into his Civil Service test application, Kierce said he did not fully understand if he should state his veteran's status in the local application. Selectman Cliff Mitman explained that veterans are given preference in the local selection.

Selectmen re-interviewed police patrolman candidate Vernon Hubbard. The 30 year-old patrolman candidate was questioned about his Cohasset residence. Selectmen explained that preference is given to local candidates. They questioned where Hubbard resided since there was no census record of his living in Cohasset since April, 1985 as he previously told selectmen.

Hubbard, who said he has been working and living in Philadelphia for six weeks, said he moved to Church Street in April, 1985. "And when I come back, that is where I'll live," he added.

Hubbard said all his mail is forwarded to the Church Street residence. He reaffirmed his decision to apply to the Cohasset Police Department.

William Oliver, a Cohasset lobsterman, attended his second interview for the patrolman's position. He was the only candidate to divulge his Civil Service test score of 92.

When asked what disturbed him the most, Oliver replied, "drugs. It's a needless part of our society. Also, people who lie disturb me. I believe in honesty and trust."

The candidate said he is a sports enthusiast and participated on many teams while in high school.

The fourth candidate, Peter Plante, had already been interviewed twice for the position.

Drug abuse challenge

Selectmen unanimously voted to proclaim Tuesday, Nov. 18, Drug and Alcohol Awareness Day.

Selectman Diane Sullivan and Executive Secretary Don Andrew met Wednesday morning with town officials to discuss how the community will observe that day. Among those present at Wednesday's meeting were: PSO President Claudia Story, Michael Gill, director of health education in the Cohasset schools, Police Chief Joseph Kealey and Sgt. Brian Noonan, Fire Chief Daniel Brock, Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton and Social Service League representative Denise Desmond.

According to Selectman Sullivan, "The Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, and the national media have established an environment in which substance abuse is recognized as a factor common to all communities.

"We want to take this opportunity to support the local agencies and groups that have worked to arrest this problem, and to offer our support for their continued and future efforts," she added.

The next meeting of Cohasset officials will be held Thursday, Nov. 6.

Advisory Committee rejects field reconsideration

Despite receiving five letters requesting a second review, the advisory committee decided not to reconsider a request for $16,700 by the Milliken Field Improvement Committee.

The reason for the denial, according to advisory committee chairman Fred Koed, is that town meeting approved by only a four-vote margin, a $20,000 appropriation for the engineering drawings. "If the facts had been clear (at the June special town meeting) that it was $37,000 rather than the $20,000, it might have been a tie vote, or defeated," he stated Tuesday night.

Advisor Jane Goedecke agreed, noting, "what they agreed to is not what is before us now. We're concerned that what they (the Milliken Field committee members) are doing is not the sense of what town meeting voted for. Our feelings are not on the merits of the project, but the inappropriateness of the advisory board to do this."

The Milliken Field committee,headed byKenEkberg, requested a $16,700 transfer from the town's reserve account to cover additional engineering costs to complete the drawings for phase one of the renovation project. The advisory board denied the request earlier this month, saying it would need approval of the entire town at town meeting.

Since that time, the school committee, Booster's Club, School Facilities Committee, Recreation Director Jack Worley and CHS track coach Ron Emmons have written letters asking the board to reconsider the budgetary request.

The board decided Tuesday night not to reconsider the proposal.

Advisor William Lean complained that the plans originally presented to town meeting have changed along with the costs. Lillard Field, behind the high school is now planned for the major portion of the renovation work. Lean said, "there's a formal school facilities committee. I think these are the people who should take care of renovating school fields. These people (the Milliken Field committee) have taken the designs without town hearings and we have not been offered any options."

The costs of the project have skyrocketed, member Jill O'Donnell added, "Phase 1 is now supposed to cost about $500,000."

In an open letter to the residents, the advisory committee outlined its reasons for rejecting the Milliken Field committee's request for an additional $16,700. They stated, "in our judgement the Milliken Field Project Committee intends to go beyond this intent by having final construction engineering drawings prepared."

In addition, the reserve fund, which is used to meet the town's unanticipated critical town expenses, now contains about $98,000. "In each of the past several years, we have spent the entire reserve fund, therefore we have little margin for error," they stated in the letter.

The advisors feel the Milliken field members are exceeding the mandate of the town meeting by trying to proceed to the final construction drawing stage. "We believe no additional town money should be spent until the town meeting votes to proceed with the proposed project," they concluded.

In other action this week, the advisors approved three budget transfer requests totaling almost $10,000 from the Board of Health.

Health board chairman Michael Bliss explained the reasons for the three transfers - two of which relate to the town's litigation involving Cohasset Heights landfill.

There were two bills, $1577 and $1527 for engineerings costs for monitoring well sites at the commercial landfill. The work was completed by Camp, Dresser and McKee during the past summer, Dr. Bliss explained.

The largest expenditure was money to repair a failed septic system in a home at 159 Sohier Street. After years of frustration, the board finally took Phillip Salvaggi to court to have the failed system repaired. The judge ordered the task be accomplished.

According to Dr. Bliss, bids went out to local contractors and $6,500 was the low bid for the job. The town will pay the cost of repairing the failed system, but a municipal lien will be attached to the property. If the home is ever sold, the lien must be paid to the town with interest.

The advisory board approved the request.

They previously tabled a $4,200 request from School Supt. Stephen Hart to fund an unexpected vocational education tuition. Board members asked that Hart search elsewhere in the budget for the money. Because of the lowering costs of fuel oil, there may be extra money to provide for the tuition costs, they agreed.

Hart had explained that because South Shore Vocational Technical High School did not offer the courses this Cohasset student preferred, the town had to pay tuition to whatever school has that particular curriculum.

Library signs into Old Colony group

The Paul Pratt Library has officially entered the age of computers.

Last week, the library trustees voted unanimously to become part of the Old Colony Library Network.

"We are official members of the Network," director Richard Hayes announced. "This is what we have been working on for the past two years."

And now the real work begins. Between now and March, Hayes explained, library staff members and volunteers will be working to convert the card catalog into machine-readable forms which eventually will be processed into the proper computer software. Hayes explained the library has contracted with a vendor to aid in that time-consuming process.

The director, who worked as the chairman of the Eastern Regional Library Systems Automation Committee for the past several years, said laser disk technology will be applied in converting the catalog into computer form. The entire library's collection as stored in the card catalog will be converted onto laser disks which will be produced into floppy computer disks. The vendor will then produce a computer tape from the floppy disk. In four months, he predicted, the tapes will contain about 300,000 of the library's current catalog records.

The computer system, which will be used by patrons rather than the outdated card catalog system, will be phased in during the next two years, he explained. As soon as this summer, library patrons can expect to have their books checked out by computer rather than the traditional method.

The Old Colony Network will include 21 South Shore communities. By use of a central computer located at Massasoit Community College, these libraries will share access to more than two million titles.

The director expects to be notified soon whether the library will receive a $100,000 state grant to help defray the data conversion costs.

The advantages of joining the Network, in addition to the computerization of the library systems, will be the thousands of additional books available to Cohasset residents. The Pratt Library currently owns about 40,000 titles. The expected increase, because of the Network association, will be tenfold that amount, Hayes said.

Cohasset's share of the Network's operating costs will be about 4.5 percent, although precise figures have yet to be calculated. The Pratt Library is scheduled to have eight terminals, two for staff use when checking out materials, and six for public access to the central "union" catalog. That is the central information center where the list of all books owned by the 21-member towns are on file.

Town meetings in 1985 and 1986 appropriated $50,000 in start-up costs for the project. Now that Cohasset has officially signed a contract of participation, the start-up process will begin and the monies will be expended in the conversion of the data.

The 21 libraries signed a previous contract with the Sperry Company for purchase of the computer system. That company has since incorporated with the Burroughs Company.

This most recent contract signed last week by the library trustees, officially welcomes Cohasset into the Old ColonyNetwork and into the age of computers.

Children learning to cope with parental divorce

Leonard is conscious of his role at the Cohasset elementary schools. "I'm not going to be a therapist," he said. "I'm not a psychologist and I'm not a therapist." Leonard is an adjustment counselor.

"I'm trying to give the kids an opportunity to share with each other," he said, "because it's a group thing. It gives them support, knowing there are other kids in the situation they're in."

Leonard described some of the group's activities.

"The first couple of times, we do trust-building exercises," he said. "For example, in the first week we get together, I'm going to blindfold all the kids in the group.

"Then," he added, "one of the kids will take off his blindfold and lead the other kids through a little obstacle course in the gym.

"It's nothing elaborate," he said, "but the idea of relying on someone else, and then talking about how that felt, is significant.

"And yet," he added, "it's a fun way to do it, rather than trying to force the trust issue."

Trust is a strong element of Leonard's lessons in coping with trauma such as divorce, and those lessons also could be considered survival training for the tough years of junior and senior high school.

"One of the things that scares me about high school kids," he said, "there's a tremendous problem with suicide today.

"Thankfully," he added, "we haven't had that problem in Cohasset."

Leonard explained, high school kids often see only one solution when they have problems, and if that solution doesn't work, they don't know what to do.

"One of the methods (of problem solving) I've found effective," he said, "is to come up with a number of alternatives as one step in solving a problem.

"If you can brainstorm and come up with 10 possible solutions, choose one. If that works, then you're all set. But if it doesn't work, you have nine others you can go back to."

In teaching such "life skills," Leonard noted, "I'm just trying to take them the way they are, and help them feel good about themselves. So far, I feel good about what's happening."

He reemphasized, "I'm not looking at this in a therapeutic way, though it is in a sense, therapeutic. It's not therapy; I'm not trying to look at their personalities to dissect or analyze or whatever.

"We're not going to be sitting around a table with first graders and saying, 'Now, what's on your mind?' That's crazy!

"We're going to do fun group activities that are action-oriented, to help teach kids to solve problems.

Leonard said he appreciates the support he has gotten from parents and teachers, many of whom have recognized the need for this position for a number of years.

Along with the kids' divorce group, he said he hopes to add groups for children who have trouble making friends and so forth.

"If I have a kid in here," Leonard said, "and after eight weeks he's feeling better, he's doing better in school and he's not a discipline problem at home the way he was, because all he's done is been able to feel better about himself, then that's an accomplishment."

Doll House Tour scheduled Nov.11

On Tuesday, November 11, the Cohasset Community Center will hold a Doll House Tour where mothers, daughters and granddaughters can view fourteen miniature houses in the town of Cohasset. Seven of these little houses will be displayed in homes around town and the remaining miniatures will be on display at the Community Center. After viewing these tiny houses, tea and cookies will be served at the Center. Tickets for this fun day must be purchased in advance at the Community Center at 3 North Main St., in Cohasset or can be ordered by phone by calling 383-0088 any weekday from 9:00 to 1:00. This Doll House Tour is open to anyone interested in attending.

The doll houses on exhibit range from a simple four room Italian built doll house to a fully equipped general store to an elaborate twelve-room Victorian doll house. Three of the houses are exact reproductions of houses (two are in Cohasset). The rest are works of art. Barbara Conte's house is an authentic scale reproduction of an early eighteenth century home. So minute is some of the detail that Mr. Conte had to make the tools to create his masterpieces. The tiny vises and drills resemble a dentist's instruments. No two doors are alike; even the hinges are all different and all hand made. Note the inlay work in the floors and the wooden tiled roof. All the furniture and kitchen equipment is hand crafted. These are details of just one of the fourteen houses which will be on display Nov. 11.

Table decorations for tea will be made by the Junior Gardeners of Cohasset under the direction of Regina Schultz. A beautiful hand-knit sweater was donated by Laila Roukounakis and a custom window treatment for three rooms of your doll house will be raffled.

☐ Have been asked to include a special note from the Cohasset Historical Society. Who are Charles and Joan, and how can the Historical Society get in touch with them? All that is known about them is that their wedding reception was held at the Lothrop House. A wedding gift of cash with a greeting card from their friends Deb and Paul was obviously lost and only recently found by some of our High School students while attending a special class at the Lothrop House (the Historical Society finds it commendable that the students are so honest and are extremely proud of them). They are hoping that someone that is reading this column will recognize the persons involved so that the gift found may be returned to Charles and Joan. Please phone Mr. James at 383-1128 if you have any knowledge of them.

☐ Doc Skinna and his wife Rosemary had a grand time at the World Series game last week . . . they received a call from a nice friend offering them tickets, and off they went!! Thanks go to A.W. for their kindness!

☐ How about our own "Ace Reporter" and her news. Lisa Shumaker (CHS Sports reporter for the Mariner) was presented a certificate of academic excellence last week, an honor that was well-earned indeed. The Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents allows only one award, based on the class standing, for every 250 graduating seniors (in our case, that is one award, as we have 112 seniors in CHS). Lisa will go to a five-day conference in Washington in December, and is the first student from our school asked to attend . . . wonder if she will be able to fit this into her busy schedule! Lisa is a writer, CHS letter-winner every season and an excellent student . . . along with all of that, college applications are being filled out, interviews, the list goes on! Everyone sure is proud of you, Lisa!

Pretty as a picture are these two lovelies, Princess Lauren Dooley and Princess Carolyn Pratt They held court during Sunday's Halloween festivities on the Common. (Alan Chapman)

☐ Cohasset was the recipient of an award recently, the AAA National pedestrian safety award. We were one of seven South Shore communities to receive one, ours was for no pedestrian fatalities for 10 consecutive years.

☐ Three Cohasset ladies experienced quite a thrill last week! Mrs. Jacqueline H. Moores of 60 Elm Street took part in a dream that she had been working on for over two years, that being a dedication of a Parkway in Pelham, New York. The story certainly is an interesting one, and here it is. Ann Hutchinson (1591-1643) was banished from Massachusetts in 1637 and went to Rhode Island where she founded the town of Aquidneck, Rhode Island. She and her family later moved to Pelham Bay, New York, where she and all but one of her 14 children were massacred by the Indians. Mrs. Jacqueline H. Moores is a descendant of the Hutchinsons, and saw her hard work become a reality when she attended the ceremony and unvieled the sign that reads Hutchinson River and Parkway. Mrs. Moore was accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Dunn of Cohasset, and Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker Jr., President of the Cohasset Historical Society. Congratulations to Mrs. Moores, who made sure that her ancestor received an honor richly deserved!

☐ Be sure that your trick-or-treaters pick up a Pumpkin Patch, a reflective patch that Hunneman's is making available to promote Halloween safety. The patches are at the Cohasset office, and it certainly is a good way to keep our children safe on that fun night.

☐ Happy to report that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph MacDonald had a super time with their son, David, when they, along with their children visited him at Annapolis recently. All the gals are sure to be after David, he sure looks handsome in his uniform! And a great guy too!

A good law

Use of a seat belt is not yet an automatic reaction for most people. But it is the law.

When the law was passed last year by the state legislature, there were a lot of vociferous opponents. They decried the law, saying it was another invasion of their rights. It was, they argued, a case of the law climbing square into the driver's seat.

No one can argue that seat belts save lives. Those who say it can kill, by locking you inside a burning vehicle or an overturned car, are looking for an excuse to dodge the real issue. When studying national statistics, it clearly shows how few people are ever caught in a car engulfed by flames. That cause of death is rare and need not be included in a rational discussion of this issue.

Opponents to the law say that requiring drivers to belt up is another arm of the bureaucractic political powers issuing yet another order.

But a driver's license is no right. It is a privilege. And the seat belt law is a good and well-intentioned legislative act.

We at the Mariner are perhaps more aware than most that seat belts are a fundamental requirement for any driver. Without it, former Hingham editor Judy Gilman would surely be dead.

A victim of a head-on crash into a tree, Judy survived the impact because her seat belt held her head back just enough so she was not thrown through the car windshield.

An air bag would have been even better protection, but that discussion will be put on hold for another time.

Judy was an advocate of the seat belt. Don't get us wrong. She hated the things. They pinned her against the back of the driver's seat, when she liked to sit upright and forward while driving. They wrinkled her clothes and were confining.

But today, we doubt there is a more vocal proponent of the seat belt law than Judy.

The law is saving lives every day. Does that not make it a good law?

And what kind of rights will anyone have, when they are laying unconscious on the street, when they are bloodied and battered after their face has been shoved through a broken windshield, or when they are pronounced dead on arrival after an accident? Their rights are as diminutive as their arguments against the law.

John Locke, a 17th Century English philosopher, wrote, "Law, in its true notion, is not so much the limitation as the direction of a free and intelligent agent to his proper interest, and prescribes no farther than is for the general good under the law....So that however mistaken, the end of law is not to abolish or restrain, but to preserve and enlarge freedom."

Question five on the election ballot regards the repeal of the seat belt legislation. To repeal this vital law is to take a giant step backward in the fight to save lives on our streets and highways. There is not issue of personal rights. It's a matter of life and saving someone from a senseless death.

By Mike Berger

If the statewide candidates for the Nov. 4 election don't perk the interest of voters, perhaps the eight referendum questions will.

This year's ballot contains eight questions which as a whole affects every citizen in the state. At least one of the eight questions will affect the quality of life from a social or financial view for each resident for years to come.

The subjects of the eight questions are abortion, aid to private schools, a state tax cap, hazardous waste, seat belts, voter registration by mail, a national health program and acid rain control.

There are four different kinds of ballot questions appearing on the Nov. 4 ballot, some with binding and non-binding actions.

They include constitutional amendments for the abortion and aid to private school questions; initiative petitions for the state tax revenue, hazardous waste and voter registration questions; a referendum petition for the safety belt law and a legislative advisory question for the national health program and acid rain control programs.

Constitutional amendments are proposed by the state Legislature. A majority of two consecutively elected legislatures have approved them. If a majority of voters approve the measures, the questions will be come part of the state constitution.

Initiative petitions are proposed by citizens who have obtained the required number of signatures to place the questions on the ballot. If the measure wins by a majority and from at least 30 percent of the electorate, the question will become law.

A referendum petition has already received legislative approval but citizens have obtained the required number of signatures to place the law on the ballot. If a majority of voters reject the question and if at least 30 percent of the electorate vote "no," the law will be repealed. Otherwise the law will remain in effect.

The legislative advisory questions are placed on the ballot by the legislature in order to learn about resident opinions. These results are non-binding.

ABORTION FUNDING

This question poses the most controversial topic on the ballot and with it comes the most of media attention and advertisements.

The proposed constitutional amendment would allow the legislature to prohibit or regulate abortions to the extent permitted by the U.S. Constitution and the U.S. Supreme Court.

A "yes" vote would change the state constitution to allow the legislature to regulate abortion. A "no" vote would leave the state constitution unchanged and continue state constitutional protection of abortion.

Those arguing for the support of this ballot question the public funding for abortion. Proponents say "when our tax dollars pay for abortion, abortion is not just a private matter between a woman and her doctor. The state becomes directly involved."

The question, proponents say, lets the will of the people be expressed on whether taxpayers should continue to pay for abortions.

Those arguing for rejection of the ballot question believe a "no" vote keeps personal, private decisions about childbearing free from government control.

Proponents of the no vote feel the intent of the question gives state legislators absolute power to prohibit abortions except when the woman's life is at stake.

AID TO PRIVATE SCHOOLS

This constitutional amendment would allow state funding for private schools and private school students. A yes vote would change the constitution to allow government aid to private schools and students. A no vote would keep the current restrictions intact.

Proponents of the question say a yes vote is for equality. They feel private school students are "second class citizens" and want such students to enjoy the same status enjoyed by public school students. The lending of textbooks to non-public school children is allowed in other states but not here.

Opponents arguing against the question say everyone has the constitutional right to choose private schooling but taxpayers should not have to subsidize it. Public school programs should not be jeopardized to divert more money to assist private schools. Opponents also feel this amendment permits the state to intrude in private or religious education when it dispenses public tax dollars.

STATE TAX REVENUES

It is now probable the state could get two separate tax caps after Nov. 4.

The legislature and Gov. Michael Dukakis approved a law immediately repealing a 7.5 percent income tax surcharge and limits future increases in state taxes and puts future budget surpluses into a special emergency fund.

The voters on the Nov. 4 ballot are being asked to approve a separate plan repealing the surtax over two years and putting a tighter lid on state tax increases.

If both plans are approved, lawyers will be forced to reconcile conflicts between the two statutes.

Proponents of Question 3 say a yes vote mandates that state taxes cannot increase at a rate faster than the wage and salary growth of all Massachusetts workers. A yes vote encourages fiscal responsibility by telling state government that its budget cannot grow at a rate faster than a citizen's personal budget.

Any excess would be returned through a tax credit.

The legislative bill computes the tax cap differently and in some cases at a higher rate. The legislative bill creates an emergency fund to be financed with budget surpluses; increases the limit under which a person pays no state income taxes from

Five continent summit meeting, Dec. 14

Letters

To the Editor:

On Dec. 14, 1985, when world leaders from six countries on five continents appeared simultaneously on TV screens around the globe via an incredible TV hook-up, viewers were moved and cheered. Cultural offerings from each country were exciting, music, dances etc. The 'iffy' connections for four million miles of signal path worked almost without a hitch.

This Saturday, Nov. 1, the same program—The Five Continent Space Bridge—will be shown on Channel 44 at 8:30 p.m.

Viewers knew that they live on a very small planet. The six world leaders themselves report that they were deeply moved by two things: first seeing themselves altogether on the screen, thus personally experiencing the smallness of the planet, while each was actually still in his own capitol, and second seeing the hopeful possibilities for teleconference technology as a tool to help educate us all toward a secure future for all peoples. (Recently demonstrated by the Phil Donahue shows with cities in Russia.)

In Nov. '85 over 500 people on the South Shore along with 750,000 others across the country affixed their signatures to petitions endorsing this global effort. Now you can witness the image of our names actually circling the globe in defense of our right to a future and freedom from fear of a nuclear holocaust.

The Five Continent Space Bridge could easily be such a catalyst. It is a hope-filled event, fare for the whole family. I invite you to mark your calendar now.

The Tenth Congressional Race

(Editor's note: The following profiles were drawn from lengthy interviews with each candidate, from attending at least one campaign appearance with each and from the debate staged by TV-58, WCVX in Hyannis, which will air Thursday, Oct. 30 at 8 p.m. The candidate interviews were all written by Mariner staff reporter David Johnson.)

Gerry Studds

Congressman Gerry Studds, a 48-year-old Democrat from Cohasset, has represented the Tenth Congressional District since 1972. Since then his name has become virtually synonymous with protection of the coastline and fishing industry.

A member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and chairman of it's Coast Guard Subcommittee, Studds wrote the 200 mile fishing limit, which passed in 1976.

Studds has never had trouble winning reelection. He received a respectable 56 per cent of the vote in 1984, despite being censured by Congress the year before, for having had an affair with a teenage male page.

Studds is in line to become chairman of the Fisheries and Environmental Subcommittee of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, or he could take the chairmanship of his other assignment, the Western Affairs Subcommitte of the Foreign Affairs Committee. Studds has used his committee membership to harrass the Reagan Administration on Central America.

Both of Studds' opponents accuse him with abandoning the fishing industry in favor of the chair of the Western Affairs Subcommittee, a charge Studds denies.

He concedes Western Affairs has a strong attraction for him, "it would be the only place (in Congress) voices opposed to Reagan's Central American policies would be in control," Studds said.

He stated, "I've said from day one that it is a difficult choice, but I have a strong inclination to take Fisheries. It (the committee) sounds like it was created with this district in mind.

Gerry E. Studds

It's less glamorous and you're apt to get a lot more done. I don't need need to be chairman (of Western Affairs) to focus debate on Central America."

He adds however, that he will wait until after the election before making a final decision. "I don't want to close off all my options."

Studds is one of President Reagan's most virulent Congressional critics, admitting that he finds Soviet dictator Mikhail Gorbachev's arms control positions "more rational" than the President's.

Studds said he is opposed to SDI (Stragetic Defense Initiative) because "Nobody knows what it is, President Reagan certainly doesn't." He also said that it would not work.

When asked how he knows it wouldn't work if he doesn't understand the technology, Studds replied, "Rational people on either side are opposed to SDI. Reagan is not one of them."

Studds did concede that he favored a arms control agreement with on-site inspections and denied that he trusted the Russians.

On Nicaragua, Studds said, "We're well on our way to another Vietnam in Central America." He charged the White House with illegally aiding the Nicaraguan freedom fighters.

"We have our thugs in Nicaragua and the Soviets have theirs," he said.

Ricardo Barros

Ricardo "Ric" Barros is as different from Congressman Studds as possible.

In contrast to the Yale educated Studds, Barros dropped out of school at 17 to join the Marines. He later earned a high school diploma, a BA in political science from the University of Massachusetts in Boston and a law degree from Boston College.

A New Bedford native, the 29-year-old Barros is one of 15 children and is of Cape Verdean descent. He is married, the father of a 16-month old daughter named Megan and practices law in New Bedford and Hyannis.

Ricardo Barros

He says that Studds, who speaks Portuguese, has been able to automatically win the large Cape Verdean population in New Bedford. By significantly reducing Studds' support in New Bedford and running well elsewhere, Barros says that he can win.

Barros is planning to spend much of his $100,000 budget on radio commercials. The Barros committee has three separate ads, charging Studds was being a big spender; with being soft on drug pushers and with abandoning the fishing industry during its greatest crisis since the Great Depression.

The commercial on drugs criticizes Studds for voting against a recent bill requiring life imprisonment for drug pushers convicted twice of selling drugs to children and authorizing the death penalty for drug pushers who murder. Fortunately, the legislation passed, Barros said.

Economic responsibility is one of the key planks in the Barros platform. He opposes a tax increase and has challenged Studds to sign a pledge promising not to raise taxes following the election.

Barros said, "I had reservations about the tax bill. I supported tax reform, but was disappointed at the loss of (a deduction) for IRA's. We should want to encourage people to save for the future."

He said that because the tax bill eliminated many deductions, the tax rates should remain stable.

"We should not allow the tax reform to become a tax increase. (House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Daniel) Rostenkowski says its a perfect vehicle for raising taxes," he said.

"Studds and others like to claim the tax cut of 1981 is reason for the deficits. It's not a question of taxes, it's a question of overspending, he stated.

He said the Departments of Energy and Education should be abolished. He called the Education Dept. "a big boondoggle. It's sucking up money."

Studds wouldn't vote to freeze the legislative budget, instead he voted himself a pay increase, Barros stated.

Barros said that Studds lost whatever effectiveness he had after his 1983 censure.

"Studds has been there for 14 years and doesn't have a working relationship with the other legislators," Barros charged.

He said that Studds' bill regulating insurance for the fishing industry "went down to defeat in a

Alexander Byron

A Democrat until last spring, 56-year-old Alex Byron of Marion is running for Congress as an independent.

Descended from a long line of Greek Orthodox priests, this is his third try for Congress. He was the Democratic nominee in 1962 and in 1964, and lost to Congressman Hastings Keith.

Byron and his wife Suzanne have been married for 22 years and have four children, ranging in age from 12 to 21. Born in New Bedford, Byron has also lived in Scituate, Bourne and Wareham He holds a BA in Duke University and a Masters' Degree in Economic Policy from George Washington University.

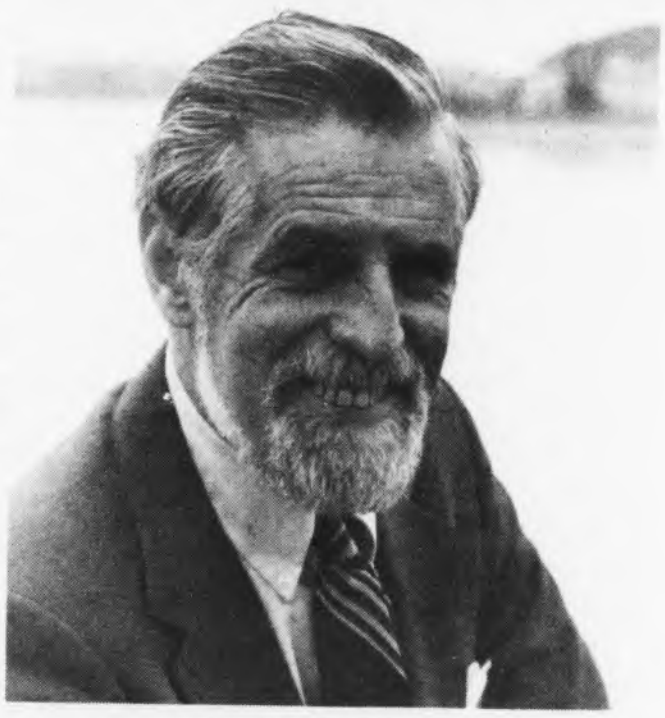
The Byron family runs a seafood restaurant in Wareham. Previously, Byron served on the staff of late House Speaker Congressman John McCormack. He has also been a political director of the Teamsters Union and active in efforts to restore the New Bedford waterfront.

He is the brother of Chris Byron, a state Superior Court judge.

Byron said he decided to run in July, when a group of Republicans from the "Richardson and Saltonstall wing of the party," asked him to. He would not elaborate. He said a group of Democrats had asked him to run in 1984, but he said he refused because of "my sense of fair play, I wouldn't run during the censure,"(of Cong. Studds for having had a homosexual affair with a Congressional page.).

Although Byron declined to identify himself as either liberal or conservative, or to state whether he would sit on the Democratic or Republican side of the House, if elected, he did say, "The people in New Bedford still consider me a Democrat. (They say) he's a McCormack man, he fought alongside Kennedy and was endorsed by Johnson."

Last week Byron was endorsed by former Gov.



Alexander Byron

Edward King, who said, "His broad past of experience in government, as a businessman and an accomplished labor leader, qualifies him to serve well above all of his constituents."

Byron said he and King had been friends for 23 years.

After a phone call from Republican Barros, King said that he endorsed both Byron and Barros. "I guess he's endorsing anyone but Studds," Barros said.

Byron has a six point economic plan, Revolution II, which is the cornerstone of his candidacy.

The plan calls for an embargo of all imported oil; an economic pact between the U.S., Canada and Mexico; the establishment of a computerized international nuclear and hazardous waste dump in Antarctica; a system of universal public service; a mandatory 12-year health education plan in the public schools and for the repeal of Presidential and Congressional salaries.

A key point of Byron's campaign is that Studds

A conversation with Police Sgt. Pomarico. . .

do," he stated. "During my four years in the Seabees, I did some Shore Patrol. I knew I wanted to go into police work."

He likes working in a small town. "You see the same people," he explained. "You have closer contact with the residents of the town, than in a big city. You don't have that closeness in a big city. And, the police officer might not be as understanding in a large city as he could be in a small town. In a small town, you know more people, and you understand their problems. You take that into consideration"

Cohasset is a unique town, according to the newly-appointed sergeant. "It's certainly gorgeous," he said, noting that during his detail work during this summer's filming of the "Witches of Eastwick," most of the film crews and bystanders were "drooling" over this town. Everyone loves it. But there's also a special quality about this town. The majority of people here are terrific - they're warm and friendly. I think being a police officer in Cohasset is similar to the way it must have been in the past. You know a lot of people. They wave to you, and say "hi!" There's a friendly attitude in a small town. The only bad side to that, is that because people know you, they sometimes want to tell you how to do your job. Whether it's a ticket or whatever, everyone has to realize they did something wrong and they have to pay the consequences."

One reaction many Cohasset officers face, is a plea from someone to "give me a break." Pomarico's standard answer? "Give me a break," he replied. "I tell them,'you made this situation that I was forced to respond to. I didn't come here just to hassle anyone. There was something done to trigger the situation, and that's your responsibility. So give me a break.'"

This year wasn't the first time Pomarico had taken the sergeant's examination. The first time, the officer admitted, he didn't study. "I guess pride got in my way. I figured I was a good officer, and if I was, then I didn't have to study for the test. I was wrong." he said. "And this time, I studied. I paid for a course at Boston University, learning about the new laws. And last year the department instituted an in-service training program. That was very helpful with the exam."

For the second consecutive year, Sgt. Pomarico is president of the police union. His first year was memorable as the time when the union struggled to negotiate a contract with the town. "I think the negotiations were a positive experience," he said. "It was educational, and that's always positive. You never stop learning. It was positive in the sense that we talked with different town committees on the same level, we presented our case and we did our homework.

"I'm very satisfied with the contract we have. We got a base pay that is now at a respectable level. I don't think the town or the union lost. We all want unity here. This is a small town with a definite closeness. We don't want to leave any hard feelings or bitterness behind."

Since becoming sergeant only a month ago, Pomarico has not found it difficult to take command of a shift where he was once a patrolman. "I'm still new at this, and I find myself doing things that I should really delegate. But that's how I am. I lead by example. If I wear a tie, everyone wears a tie. There'll be no exceptions. What's good for one, is good for all." Pomarico was 30 years old when he was appointed to the Cohasset force. Now he's 41, and says that being chief is not out of his reach, someday.

"Anybody's expectations are unlimited, and someday, who knows?" he stated. "If I have enough experience and continue with my education...."

Sgt. Pomarico has completed half his credits for an associate degree at Massasoit College. It is something he will continue to pursue.

"The fact that you make sergeant is saying that you are asserting yourself. I won't be content remaining a sergeant. I aspire to better myself and my position within this department." he said, adding he has lived for 11 years with the rumors of his imminent transfer to another town.

"I'm still here, while a lot of guys, some natives of this town, are gone," he noted. "I have no plans to leave unless there is a better career opportunity somewhere. I'll be here until that time."

The Cohasset Police Department, according to the "swing shift" sergeant, is basically a well-run force with good equipment and professional officers.

"Of course, as with everything else, there's always room for improvement," he noted. "We are paid to 'serve and protect' and sometimes we tend to forget the 'serve' part. Whatever the situation, we should always remember we are here to serve the residents of this town. We have a tendency on a day-to-day basis to forget that, and that is actually the more rewarding part of this job."

After two tours of duty in Vietnam, Pomarico, "saw enough blood and death." I think I became a bit hardened. It's there, and I'll deal with it on this job, too. The hardest day of work here was a few years ago when two girls were killed in an auto accident. I went home that night and must have stayed awake until 4 in the morning. But those are the things we have to deal with in the department. "On the positive side," he continued. "It's the little things that make this a good profession. A little kid writing a "thank you" letter. We've all been criticized, but it's so nice when someone takes the time to thank you for something you did right."

His two sons, John and Nicholas, can aspire to be anything in their lives, including police officers. "I constantly reinforce in them a respect of authority, and I try to teach them what's right and what's wrong. I think then they'll be basically good people. I wouldn't discourage them from being police officers, if that's what they wanted. If that's what they decided, then I'd say take a shot at it. The pay's not too terrific, but it's getting there."

But for the present, his oldest son's only ambition is to be a major league baseball player - for the New York Mets.

First Parish

Care Circle Report—About ten years ago, the First Parish formed a program to respond with warmth and caring to parishioners who were experiencing some stress. Since that time, hundreds of volunteers have provided church members with cards, meals, transportation and caring at times of births, deaths, illnesses and other stresses of life.

In order to maintain another ten years of a responsive program, we are asking two things of First Parish members.

1) Please help us keep the program active and sensitive by letting the committee know when a church member might need help, or a statement of our presence and concern. Anyone experiencing stress—whether family turmoil or life events such as moves, births, family illness, death or any sort of loss—is a candidate for a Care Circle response. The program can only be as thoughtful and perceptive as the church community members make it, so please call. The monthly contact person's name will appear in this column.

2) Please fill out and mail the enclosed card so we can update the list of Care Circle volunteers.

Thank you. And thanks to the volunteers of the past ten years!

Murray's Memos—Ballot questions

"In talking with many of my constituents I found they misunderstand and are confused about the eight referendum questions.

The town libraries have a pink booklet that thoroughly explains the Ballot questions. The Booklet presents the arguments for and against the issues." Rep. Murray stated.

The eight questions on this year's ballot are not all the same type. They are grouped into four categories to make them easier to understand.

Two proposed Amendments to the state's constitution.

TAX FUNDED ABORTION, Question 1, STATE AID TO PRIVATE SCHOOLS, Question 2.

Three are initiative laws, which means citizens gathered signatures on petitions in order to have the bills submitted to the Legislature, and after the Legislature failed to act on them, their supporters got more signatures in order to have these questions placed on the ballot.

STATE TAX CAP, Question 3, HAZARDOUS WASTE CLEANUP, Question 4, MAIL—IN VOTER REGISTRATION, Question 6.

One question is a binding Referendum asking voters to keep or repeal a law already enacted.

MANDATORY SEAT BELT LAW, Question 5.

Finally, there are two non-binding Advisory questions placed on the ballot by the Legislature. Your elected representatives are asking what you think about these two issues.

NATIONAL HEALTH CARE, Question 7, ACID RAIN PROGRAM, Question 8.

In order for a question to pass, at least 30 percent of the people who vote in this election must mark their ballot either way on that particular question; of that number a majority must vote in favor.

Studds . . .

Studds would not say whether he considered Nicaraguan dictator Daniel Ortega to be one of the Russian thugs in the region, he said instead, "Ortega is a Marxist Nationalist. Of course, they (Soviets) are aiding him. We have left him with no alternative but to turn to the Soviets bloc."

Studds said he did not favor U.S. aid for Nicaragua now, but would consider it in the future. "It depends on the nature of that government and it's conduct."

On economics, the Congressman charges the Reagan tax cuts in 1982, which he voted against, created the "devastating" deficit.

Studds dismisses the pledge not to raise taxes, which his Republican challenger Ricard Barros has urged him to sign, as a "gimmick started by the White House.

"Can you imagine what would have happened if the Congress in 1940 had signed that oath?" he asked.

Studds said that taxes would not be increased next year because President Reagan would veto any tax, but that "the things government does have to be paid for."

On issues facing the South Shore, Studds said the Pilgrim nuclear plant and transportation are major problems.

He said he had many unanswered questions concerening the operating proceedures of the Pilgrim plant, and questioned the evacuation procedures.

At a meeting with Marshfield residents last July, Studds said "I don't think the average citizen knows what he or she is supposed to do in event of an emergency. We're kidding ourselves if we think we can evacuate everybody."

As for transporation, Studds said he was "delighted" with the return of the railroad to the South Shore.

Studds is planning to spend over $200,000, which he said is one-third of what he spent two years ago. He dismissed rumors that this would be his last year in Congress, "They (rumors) come around every two years."

He said he wasn't running scared, but that "I have always viewed any challenge as serious. I do wish the Republican would get a better speech writer, the verbiage is the same."

He said plastic pollution of the ocean, acid rain and a possible rise in the sea level were all issues within the jurisdiction of the Fisheries Committee, which he would look forward to facing.

Barros . . .

Democratically controlled Congress because he acted in a very sophomoric fashion. He showed an inability to compromise."

Barros said the bill was "ill-conceived" and that he favors regulation of the fishing industry.

Barros stated that he would be in a better position than Studds to work with the White House to get federal funds for the Old Colony Railroad extension. "We need federal funds and Studds isn't poised to get them," he said.

He accused Studds of "arrogance and ego, who can't get his phone calls returned. He is short-changing the people of this district."

Barros said, "When they closed down the Quincy Shipyard and put thousands of people out of work, Studds showed up and requested job training. He should have supported the Navy to get ships built here. Studds' lack of compromise causes contracts to be awarded to other states. Why wasn't he an advocate of General Dynamics?"

On foreign policy, Barros has accused Studds of "posturing" during his trip to Nicaragua. "He cares more about Nicaragua than he does about the fishing industry, or the transportation problems or if we have a fishing fleet in three years."

Barros said he couldn't disagree more with Studds on Central America and that he "supported the freedom fighters."

"Studds is part of the blame America first club," Barros charged.

Barros also pointed out that Studds voted for his first defense bill in 14 years last summer. "He's never voted for one shoelace for one Marine. Imagine if all the 435 Congresspersons voted the way he did.

In Hyannis, Barros told Studds, "You used to say we would go the same (Vietnam) route in El Salvador, but now one of your recent newsletter praises democracy in El Salvador."

Barros said Reagan deserved the credit for the democracy in that country.

On strategic defense, Barros said "Mr. Studds says it won't work, but the Soviets spend a lot of time trying to gut it. The Soviets went to Reykjavik to gut SDI."

Barros said most of his money had been raised by phone solicitation within the district, he charged that Studds raised $150,000 in the last election from Washington based political action committees.

Byron . . .

has lost touch with the district, having become more interested in national problems.

He criticized Studds for raising some $250,000, much of it from Washington based political action committees. Byron said, "I'd love to win on a budget of less than $5,000," a figure his campaign has yet to spend.

"I don't think Studds has any understanding that the economy is the number one issue in this district, not Nicaragua," Byron said.

Byron said he had the city of New Bedford "all wrapped up" for election day because Studds has failed to appear at a rally held by workers striking the Chamberlain Munitions Co.

"The city of New Bedford is dying and Studds has done nothing for New Bedford," he stated.

He also accused the Congressman of lack of concern over pollution allegedly caused by Otis Air Force Base on the Cape. Byron also called for an investigation of an incident in which a howitzer fired by the National Guard missed its target and landed in Rte. 6.

When asked what issues were facing the South Shore, Byron replied, "control of growth, transportation and the environment. This is where the Congressman and I disagree," he said.

He explained that it was a Congressman's job to find out what constituents wanted to accomplish and then help them get federal funds.

Byron said that his economic plan would provide an example to Communist nations like Nicaragua. "The President and Congress are both wrong," he said during the debate sponsored by Channel 58.

Byron said we have to maintain a strong military. "We could get a stronger defense for a lot less money. Defense is health and education," he explained.

Byron said he favored the superfund to cleanup hazardous waste, but that he opposed the provision raising energy prices. "If it's wrong for the country, it's wrong for the district," he told Studds.

On abortion, Byron stated that he would vote in Congress the way the district voted.

"All abortions are a tragedy, but legality doesn't solve the problem of abortion," he said. Byron said that his health education plan would serve to prevent the need for abortions.

He also said he had heard a lot of people complain about welfare spending, but said he did not know how much welfare payments were. "I don't get involved in the social issues. In a strong, stable economy, these issues will go by the vine."

Byron called for a federal loan program to help the unemployed.He said it would not be "an expansion of welfare spending, it would save money for the taxpayers. There would be limits on loans just like limits on unemployment compensation."

He said "there's no way to have a national health insurance plan without a preventive medical plan."

He said he had read that 90 per cent of hospital patients shouldn't be there. "I think it's our job to take care of them."

Byron also said he favored increasing social security payments, but did not know how much. "You have to understand I'm not a Congressman, just a candidate. Under my program you'd have deflation, prices would drop."

Byron has refused to sign a pledge advocated by one of his opponents, Ric Barros, agreeing not raise taxes after the election.

"Suppose you had an emergency and had to raise money? I live by my pledges. I wouldn't want to have my hands tied. It's possible they (taxes) could go up. Hopefully they won't, if a catastrophe doesn't happen and Congress acts responsibly."

Village Fair plans

With the first touch of frost to remind them that the winter holidays are fast approaching, the wreath-makers for Cohasset's Village Fair began this week to gather for the advance work that will culminate in a stock of some 300 skillfully-crafted wreaths for sale at the Fair on December 6.

Jean Manganaro, returning to a familiar assignment as head of the wreath committee, has issued a call inviting any interested person to join the group that provides one of the most popular features of the five-church Fair.

"We're saying, "Come one, Come all", she says. "We will be wiring cones, making bows and going forward with the general preparations every morning from 9:30 to 11:30 at Carmen Schramm's, 28 Atlantic Avenue, on October 29, November 5, 12, and 19. Just bring your clippers and enjoy good coffee, delicious snacks and juicy gossip."

The work does not require any special skills and the added bonus for workers is the opportunity to learn new decorative ideas that will help in planning holiday touches for their own homes.

These weekly meetings are the preliminaries for the final week before the Fair when the wreath-makers traditionally meet in the vestry of the Congregational church daily to put the finishing touches on the dozens of wreaths they will offer at the Fair.

The Village Fair is a joint fund-raising effort that brings together St. Stephen's Episcopal, Second Congregational, First Parish Unitarian, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic and the Panagia Greek Orthodox churches. Annette Sawchuk of the Second Congregational Church is this year's General Chairman.

Class I license issued for dealership

Selectmen this week issued a Class 1 license to Luigi Masciarelli to operate a Maserati dealership at the site of the old Highway Motors property, 821 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Masciarelli recently purchased the property from Eric Pearson of Cohasset. Although he intended to sell used foreign cars on the lot, he will have to return to selectmen with an application for a Class 2 license.

And although selectmen did not restrict the number of vehicles allowed on the site, Masciarelli said he expects to have betwen 10 and 15 new Maserati s on the lot at one time.

The Rte. 3A business will be called Majestic Cars Ltd.

"I'm not looking for 400 cars. I'm dealing in 15, $50,000 to $60,000-priced cars. I don't have the capital for 400 cars," he told selectmen.

The new owner said he plans to paint the building and landscape it.

He was formerly associated with a Jaguar dealership with his family. Although he intended to use the Class 1 license to sell used cars on the lot, Executive Secretary Don Andrew explained a separate Class 2 license would be necessary.

He said the dealership will sell strictly foreign cars, with an occasional Cadillac or Lincoln. "Basically, we're talking about foreign, expensive cars," he told selectmen. It would be a problem to operate without the Class 2 license since he anticipates selling only 50 new cars a year. The price for a Maserati, he said, starts at $29,000 and increases to $65,000. The dealership will also service the cars and sell parts to the vehicles.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she was not enthusiastic about approving a 50-car lot. She cited an occasion when selectmen recently denied an application by a current local car dealer to expand his business to 40 cars.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he had never heard of a board which restricted the Class 1 license."If we put restrictions on anything,we should restrict the Class 2 license," Selectman Cliff Mitman agreed.

The board voted unanimously in favor of the license.

In a related matter, selectmen briefly discussed two local auto dealers who have expanded their businesses without approval. Selectman Laugelle said he heard Spensley bought adjacent property on Rte. 3A and was filling it up with vehicles for sale. Autohaus is currently using the parking lot and building formerly occupied by Bergeson's Ice Cream.

"I asked the building inspector about the two auto dealerships up there. Spensley moved into the Sullivan property he bought. And Autohaus is using the former Bergeson's property to store more cars. They have no business being in there."

Executive Secretary Andrew stated that Autohaus is using the lot to park extra vehicles. "They are not selling their property and there are preliminary plans ready for that building," he stated.

"They can't do that," Laugelle said. "I don't want Rte. 53 up there. Those two are in violation of the town bylaws. They have overextended their use."

Executive Secretary Andrew will meet with the building inspector to review the complaints issued by selectmen.

Norwell rummage sale Nov. 7

The Norwell Visiting Nurse Association will hold their 104th Semi-Annual Rummage Sale Friday, Nov. 7, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 8, 10 a.m. to noon at the Cushing Memorial Town Hall, in Norwell Center (Route 123).

Gov't Day Race at CHS

Six juniors are presently running for the two Cohasset representative positions in the Massachusetts Legislature's student government day program. Those seeking the positions are: Michele Casolaro, Carolan Hurley, Colby Mantz, Jay Marsac, Joe Mazza, Mary Beth McNamara and David Shultz.

School-wide elections, grades 9-12 will be held on Tues., November 4th. Sponsored by the Student Council, the elections will determine the Delegate and alternate representatives for Cohasset High School.

Edward F. Sheehan is faculty advisor for the program.

Fifth Graders at Plimouth Plantation

Last week some ninety fifth grade students from the Deer Hill School discovered what life was like in 1627 in the Pilgrim Village and the Wampanoag Indian settlement at Pilmouth Plantation.

This was not a social visit, however, the kids were armed with noted pads and pencils like inquiring news reporters.

The children drilled the pilgrims, who role played through dress, speech, manner and attitude, the actual 17th century settlers, with questions about: clothes, meals, religion, gardening and government. The most often-asked question was, "How many people sleep in this room?" The answer was usually, "six, or eight, or ten, including cats who ate the mice."

The resident Indians were also thoroughly questioned about fishing, hunting and the deerskin clothing they wore.

Although many of the children had been to Plimouth before, they left this time with a new appreciation for hot showers, Big Mac's and VCR's.

CHS leadership training

Wednesday, October 22, the Student Council of Cohasset High School spent the day in a Leadership Training Program.

The program was presented by Paul Bernard of Westbrook College. Mr. Bernard has been running types of training sessions for the past eight years. Some of the topics covered in the presentation were: communications, trust, goal setting, responsibility, organization and enthusiasm. This was accomplished through role playing, games and other activities.

Some of the activities used were developed by Outward Bound and Project Adventure: leaders in survival, motivational and leadership training.

All of the students found the training program extremely informative and beneficial and came away with a new understanding of the words: to "GIVE".

Golf Club Casino

The Cohasset PSO (Parent School Organization) will present "Monte Carlo Night" at the Cohasset Golf Club, Saturday, November 8 from 7:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Yes, the glamour and excitement of the casinos at Monte Carlo is coming... for one night Cohasset will be transformed into that tiny principality by the sea where all the glitterati come to play...roulette, "21", craps, poker, and more. Nibble at sumptuous treats from the Catered Affair...cocktails from the cash bar..dress is "creative black tie"—dinner jacket over outrageous jams or top hat and tails with sweatshirts for the men and, for the ladies, anything goes, too! Join your friends for an unforgettable evening of luck, laughter, and lots of fun. Get your tickets ($15 per person) early by calling: Dick Caefer (9445), Ralph Kidder (6873), Sue McNamara (6945), Claudia Story (6976).

Tickets may be paid for in advance and picked up at the door.

Support your schools by supporting your PSO! You might just go home with a little extra cash, if you're lucky.

Cohasset flats remain closed

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner Staff

The clam beds along the North and South rivers will be reopened Nov. 1, according to Tina Davies, an environmental analyst for the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

However, shellfishing beds bordering Cohasset Harbor will remain closed until further pollution tests are conducted, she said.

"I want to sample (the North Scituate-Cohasset area) a few more times," said Davies. "I don't have enough data."

Approximately 10 sites were sampled for pollution three weeks ago, Davies said. "Four stations were OK, but five others weren't,"she said.

The locations sampled, working north from The Glades to Windmill Point in Cohasset, included the mouth of outer Cohasset Harbor; Scituate Neck, about halfway toward Cohasset; the end of Treasure Island Road; the three creeks feeding into Briggs Harbor; the mouth of the inner harbor; the breakwater at Bassing Beach; and in Cohasset, Whitehead and Windmill Point, Davies said.

"The tests were too erratic to allow these flats to be reopened," she said.

The clam beds along the North and South rivers have been closed since May 1 as a result of a state DEQE order in 1985 that the area would be closed on a seasonal basis from May 1 to Nov. 1.

"There is no red tide, so the area may be reopened," she said.

However, since the area was closed, the DEQE has not taken any water samples to determine whether the coliform count is safe for shellfish harvesting.

Davies said she plans to sample specific locations three or four times between now and May 1 and advised diggers that the area will not be tested until Nov. 10.

The flats at First Herring Brook and those near the mouth of the North River, between Scituate and Marshfield will be reopened.

Mudflats at the mouth of the South River behind Fourth Cliff in Humarock also will be reopened.

Permanently closed are the flats west of the Route 3A bridge. Along the South River, anything south of Broad Creek and the north end of Seaview Avenue in Humarock is closed permanently.

Shellfishing is permitted seven days a week in Scituate from Nov. 1 to May 1. After May 1, clamming is allowed on Sundays and Thursdays, the same schedule as permitted in Marshfield year-round.

Canoe trip, Oct. 30

"In Search of Wildness", a visual account of a 340-mile canoe trip in Northern Alaska will be featured Thursday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 p.m.

The journey begins above the Arctic Circle in the central Brooks Range, winding through the open tundra of this vast wilderness area, and ends at the Eskimo village of Noatak. Cost $3 for members and $4 for non-members.

A reminder: Nov. 1, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. is the Natural History Book Fair and Sale. This is a chance to browse through natural history books to your heart's content, mingle with writers, book sellers and naturalists.

A book illustrator will be on hand to demonstrate technique, a bookbinder-paper-maker and a book restoration specialist also will be there to enjoy the autumn day; walk the trails, then return to sip mulled cider and gather books for winter reading and holiday gifts. Admission is free.

School students write about the Halloween spirit. . .

(Obviously these two knew each other and had seen each other before as these plans were made sometime beforehand.) Goggle Ghost had a good amount of noisemakers as they made a huge noise together flying down to Rotten Hollow on this cool October night. They came to a halt in front of a large hill on top of which were five witches and five stony glares staring down upon the two noisemakers. Slowly they made their way up the hill. When they reached the top Goggle Ghost and Mystery Skeleton looked sheepishly across the faces of these noticeably angry witches. A loud voice suddenly came from a witch who looked to be the leader of the five since it was the tallest and it was in the middle.

"What causes you to be so late you tardy objects?" boomed the voice. "You will be punished for your evil!"

A trapdoor opened beneath the two and down they went, falling, falling, falling... Luckily after falling for miles down this deep hole they landed on something which was not hard. It turned out to be the sewer. Luckily, since they were so many miles down, the witches did not hear the little splashes they made. After sitting there a minute they came up with a plan. They decided to sound like they were having a party. Hearing them hooting, hollering and laughing so hard made the leader of the witches angry. He put his ear up close to the opening of the trapdoor so as to know what they were saying. Suddenly the witch lost its footing and feel into the hole, falling, falling, falling... Down into the sewer. Splash! As you may already know witches are solid and skeletons and ghosts are not which enables them to float in water. So witchie drowned and Goggle Ghost and Mystery Skeleton lived happily ever after. Well, maybe not happily.

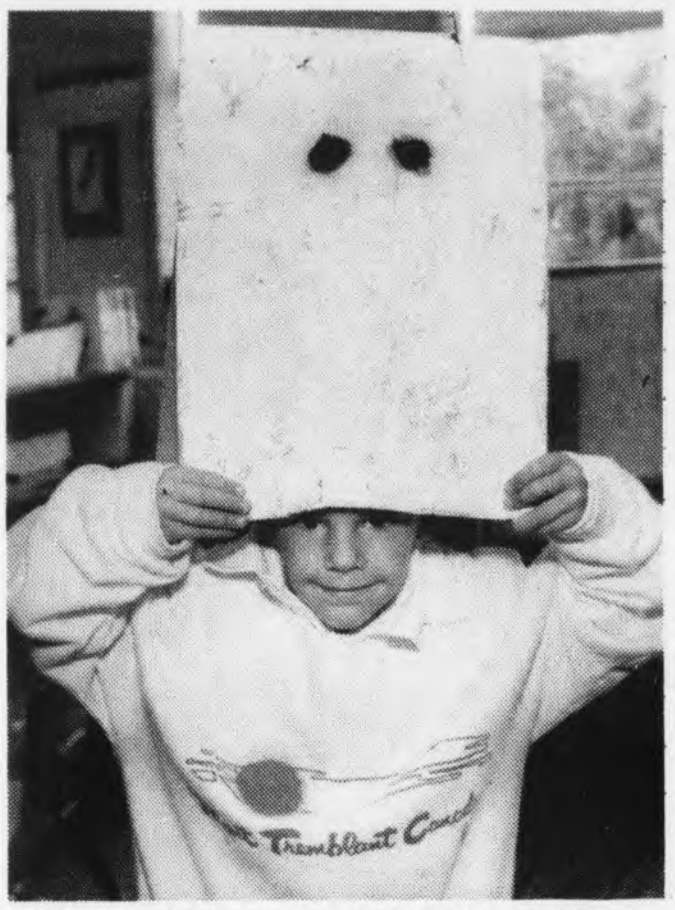
October Madness

One dark rainy, thundery night, a frightening ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he opened the creeking door and slipped out into the misty darkness. The wind was howling as he crept down the sidewalk. Lightening cracked in the distance. In the flash, the ghost saw the old run-down house on the hillside next to the cemetary. He slowly crept toward it.

The wind carried strange sounds from the house. Mysterious shrieks and howls filled the dank night air. Lightening flashed again. The ghost shivered and moved closer to the house. The trees in the cemetary swayed and cast eerie shadows. The wind moaned and whistled as it blew through the branches of the old trees on the hill.

A strange light flickered from the second floor window. Shreiks and gasps could be heard coming from the lit room. The ghost brushed aside cobwebs and peeked into the dark room.



Who would have guessed that was Alexander Gastan under the mask? There were plenty of surprises this week in Mrs. Fink's class. (Alan Chapman)

"Wow! What a game," the ghost heard someone say. "The Red Sox won!" the ghost smiled and went back to his hideaway. He thought to himself, "I hope they win it all."

The Golden Arm

One dark, rainy, thundery night, a horrifying ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he floated through the shadows down to the graveyard. The ghost dug up the mysterious golden arm. The ghost left the arm out in the open so anyone could see it and take it. For you see, the ghost knew that the arm was haunted, and that if anyone took it, he would be haunted until it was returned.

So the next day, a mean, nasty scrooge was walking past the graveyard. He noticed something large and shiny in the sun. As he came closer, he noticed it was an arm made of gold. He brought the arm home with him. But little did he know a laughing ghost was in the shadows.

That night the old man went to bed with the golden arm. As he was sleeping, he heard some footsteps coming from behind the door. Then all of a sudden a voice called out, "give me my golden arm."

The scrooge said nothing. Then the voice called out, "Put it back in the grave."

The scrooge said, "OK, in the morning." But the next morning the scrooge didn't go to the grave, he stayed in bed. So that night the spirit came back.

"Scrooge, come out!" But the scrooge didn't come out, he stayed in bed. Then all of a sudden, the most hideous, gruesome, ugliest ghost you ever saw came through the door, without opening it.

Scrooge screamed, ran out the door and threw the golden arm back into the grave, and zipped back home. But the ghost wasn't there, only a hideous laugh coming from the shadows. From then on Scrooge never went past the grave if he could help it.

Tale of the Whispering Bridge

One dark, rainy, thundery night, this frightening ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he climbed a tall dark, eerie tree and searched through the misty air for a person who he could scare. For the ghost knew that many a person had been lost in these woods either to the dark misty swamps, the tree monster or to the vicious animal hiding in the woods. But never to a ghost.

Now, the tree monster was a terrible thing. It had seven hundred legs and gobbled up any person that he saw. The way that he did this was by hiding in a tree and pouncing on his prey.

So, on this night the ghost was extra careful in climbing the tree. When he got up there, he saw a light bouncing along accompanied by a loud, eerie echoing whistle. It was a man who had just come back from a party and he lived in the woods past the river where a bridge covered with cobwebs passed over. In the night there was a very frightening mood about it for the creaking boards creaked and the strange flickering of lightening would flash through, swaying the shadows. On windy days the wind would howl, making a frantic whisper in the mysterious tunnel.

On this particular night the ghost was very hungry and needed a bite to eat. So, he hid in the bridge until the man came walking along. Just as the man walked by, the ghost pounced on the man and there was a furious battle. The man pulled out his shotgun and fired.. But the bullet went right through the ghost hitting and splintering a support in the bridge. The man then whipped out his knife and hurled it through the air. It also went through the ghost and plunked into the water. by morning the man was exhausted by the ten hour battle and was ready to fight again, when he saw the ghost disappear into thin air leaving nothing.

So the man walked home and went to bed. When he woke up all the townspeople were outside and he didn't know if it was a dream or not. So he told the people outside about the incident. Some people called him names and others said it was a lie.

But two things remain. There is the splintered wood and, years after the man died, a boy who was swimming found the knife below the bridge in the river. Some people still believe it but others don't. Either way the Tale of the Whispering Bridge stuck in people's minds and is now told and retold.

The Cure

One dark, rainy Thursday night, a frightening ghost decided it was time for a spooky adventure. So he took the "T" down River Street, and walked the rest of the way to Old Mr. Smith's house. That was an old haunted house, and was very spooky! Tonight there was a dare. Danny Jones was supposed to sleep there all night, and come out alive. That's why Jack the Ghost wanted to go there. He wanted to scare Danny away. That would be his deed for the week.

When Jack got in the house, Danny had already arrived. His sleeping bag was on the floor, there was a fire going and he had his walkman on his head.

Jack sneaked into the kitchen. He heard a knock on the door. Danny answered it. It was his best friend, Mike. He had come with a few things that Danny forgot. Jack heard a lot of whispering. Then, he finally yelled, "Boo!"

"Eek!" Mike yelled firghtened. "We better get out of here!"

"No!" said Danny angrily. "I'm not gonna wimp out of this. Sean Duno and I made an agreement. If I can get out of here alive in the morning, I get eight bucks!"

So the boys camped in the living room. Jack couldn't think of anything to do to scare them away. Then he thought of an idea. It was kind of strange, but better than nothing. He would put spiders and cobwebs all over the house. Then the boys wouldn't be able to get around.

Jack started catching spiders and finding cobwebs. But the plan just wouldn't work. The spiders ran away and the cobwebs fell apart.

Soon, the boys found out about the ghost. They thought of something. They could give the ghost a cure. Not a cure for sickness, a cure for scariness.

There was a nice, big lab in the house. Loads of books, poisons, tables and all sorts of things. Dan and Mike decided to use the lab for making the cure.

Dan found a bottle labeled in some other language. Mike took French class, but this certainly wasn't French! This is what it said, "mfjrhtehreyoi."

"Well, why don't we use it in the cure?" Mike said, sure of himself.

"I—I dunno. I mean what if it's dangerous?" said Dan.

"Maybe you're right," Mike said. "It could be something really bad."

They looked around the lab and found useful things to put in the cure.

Finally, after two and a half hours, the cure was finished. Dan and Mike planned a way to capture the ghost by making booby-traps all over the house. Then, they would put the ghost to sleep. Finally, they would pour the potion over the ghost.

The plan worked! The boys jumped and screamed with happiness.

The next morning when the boys woke up, there was a delicious breakfast on the kitchen table. The boys and the ghost became friends, but never told anyone about the cure they had made. They promised that they would meet once a week, every week. Everyone found out how brave the boys were, and no one found out about the ghost.

The Day at Castle Polar

NARRATOR: One, dark, rainy, thundery night, this frightening ghost thought it was time for a spooky adventure. So he decided to take a walk to castle Polar. Now, I shall leave you to read his side of the story.

Hello! My name is Raudreages. Everyone I know makes me out to be scary and mean. Apparently everyone I know doesn't know me well at all. I am NOT scary even though I am a ghost. I try my best to be friendly, but I am not at all like my cousin, Casper, twice removed. I was lonely in my small mouse-like home and the thunder and lightening made me want to take a walk. You see ever since I was a baby ghost I have loved thunder, it must have come from my mother's side of the family. My mum was a ghost but my pop's mortal. That is why I don't like to scare people, I guess.

I had been walking for about forty-five minutes down an unfamiliar road when all of a sudden a strange but familiar monument loamed into sight! It was castle Polar, I thought. I had seen pictures my pop had. He had explained to me that if I should ever come across this place that I should run, run far away and try to forget what I had seen. But my curiosity was overpowering me (ghosts don't have very good willpower). I decided that I would only take one quick look inside, then leave. My pop explained to me why I shouldn't go in there, but I can't seem to remember. Oh, yes, now it's coming back to me. My mom had stumbled across this place one night when my pop and I were sleeping. She told herself that she was only going to take one quick look inside. So she walked up and opened the main door to the outer curtain. It was very mysterious, although the place had been deserted for centuries upon centuries there were no cobwebs and it wasn't the least bit spidery. But the most strange of all was that it wasn't the least bit windy inside the castle. A castle that old would certainly have holes in some of the walls. Yet outside the wind was howling and it was thundering and lightening. Another thing that was quite eerie was that there were torches lit inside the castle and they didn't flicker in the least bit when the trees were swaying frantically outside. So my mum went in farther. All of a sudden the grounds of the castle got very misty so that it was impossible to see. That was exactly what Kent Polar, a millionaire mad ghost hunter wanted. He wanted my mum. My mum could feel something evil for the floor above her creeked. Then the floor stopped creeking, but something lurked in the shadows. My mum shivered from a draft, as if someone had opened the outside door. Then Kent Polar grabbed my mum. She screamed, "EEK!" He whispered keep quiet and I shant burn you at the stake. But that was a lie. The very next day he framed my mum's burnt sheet.

I decided to take my pop's advice. For the thought of it makes me shudder. I walked all the way home bawlin' out, 'cause I missed my mum. When I got home I went straight to bed.

The next day when I got up I looked at the calendar, it was October 31, the day my mum was killed. But today was also something else that was very important (ghosts don't have very good memories either). Ah, yes, it's Halloween, the day when mortal kids go "Trick-or-Treating". I know instead of feeling sorry for myself like I do every Halloween, I'll have a Halloween party. I'll invite a whole bunch of kids and I'll have it at castle Polar.

NARRATOR: And that's just what he did. He spent all day decorating the castle with black and orange streamers. Then all of a sudden he came across a plaque of a burnt ghost's sheet.

After the party he cleaned the castle up and then took the plaque home with him. When he got there he took the sheet off and folded it. He then buried it in the ground and said a little prayer.

Every Halloween after that he gave a party for all the kids he knew. He might still be giving parties when you have children.

Girls Soccer

The girls started off the week by pulling out a victory over Whitman/Hanson, 2-1. Whitman/Hanson scored in the first half of a penalty kick and led 1-0 until Jen Coley scored with 15 minutes left in the game. Then with six minutes left in the game Kerri Kirkendall banged in the winning goal for Cohasset. Coach Kenman Startzell was especially pleased with the way in which his team never gave up and hung in the game until the very end.

Startzell cited Cindy Dormer as having a very good game at sweeperback. Jen Coley and Liz O'Leary also turned in good efforts for the Skippers.

Thursday, the girls lost to Abington 3-0. Although this was not the best game Cohasset has played, Startzell was pleased with the individual efforts of Katie Lord and Mary Leonard.

Wednesday, the girls hope to beat a weak East Bridgewater team. Friday, Cohasset faces Scituate in its last game of the season.

This year Cohasset will be represented by four girls on the South Shore league all star team. The girls are Caitlin Staunton, Susan Riley, Katie Lord, and Kerri Kirkendall. The all star game will be held on Saturday at 6 p.m. in Middleboro.

Field Hockey

Tuesday, the girls crushed Hull, 3-0. After getting off to a slow start in the first half, Cohasset picked up in the second half and dominated the entire field.

Maureen Farren picked up a goal for the Skippers off a pass from Debbie Hartley. Cindy Spooner and Sara Bishop had goals and both were assisted by Maureen Farren.

Saturday, the girls lost a tough game to Sandwich, 2-0. Cohasset played very well in the midfield but unfortunately had a few lapses on defense which led to the goals. However, coach Clare Brady was very pleased with the way her team played and was happy to see that they never gave up.

Colby Mantz, Maria Cahill and Julie Bowdoin all played well for the Skippers.

In Cohasset's last week of the regular season the team will face Duxbury on Wednesday, a team which has always been tough for Cohasset to beat. Thursday, the girls play Norwell.

DeSantis pleased with Hull's sewer agreement

Hull's neighbor commissioners were disappointed however, about the condition that a "Phase 1" project concerning a sludge incinerator at the treatment plant be closed out by the federal government and state agencies.

DeSantis explained, the incinerator has not and cannot meet Environmental Protection Agency design criteria, which is a requirement for receiving the federal funds which would pay for 75 percent of the incinerator.

"It's an albatross hanging around their neck," he said. "By the time it was completed in 1978, we had had the fuel crisis and it became particularly expensive to fire the thing off."

He added, "And because the plant is over-built, it has such an excess capacity the sludge density is so low it could never burn."

"They've told us that condition is difficult, if not impossible to fulfill," Brandt said. "I don't understand why they've passed a resolution that holds a self-defeating requirement."

DeSantis said he will ask senator Golden to approach the EPA, explain the situation and get a bureaucrat there to "write this off."

He commented, "I think the Hull sewer commission has done everything it can do to make this thing work. To jump through these remaining hoops is absolutely absurd."

Despite the incinerator problem, DeSantis said he doesn't foresee a possible agreement going up in smoke, but he wants the process to get moving.

"Now that the resolution has passed, we feel the momentum is going toward an intermunicipal agreement," he said.

"We're happy it has passed, but now it's time to get moving."

DeSantis explained, the funding of all sewer projects, including the Hull project, are dependent to a large degree on federal funds.

"The federal funds are committed through this fiscal year and perhaps into fiscal year 1988," he said.

DeSantis added, he doubts much money will be around beyond FY 88, because of the Gramm-Rudman Act.

"It's the Cohasset commission's concern," he said, "that we really can't delay much longer on this project. We're very much aware of the Gramm-Rudman Act and the impact it could have on this project."

Brandt commented, "We applied more than two years ago, asking if they would care to accept any kind of flows from Hingham and we've really never gotten an answer. I really can't determine what this resolution does.

"It's still just in the process of being considered."

SAT score comparison difficult

At the start of last Monday's school committee meeting, member Christopher Ford commented on the great football season being enjoyed by the high school team. He commended the school for the enthusiastic pep rally held last Friday afternoon at the school. According to Ford, the ninth and tenth graders made the most noise during the event.

In a discussion of the Cohasset Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores, guidance director John Leary explained the difficulty comparing Cohasset scores with national averages because a higher percentage of local students take the exam. Even when the national score is higher than Cohasset's, he told the school committee Monday night, that means nothing when considering that 97.3 percent of all local students take the test.

Half that amount complete the SAT examination on a national and statewide level.

The average score of the verbal exam was 466 in Cohasset, and 506 in the Math test. Seventy-two percent of those who completed the SAT also participated in the Achievement test, Leary stated. All Cohasset high school students are encouraged to take the exam.

The SAT measures aptitude developed over the training.

In his presentation to the committee, Dr. Packard emphasized the potential that exists for more creative and technical possibilities with the cable television program, Cohasset High School Video.

Troop 38 Boy Scout news. . .

The Old Mills District towns, (including: Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman) are participating in the bowl-a-rama fundraiser for Scouting.

Cohasset Scouts will be bowling at the Cohasset Community Center beginning Oct. 27 to Nov. 7 on their designated days. The Scouts will be collecting donations or pledges for bowling a total of three strings. The money collected will be divided as follows: 50 percent to the District, 25 percent to Pack 38 and 25 percent for prizes the Scouts choose. The Scouts participating will receive a District patch and pie for their uniform.

The Cub Scout Rodeo was very successful. Forty-two Cub Scouts attended and maneuvered well on the courses with their bikes. Lee Palmeter and John Wilkie of Cohasset Cycle Sports taught the Scouts how to inspect their bike for safety measures. A special thank you to our judges: Matt Silvia, David Farrag, Dan Volugnis, Bernard Hennessy, Debbie Cook, Colleen Roth, Marsha Silvia, Mike McWilliams, Tom Cook, Stan Lacks and Bill Caldwell. Linda Farrag, Jane Long, Kathleen Long and Earle Bestick assisted with the registration.

Congratulations to the Tiger Cubs who participated in last year's program and are now in Cub Scouts. The Tiger Cub graduates are: Nathan Caldwell, Matthew Hennessy, Ken Leahy, Conor Mangan, Chris McKenna, Kevin McKenna, Ryan Sawchuk, Gregory Schulyz, Michael Kasameyer, Sineon Ketchum and David Hansen. The patches they receive can be worn on the right shirt pocket.

Den Chiefs are Boy Scouts, who will assist the Den Leader at their Den Meetings. The Den Leaders should notify Linda Farrag (9519) with the day and time of the meetings to coordinate them with the Scouts.

Parents must encourage and work with their son so he will be able to complete the scout achievements and advance in rank. All the parents are asked to donate approx. one hour of their time to Pack 38. Committees that will be set up in the future are: Dec., Christmas Party; Feb., Blue and Gold Dinner; March, Pinewood Derby Race; April, Olympics.

Scouts should earn their Bobcat Badge by November and their Wolf with arrows or Bear by February.

Scouts will sit with Den Leaders at their assigned table at each Pack Meeting. If there is any problem with discipline, the boy will be warned once by the Den Leader, if that doesn't stop the behavior then the scout will be asked to sit with his parents. Parents are expected to attend all Pack Meetings and other brothers and sisters can attend too.

Cub Uniforms include: a blue Cub Scout shirt, yellow kerchief (blue for Bears, plaid for Webelos), Cub Scout slide, Cub Scout visor hat, patches: Den # 3, 8 US Flag, Old Colony Council Patch. Book; Wolf first yr., Bear 2nd yr. and Webelo 3rd yr. You can purchase Cub pants and belt or wear navy or dark pants. Cub uniforms to be worn at all Den Meetings, Pack Meetings and Scout functions.

Thank you to Janet Trask, who helped organize our Halloween Party and to all the parents who donated all the goodies!

Towns discuss Greenbush commuter rail plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

There remain many questions to be answered and studies to be completed before any decisions are made regarding the proposed restoration of the Greenbush commuter railroad.

The Cohasset League of Women Voters presented a question and answer forum last Thursday night, Oct. 23, at which officials from Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate discussed the pros and cons of rehabilitating the rail line.

A "ballpark" estimate of the project's costs was $200 million, according to a study completed two years ago.

About 25 persons attended the forum at which MBTA consultant Pam Wolfe outlined the alternatives currently under consideration. Those alternatives, she explained, include no plans to build any transportation improvements, a plan to upgrade and improve Red Line service into Boston, commuter rail with an end terminal in Greenbush, commuter rail through service to an intermediate terminal in West Hingham, and commuter rail transfer service operating between the Braintree Red Line station and a commuter rail terminal in West Hingham.

Wolfe explained that night, Oct. 23, the Hingham shipyard is no longer being considered as a terminal site for the Greenbush service. The planning board, and other town officials have cited that property as an "inappropriate land use," according to Wolfe.

As Hingham planning board member Richard Cook noted, "the town has been working for eight years to put the shipyard into a productive use, through encouraging commercial businesses there. We've spent a lot of time and energy to come up with an imaginative zoning concept there. The planning board is concerned that with all the efforts on making that a commercially-oriented center, the railroad would take a significant amount of land and be in competition with the commuter boat."

Wolfe explained that one of the alternatives still under review by the MBTA is improvement of the existing transportation systems such as the commuter boat and the Red Line.

Since the review began early this year, several transportation alternatives have been dropped from consideration by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. The concept of a Hingham shipyard terminal will not be carried further into the environmental analysis now being conducted by the consultants, she said. "Also, the idea of a transfer station will likely be dropped," she added.

Scituate selectman Richard Bowen, who is also a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) studying the proposed Greenbush project, said he remains concerned with the possible environmental and safety impact of the railroad in his community.

He is weighing those issues against the increasing development of Scituate, and the shortage of parking in Boston for South Shore commuters.

Bowen said the rail line in Scituate was originally built upon "marginal" wetlands. In addition, he explained, many more homes abut the rail line where the route does not travel through the precious wetlands.

The currently-congested parking area in North Scituate would have to be considered if a station was located there again. Limited parking would also have to be addressed at the proposed Egypt station site, along with the former Scituate station near the current fire station. Greenbush, site of the proposed terminal for the line, does have adequate property to be used for parking, he added.

"The discussion of the railroad is vital to the economic future of my town," he commented. "The South Shore and Plymouth County are developing very rapidly, so there's a greater demand on our transportation facilities. The southeast expressway can no longer cope with the needs of the South Shore. And once you're in Boston, there's no place to park."

Water transportation is great, he noted, but not for the people of Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield and beyond.

William Grimes of Hingham is also a member of

Referendum Question Part II: Questions V-VIII

Question V: The Mandatory Seat Belt Law

Question V represents the use of the referendum at its best. Last year Gov. Dukakis signed legislation mandating the use of seat belts by front seat passengers on the highways of the Commonwealth. An interesting combination of libertarians, populist conservatives, and a few liberals such as Gerry Williams of Marshfield and WRKO, objects to the new law and has collected the signatures necessary to put the question to the people.

Emotionally I'm with the libertarians, folks who eschew government in nearly all its forms—an eschewing that makes them "conservative" on issues such as rent control and "liberal" on issues such as the legalization of marijuana. Libertarians see most well-meaning encroachments of government as having evil long-term consequences for liberty. I think they are sometimes right.

But not this one, for there are too many people (my publisher is one) who never used to buckle up who now do and require their children to. The way I see it, then, the seatbelt, which some of us are now using for the first time on account of Mike Dukakis' rather small intrusion into our lives, will only have to save one of our lives once to justify the intrusion. Does more need to be said?

Only to observe that on this issue it seems to me that the libertarians are running their philosophy into the ground in much the same way liberals did theirs beginning about 20 years ago. It was liberals, not conservatives, who really brought about the Reagan presidency, and the reason liberals got into trouble was not that their motives were ignoble or their methods inhumane. It was that they didn't know when to quit. Under their stewardship civil rights evolved into "affirmative action," the war on poverty degenerated into an obese bureaucracy, and the ardent pursuit of the ideal of peace turned into a defeatist foreign policy that served the interests of many nations, none of them the U.S.A.

Liberalism will return in chastened form, and what will hasten its return are libertarians who carry forth their philosophy even unto death—which is precisely what they are doing on the seatbelt issue.

Question VI: Voter Registration By Mail

The argument for registering by mail is that such a system will increase registration and therefore voting and will therefore widen our democracy. The chief argument against it is that it will increase the probability of fraud. Many Republicans and conservatives fear that it will increase the predominance of Democrats and liberals in Massachusetts.

I oppose the question on two grounds. The first is fraud. A system that increases the possibility of fraud, even if it does not increase the fact, undermines the credibility of our elections. But that "fact" of fraud cannot be lightly dismissed. Here on the South Shore folks mainly play by the rules; but in Boston, where I vote, there have been numerous instances of fraudulent voting in local elections.

When I ran for state representative in Jamaica Plain a few years ago people would jokingly warn me about my opponent's strength in Forest Hills Cemetery. That, as it turned out, wasn't the problem. The problem was nursing home patients who took exception to my candidacy by a ratio of better than 99-to-1. Oddly, the young progressive who now holds that seat favors mail-in registration. He doesn't seem to appreciate that with mail-in registration he might never have gotten elected.

The second reason I oppose mail-in registration concerns the balance between rights and responsibilities in our society. If the able-bodied citizen isn't willing to take the small action of visiting his town or city hall one time in order to register, is he going to be a responsible voter? Do we want to teach our people that it isn't necessary to so much as turn off the V.C.R. to receive all the benefits of citizenship courtesy of the government?

Sadly, voter registration by mail has become one of those ideological "litmus tests" the doctrinaire—in this case doctrinaire liberals—sometimes impose on their flocks. In this case, if you so much as admit to doubts about the wisdom of Question VI, you are considered "off the reservation" and your temerity is likely to expunge you from certain mailing lists and correct cocktail parties.

But the truth is the liberals are behaving entirely schizophrenically this year. On the one hand they would establish a loosey-goosey voter registration system. On the other hand, in response to the alleged fraud in Republican gubernatorial candidate Greg Hyatt's nomination papers, they want to vest a new state agency to police the nominating process. In short, they are leading us in two directions at once.

Question VII: National Health Program

Question VII would exhort the state to exhort the U.S. Congress to enact a Federally-funded national health program. As a ballot question it is a public opinion sampler that was put on the ballot by the legislature, and it reflects concern about rising medical costs and the concomitant inequities in the availability of medical care.

These are serious matters, ones that need to be dealt with both in the political arena and in this space. The best way to deal with them in the space I have here is to quote the full text of the Question:

"Shall the Commonwealth of Massachusetts urge the United States to enact a national health program which: provides high quality comprehensive personal health care including preventative, curative and occupational health services; is universal in coverage, community controlled, rationally organized, equitably financed, with no out-of-pocket charges, is sensitive to the particular health needs of all, and is efficient in containing its cost; and whose yearly expenditure does not exceed the proportion of the Gross National Produce spent on health care in the immediately preceding fiscal year?"

Did you follow that? It seems to me it is as if I were to ask: "As a single person would I like to meet a lady tonight who looks like Mrs. John McNamara, is an heiress to the fortune cookie fortune, is great in bed, wants seven children, has a neat career, favors commuter rail, knows how to humor my relatives, and will retain the fullness of her pulchritude unto the age of 125?"

I would indeed. But I do not intend to ask my government, which is over $200 billion per annum in the hole to the future of America, to grant me that particular fantasy. Nor do I intend to vote "yes" on Question VII.

Question VIII: National Acid Rain Control Program

Here we have another chance to exhort the Commonwealth to exhort these United States—in this case exhort them to reduce sulphur dioxide emissions by 50% during the next eight years. If you want to register a protest over the Reagan Administration's unwillingness to do more than study the acid rain problem, you will probably want to vote "yes." But if you want to vote for something sensible as actual policy you will probably vote "no," for not even Canada, which is the chief beneficiary of our acid maleficence, is asking us to move that precipitously.

Another factor to program into your cranial computer as you ponder this vote is your position on nuclear power. If you are fond of nuclear power you will want to support this proposal, for curbing acid rain, which almost certainly comes mainly from coal fired generating plants in the Ohio Valley, would breathe new life into the moribund nuclear power industry.

The real problem with Question VIII is that this sort of grave environmental problem does not devolve easily into questions that can be understood by simple fanaticism such as that by which you and I urged those fine boys in Red Sox to trample on their late opponents. We all have an urge to look at political questions that way, i.e. as the good guys against the bad guys; but far better that we leave our competitive strivings in the sports arena and understand political questions for their real complexity.

On acid rain, President Reagan is correct that no conclusive trail of cause and effect has yet been identified. But he is probably wrong in concluding that no immediate action beyond research is required. But a 50 percent reduction over eight years would not only require massive amounts of new nuclear power, it would further batter the economy of the heartland of America. Even as a "protest" that's not something I can vote for.

(End of Series.)

Vote 'no' on Question I — abortion decision

Letters

To the editor:

Question No. 1 has many points for debate, but sometimes it is best to honestly answer, privately, some basic questions: "If a woman knows that she is unable to adequately parent a child, why would anyone else have a stake in that woman's having a child?"

"Even if we as a society had established many supports for mothers and children who need such supports, do we have a right to insist that childbearing take place?"

Not everyone who will vote on Question No. 1 is a parent, but there is enough universal understanding of how much care a child needs and how much is required of parents even in ideal circumstances.

Also, not everyone has had the opportunity to work with neglected, non-thriving or abused children.

But people shouldn't need first-hand knowledge of these things to realize that there is nothing so helpless as an infant and nothing so hapless as an unwanted one.

Where some people get the idea that women are having abortions frequently and frivolously is a real mystery. It is a serious and poignant decision made in the best interests of those most closely involved. If a pregnant woman of any age or circumstance says in words or by action: "I cannot care for a child, and I wish to terminate this pregnancy," should any sound-thinking person vote to take away that woman's ability to make that decision? I think not, and that is why we are voting NO on Question No. 1.

Senator enjoys rail stories

To the editor:

Thank you for David A. Mittell Jr's series of articles on commuter rail. I found the content of each article thoughtful and provocative.

The articles themselves as well as the ideas and proposals which they set forth provided a timely stimulus to public debate on the issue of restoration.

Without a doubt our objective should be the "best darn commuter railroad in the world."

I hope it will be — and I will do my best to work toward that end.

I intend to discuss several of your proposals with the Governor and the Secretary of Transportation.

Sincerely,
State Sen. Bill Golden

A Stone's Throw — by Paul Steven Stone

A new breed of politician

Dear Paul Steven:

I know you usually get letters from teenagers about this sort of thing, but even for a man in his 70's like myself, the question of what's permissible on a first date is no minor issue.

I recently returned from a long weekend in the north where I spent a considerable amount of time with a foreign gentleman. This was no casual assignation; we'd been arranging this affair for some time and, understandably, had both expected to go much further on this date than either of us had ever gone before.

To be truthful and blunt, our affair never reached a climax. After two days of the most flirtatious conduct on both our sides, we ultimately held back from consummating our relationship, and thus parted as frustrated and embittered strangers.

Now, I find friends condemning me for my apparent modesty in refusing to go "all the way." I try to tell them the reticence was not mine alone, and that my partner exhibited the same awkward timidity towards doing "it," but no one believes me.

On the other hand, I feel a certain amount of pride for refusing to abandon myself totally to the desire of a fleeting moment, and feel that others could learn by my example. What do you think? Should I have gone "all the way" as some suggest, or held my favors in reserve, with the idea of having much more to give to some future partner who will cherish the treasures I have thus kept intact?

Yours in modesty,
Ronald R.
Washington, D.C.

Dear Ronald,

I have referred your letter to Dr. Ruth Westheimer who has done extensive work on sexual inhibitions among the aged. Wishing you more success in future affairs, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
Paul Steven Stone

'Billy Bishop' — something different at Nickerson

By Judith Montminy
Special to the Mariner

Theatre Review

The audiences are loving it. Standing ovations are being given to "Billy Bishop Goes To War," a musical play that is different than the customary, middle-of-the-road, American classics usually presented at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell.

Even though there are twenty or so characters in the play, there are only two people on stage—Vincent Trovato as the narrator-pianist and Peter Haydu as Billy Bishop and the host of personalities Billy meets.

In less able hands, the show could be a two and one half hour bore. But Mr. Haydu and director Niels Miller have found the endearing core that makes real-life World War I flying act William Avery Bishop "Everyman" in the war that was supposed to end all wars.

Even though King George V awarded him the Victoria Cross (the highest military decoration for gallantry), and the Distinguished Service Order and bar, Billy is really an ordinary bloke with a penchant for getting into tight spots.

The show, written and composed by John Gay in collaboration with Eric Peterson, centers on the coming of age of the man who grew from a smart aleck, irreverent Canadian to the most decorated Allied pilot in World War I. He shot down 72 German aircraft in over one year.

The play opens when Bishop is about to go to war in 1915, the lesser of two evils when he faces expulsion from the Royal Military College in Canada. Mr. Trovato and Mr. Haydu offer a strong and harmonic presentation of the lyrics. The echo of war's arbitrary and ruthless damage is simplistic and reminiscent of songs one might have sung during more innocent times. Yet as Billy matures, so does the musical score.

The "Song of Survival," when Mr. Haydu impersonates a French chanteuse, is particularly well done. It's message about the frustrations and futility of war are slightly more subtle than some of Billy's direct remarks to the audience ("I guess in wars, it's always the innocent bystanders who get the worst of it"). But the adequate musical score is not the strength of the play; the characterizations are.

"Billy Bishop Goes To War" takes some time to crank up, but once it does, it's off and flying. After the drudgery of Bishop's stint with the muddy Cavalry, he makes the proper connections in British society ("Life goes a lot smoother when you've got influence") and he soon finds himself a member of the elite Royal Flying Corps.

The reenactments and descriptions of the test flights and airborne missions behind enemy lines capture the audience's imagination. With very few props and only a piano to accompany him, Mr. Haydu brings Billy Bishop to life.

"Billy Bishop Goes To War" was first produced in Vancouver, Canada in 1978; it was produced in New York by Mike Nichols. The creators maintain the play is neither for nor against war, but is dedicated to "all those who didn't come back, and all those who did and wondered why. "Billy himself takes an amoral stance at first, then buys into the whole war effort—until he watches a German pilot fall to his death. Suddenly, the enemy has a face.

In the final scene, when Billy is married and has become a member of the British Air Ministry, he proudly sends his son off to fight in World War II.

Although the conclusion one draws probably can fit any political persuasion, "wondering why" is hard to escape. "Billy Bishop Goes To War" leaves the audience with more than memories of a night at the theatre. And that's something different.

"Billy Bishop Goes To War" continues at the Nickerson Theatre (Accord Park, Norwell) through Nov. 22.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Preparing for All-Hallow-Eve festivities

All-Hallow-Eve descends with the setting of the sun on this Friday and one of my old scrapbooks tells of how twilight used to be the signal for harvest frolics.

That's when our grandparents had candy pulls, huskings, melon meets and nutting parties. It seems it all began with the Druids who had huge bon-fires on hilltops in honor of the sun which they worshipped. "Nut Shakers" then danced around the trees to ward off evil spirits and harvest the acorns, chestnuts, or whatever.

I can't imagine what a melon meet might be, much less a husking party, but taffy pulls were great fun in our day.

Just about the most daring we could get was to stick a pin in a neighbor's doorbell and run to hide; not a very wild scene compared to today's trick or treating.

Now we ward off evil spirits in the form of little goblins who come to the door with huge bags overflowing with their loot, by offering treats such as a slice of Patty Stanley's

PUMPKIN CHOCOLATE CHIP CAKE

1 c. light brown sugar
2 eggs
1/2 c. each vegetable oil, milk
2 T vanilla extract
1 c. pumpkin puree
1 1/2/ tsp. baking powder
2 c. all-purpose flour
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1 c. semisweet chocolate bits

Preheat oven to 350° and grease a 9x5" loaf pan. In large bowl, beat together first six ingredients. Sift in flour and baking powder and blend thoroughly. Fold in chocolate bits and pour into prepared pan. Bake 55 min., or until skewer inserted in center comes out clean. Remove from oven and leave cake in pan on wire rack for 10 min. Remove cake from pan and cool. Yield: 12 to 15 slices.

* * *

As a girl, it was the scariest, wierdest, horriblest, funniest evilist night of our young lives. Waiting to light the Jack-o'-lantern's flickering candle at twilight until we could finally sally forth in our masks and spooky costumes, seemed to take forever. The streets in our neighborhood came alive with ghosts popping out from behind the trees, the smokey tang of backyard bonfires and cider and donuts, together with apples we had "bobbed" for. Ours to munch on while we wandered through the night. Those of us who have retained our sweet tooth down through the years enjoy chocolate in any shape or form. This recipe is from a friend who modestly asks to remain nameless, so I can only tell you that those of us who devoured them the other day loved

M & M's COOKIES

1 can condensed milk
2 pkgs. (14 oz.) coconut
4 unsweetened squares of chocolate, melted
Ground nuts and vanilla (optional)

Line cookie sheet with greased aluminum foil. Drop by tsp. or mold by hand to shape of a small ball. Set an inch apart on sheet. Bake at 350° for 10 min., but watch closely, for they burn easily. Remove from sheet immediately. Makes between 5 and 6 dozen.

These many years later, we can all conjure up memories of Halloweens past. One grandmotherly type tells of parties where they would peel an apple, "wish a wish" and throw the peel backward over the left shoulder. The initial it formed begins the name of one's future mate. Corn popping, molasses boiling and chestnut roasting were the highlights of the school-days' parties. Judith Welch has more practical ideas as to what to do with apples for trick-or-treat treasures. She suggests these no-bake, energy-saving, easy-to-make

HONEY-CANDIED APPLES

1/2 c. honey per apple
Ground walnuts
Sticks

Pour honey into mixing bowl. Spread ground nuts on flat plate. Insert sticks into apples. Dip each apple in honey, making sure honey covers every part of it. Hold over bowl to catch excess drips. Roll apple in ground nuts to cover. Place on plate and refrigerate until ready to serve.

Speaking of goblins and such, we'll blame them for the error in the recipe for Spinach Calzone which Esther Iannone so graciously shared with us. When I was writing about their delightful store in Scituate Harbor, the baking time for her recipe should have read 35 min., not 55.

THE DRAGON'S DUNGEON — By CLAIRE McDONOUGH

Sign of the upcoming electoral times

"Why," Skip asked, "do I have to rise before the sun does? It isn't fair."

I handed him a political sign and shamelessly plagarized Ring Lardner. "Shut up and wave," I explained.

Breida was more patient. "Because all it takes for evil to triumph is for good people to do nothing. And because it's your civic responsibility to work for the candidates you think will most benefit the community. And because now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party. And because if you don't, Ma will kill you."

Skip groaned. "By my calculations, standing at Greenbush Circle at 6:30 in the morning, holding a sign for some candidate who doesn't even know my name is no party. And anyway, I didn't think we belonged to any organized political party. I thought we were Democrats."

"Very funny," I told him. "And it was even funnier when Will Rogers said it.

The Dragon adroitly dodged a car that intruded his space, speeding a little to close to the curb. "Your sister's right," he told Skip. "There are countries in this world where people express their political opinions through acts of violence, like going underground and blowing up bridges. Here in the United States we have free elections.

"We settle our differences quietly and sanely through the exercise of our franchise. And we do things like taking out ads in the newspaper, and holding signs, and putting bumper stickers on our cars so that we can present our case to others in a rational, friendly manner, always respecting their right to express their differing opinions, erroneous though they may be.

"Same to you, fella," he shouted at a passing driver who may have been expressing a differing opinion, or may merely have been scratching his nose. With his thumb.

Pat waved at a car driven by an attractive young lady who smiled back at him. "Why do you let people like that bother you?" he asked his father.

"Because he called me a jackass," the Dragon replied. "Now I'll probably get letters from the Jackass lobby asking for a donation."

"Most likely he was only referring to your party's symbol," I said soothingly. "And anyway, according to the Talmud 'If any man says to thee Thou art a donkey, pay no heed. If two say thus, purchase a saddle.'

"The way I see it you don't have to invest in leather yet."

"Thanks for the vote of confidence," the Dragon said dryly. "Politics sure make bedfellows strange."

"You still haven't answered my question," Skip protested. "What are we doing here? Is it true that in politics the paths of glory lead but to the gravy? Is posterity going to be grateful because I stood out in the cold and held signs? And what has posterity ever done for me?"

Breida pondered for a minute. "You can always remember what President Reagan said about politics. 'If you succeed there are many rewards. If you disgrace yourself you can always write a book.'

"That is," she added thoughtfully, "if you're literate."

The Dragon consulted his watch, then broke into a radiant smile.

"Eight o'clock," he announced. "Time to get going."

He gathered up the signs and put them in his car.

"Five more minutes," he said with fervent relief, "and I might have had to buy a saddle. I think after this election I'll remember what Mark Twain said. 'In our country we have those three precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practice either of them."

I patted his hand and smiled. "That," I reminded him, "is what you said after the last election.

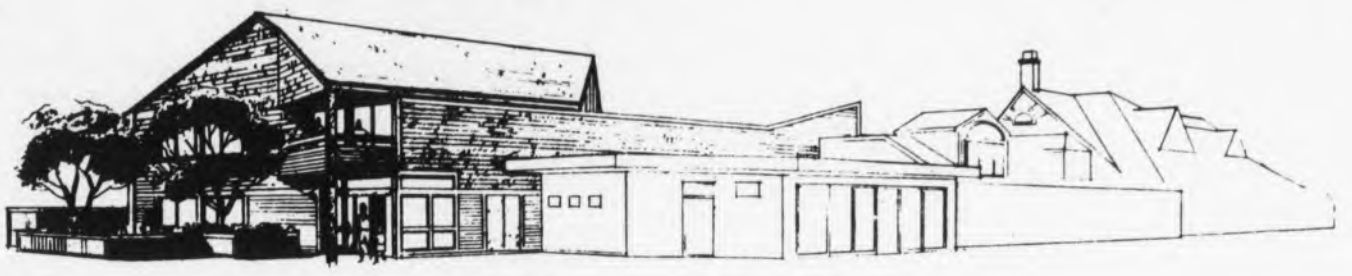
So. Shore Art Center to break ground on new building

The South Shore Art Center will hold a groundbreaking ceremony for its new building Sunday, Nov. 2 at 3:30 p.m. at the site of the expanded center — 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

The $1 million building, designed by Hingham architect Vcevold Strekalovsky and constructed by Travi Construction of Norwell, will be completed by the spring of 1987.

State Senator Bill Golden, Representative Mary Jeannette Murray, other dignitaries, representatives of area art organizations and friends will join the Center's members and directors for the celebration marking the beginning of a new era in art and culture on the South Shore.



A Capital Fund Drive launched this summer to finance the new center has raised $513,000 of the needed $950,000 for the two-and-a-half story, 8,000 square foot art center.

The completed renovation and expansion of the former Tantillo Auto Body Shop will house four large studio-classrooms, a central two-story gallery space, a gallery-members room for community functions, an expanded gift shop, more storage space and improved administrative offices.

A doubling of the Art Center's existing space will allow it to continue functioning as a facility for artistic expression and a center for diverse activity for the 20 rapidly growing South Shore communities it serves. In the center's 31 years of operation it has given many artists a chance to begin successful careers and has provided a means to sharpen long-unused skills.

The center offers an opportunity for artists to display their work in carefully mounted shows, both at the center and other locations including the Federal Reserve Bank and Symphony Hall in Boston.

Each year new satellite programs reach out to more residents and businesses in other South Shore towns. A tripling of the number of participants in the center's programs has necessitated a move to larger quarters.

A supportive partnership of individuals, businesses, foundations and organizations is leading the way for a successful capital campaign and forms the foundation for the new South Shore Art Center's place in the economic and cultural life of the South Shore.

Refreshments and entertainment will mark the groundbreaking ceremony.

Mariner Newspapers expands with Kingston purchase

What began as a single weekly newspaper in 1972 has blossomed into a newspaper group of 12 weeklies with the same goal: providing honest, accurate and in-depth local news.

The (Kingston) Independent Voice becomes part of the Mariner family as of November 5. The 10-year-old paper extends the southern reach of the Mariners and abuts its Pembroke weekly.

"We have built our publishing company on the strength of our news coverage and reader-oriented approach," said David S. Cutler, owner/publisher. "The Kingston Independent Voice complements this tradition. It is a fine weekly which reflects the growth of its community."

The Mariner Newspapers group now stretches from Randolph to Kingston with its weekly newspapers amid covers the entire South Shore with its monthly Business Journal.

The Mariner group began with the Marshfield Mariner in 1972. The Norwell Mariner was added in 1974, followed by the Scituate and Cohasset Mariners in 1978. The Hingham Mariner made its debut in 1980, followed by the Hanover Mariner in 1982 and the Pembroke Mariner in 1983. The Braintree Forum and Weymouth News were acquired in 1984 and the Randolph Mariner was launched in 1985. The South Shore Business Journal published its first issue in September 1985. Most recently, the Holbrook Sun was purchased in August of 1986. And now the Kingston Independent Voice has been added.

A staff of 120 are bursting the seams of the Mariner's Marshfield headquarters, a white colonial antique with attached barn at 58 Main Street (Route 3A). The building, once used as a boarding house, now serves as home to the Business Journal and seven of the 12 Mariners.

Mariners also have a small office in Hingham Center, and a north office headquarters for the Braintree Forum, Weymouth News, Randolph Mariner and Holbrook Sun, located at 720 Union Street, Braintree, just up from Weymouth Landing. The present office of The Independent Voice in Kingston Center will be retained.

Commentary

Are political leaders stupid who believe that in a democracy the sovereignty lies in the people?

Are political scientists stupid who believe that dictators like Stalin or Hitler or Mussolini—or lesser political leaders with the same Messiah complex—are anathema in a free society?

Can you think of any community in the United States that will tolerate tinpot Napoleons for very long?

Here are statements made by two political leaders. The first is by Robespierre, one of the leaders of the French Revolution, which historians have called the greatest revolution in history:

"There go the people- I must follow them because I am their leader."

The second statement is by Thomas Barry, a selectman in Duxbury, referring to the petition circulated by the Duxbury Police Department:

"I don't care if you have 50,000 signatures; it wouldn't matter to me."

School committee conference Oct. 29

Commissioner Harold Raynolds; Dr. Robert Brooks of McLean Hospital; Dr. Margaret McKenna, president of Lesley College; and Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers will address participants at the 22nd annual joint conference of the State Association of School Committees and School Superintendents at Dunfey Hyannis Hotel on Cape Cod.

Over 1000 school committee members, superintendents, and other educators are expected to attend the three-day conference, October 29-November 1.

Panels, workshops, and special interest clinics will focus on goal setting, vocational education, coping with AIDS in schools, health clinics in high schools, children's learning styles, and many other topics.
